French Woman's Labor Problem Looms Large

Equal Wages and Equal Treatment for Women and Men of the French Nation.

"America has social and industrial problems, but they cannot be compared with those which France is facing today," says Miss Emma Chapin of New York City, Y. W. C. A. industrial secretary in France.

"Before the war women sewed in their own homes instead of in a big shop. Much of the silk woven in France was not made in great mills, as in the United States, but in homes where the looms have been handed down from generation to generation.

Lakewood Salad.
Remove pulp from two grapefruits in sections. Skin and seed three-fourths cup white grapes, cut one-third cup pecan nut meats in pieces. Arrange on bed of romaine, pour over dressing and garnish with strip of red pepper.

For the dressing mix four tablespoons olive oil, one tablespoon grapefruit juice, one-half tablespoon vinegar, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, one-eighth teaspoon pepper and one tablespoon finely chopped Roquefort cheese.

Spring fabrics show indications toward conservatism. There is noticeable lightness of weight in many of the materials, especially in the wools. Finest French serges will form the early street frocks for the best dressed women.

Disguised Feathers

Beautiful plumage comes from barnyard fowls; in fact, most of the plumage used is obtained in this way and is cleverly camouflaged to conceal its origin.

First, clean the feathers well where they have been severed from the body, removing all foreign substances with soft, tepid water. The length of time required for cleaning depends upon the condition of the pelts, as it may be necessary to soak the ends of the feathers in the water a couple of hours or more.

Always remember that benzine is highly inflammable and must not be used near a fire or open light of any kind.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Love Comes Unbidden and, "To Love or Not We Are No More Free Than the Ripple to Rise and Leave the Sea."

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
Crazy at Thirty-seven
Dear Miss Fairfax: Having been reading your columns I come to ask you for advice.

I am a young man of 37 and am in love with two sweet looking sisters, 15 and 17, and they seem to pay much attention to me when I am with them. They tell me I look like a spring chicken and this is what I come to ask you which one shall I love or shall I continue to go with both of them or not.

Electric Needle.
Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: Will you please inform me in these columns of Lovelorn where one will go to have electric needle used to take out superfluous hair from one's face and neck? Yours truly,
A READER OF OMAHA BEE.

Missed Her Soldier.
Dear Miss Fairfax: I have been corresponding with a soldier who I have never seen, and he desired to visit me. He was supposed to arrive on a certain train and I was there to meet him, but either failed to recognize him or he didn't come. I wrote and apologized for missing him, but have received no reply.

Interested Me.
Some day I shall become real peevish and refuse to publish letters without signatures attached for my information—not for publication.

A Nice Little Girl.
Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I always like to read your "Advice to Lovelorn."

BLACK EYES.
You are a nice little girl and have the right idea. Personally, I see no sin in dancing. The vulgar persons have made a sin out of what should be art.

Divided Love.
Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: We are two young girls. We read your advice every day and take great interest in it.

What the Public Should Know About the Packing Industry

THE business of collecting, preparing and distributing foods so relates to the daily life of all that it has close, personal interest for everybody. Sensation seekers have long realized this and capitalized on it. An attack on the packers could always be relied upon either to draw notice to its instigator or divert too close investigation of some other question.

Possibly we, are partially to blame for the lack of understanding which exists in regard to our business. In the past, knowing that attacks upon us have been based on tissues of half-truths, adroitly handled innuendo and misinformation, we may have forgotten that the public were not in full possession of the true facts.

Armour and Company have always courted proper inquiry into methods and operations. And, in the past few years, because of so many ex-parte hearings, we have voluntarily put our case before the public. Through publication advertising, we have met the misleading headlines through which people get impressions, headlines frequently controverted by the text matter under them.

Confident that fair-minded people will respond to complete knowledge, we seek better understanding with them. Through newspapers, booklets, moving pictures of our processes and other similar methods, we are explaining the place Armour and Company occupy in the world of human needs and the manner in which they fulfill their function.

We are putting our case squarely up to all parties who are interested—to producer, merchant, consumer and labor—and that each may realize how our obligations to him must combine with our responsibilities to the other involved, we let all know the entire story as we tell it to the rest. We tell consumers what we say to producers—producers what we say to consumers.

When all is said, however, the size of any business dealing competitively in staples must remain the best evidence of its economic soundness. If our methods were not sound, Armour and Company could not have attained size in proportion to national needs.

Bearing this thought in mind, you will readily appreciate that your own self-interest and your right to fullest value for your money, both urge that you always ask your dealer for Armour Products.
