

UNEARTH BIG LIQUOR CACHE NEAR STATE LINE

Hand of Federal Authorities Seen in St. Joe-Omaha Bootlegging Crusade Developments.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)
St. Joseph, Mo., March 28.—The intense excitement prevailing here over the indictment of William Bub and Marvin Kirkman, former county judges, on charges accepting bribes from Winthrop saloon keepers, was intensified today, as the real ramifications of the St. Joseph-Omaha whisky runners' ring came to light. While there was no official confirmation today of reports that the indictments were in fact the first step in a determined effort to smash the bootleggers' clique, the real significance of the grand jury's action was quickly apparent to all observers who have their ear to the ground.

Government Lends Aid.

There are persistent rumors that certain government officers, including Nebraska and Iowa officials, have located at an outpost of the whisky ring in the northwest corner of Atchison county, Missouri, and that a farm on the Nebraska-Iowa-Missouri border harbors a cache of liquor estimated at worth at least a half million dollars. The "proprietor" of this wholesale dispensary is understood to be a professional man of Atchison county who long since retired from his practice to devote all his time to the more lucrative business. He has substations at two other points along the Missouri river, one along the Kansas line. The men who carry the "wet" goods from St. Joseph and Winthrop to his Atchison county rendezvous get $220 a trip. It is understood that he has automobiles in constant operation to meet the demands of the droth county.

Trust in Omaha.

While many of the hundreds of motor parties who cross the Nebraska and Iowa line to this rendezvous every night are only individuals trying to replenish only their private stocks, it is certain that most of the outfit finds its way to an established bootleggers' trust in Omaha. The authorities are busy now searching out the ring's headquarters in the Nebraska metropolis. How far they have succeeded is not definitely known here, but when one questions the government officials on what they have found out there is a very merry twinkle in their eyes. It is a common guess that "highlugs" in other towns other than St. Joseph will soon be called upon to explain the protection which the bootleggers seem to be finding so convenient and comfortable.

Two Go-Beetweens.

One important feature of the indictments brought to light is that the two go-beetweens, who are alleged to have carried the money between Winthrop dram shop keepers and the two county judges, Frank Bub, brother of the indicted judge, was indicted along with the recipients of the alleged hush money, while the other member, Herman Teschner, a former Omaha saloon man, and who apparently knows all the inside workings of the secret liquor trust, saved himself by turning state's evidence. According to evidence said to have been introduced before the grand jury, the bribe amounted to $2,300, but only four of the 12 Winthrop saloonists were heard, and it is charged that the actual bribe was much more.

Would Abolish Parole Board.

The committee on departmental affairs of the Iowa senate instituted another departure at the state house today when it introduced a bill to abolish the state board of parole and combine its work with that of the state board of control. The bill is expected to come up for consideration on the floor of the senate within a short time. The bill would transfer the secretary of the parole board office to the office of the state board of control at the same salary he is now receiving, and he would continue his work much the same as at present, except it would be under the direction of the board of control. A force of clerical assistants to do the parole board office work is also authorized in the bill. Once each month the board of control would sit as a board of parole to consider applications and other matters in connection with the paroling of prisoners. The control board is given power to establish rules and regulations under which it may allow prisoners to go on parole.

License Engineers.

Engineers and land surveyors in Iowa must pass an examination under a state commission to obtain a license before they can engage in their profession under the Buser bill, passed by the Iowa senate last Wednesday. The bill is yet to be passed by the house. The commission would have five members appointed by the governor. The members of the commission must be of at least 10 years' experience in their profession. Senator Buser explained that the purpose of the measure was to create an engineering standard in Iowa and to prevent inefficient or inexperienced men from undertaking responsible construction work. Senator Buser, in opposing the bill, declared that unless the state engineering schools were granted phony diplomas he could see no necessity for such a measure. As a matter of fact, he said, the men who finish the courses at the state engineering schools and obtain diplomas are high-class men, the bill was carried by a vote of 28 to 16 with six absent or not voting.

Three insurance bills were introduced in the senate today by the senate committee on insurance. One authorizes group insurance whereby employers may insure employees. Another specifies who may be the beneficiaries of a fraternal insurance policy. The third authorizes fraternal beneficiary societies to issue death certificates.

"CARMEN" GIVEN WITH VERVE AND CHARMS ANEW

Performance of Popular Opera by San Carlo Company Frequently Interrupted by Applause.

B. HENRIETTA M. REES.
"Carmen," by Bizet, was the Friday night attraction at the Boyd theater when the San Carlo opera company again presented a versatile cast in the popular and vital production. "Carmen" is one of the most popular operas ever written and it was gratifying to note that a much larger audience was present than there was on Wednesday or Thursday evening.

The story of "Carmen," the wicked and beautiful gypsy, who lured Don Jose, a soldier, to desert and follow her, and who, when she shows preference for Escamillo the toreador, eventually kills him, is a story that is almost common property.

The music, with its beauty of melody and characteristic Spanish flavor, its favorite arias, the "Habanera," the "Toreador" song, and the chorus of gypsy girls, the gypsy quintet, etc., charmed anew. Many times the action was interrupted by applause.

Roles Well Taken.
Stella Demette portrayed the part of Carmen with dramatic and vocal skill. Her Carmen is more the thoughtless, prankish Carmen than the wicked, pantherlike type. Her voice is a splendid contralto, and she is a valuable member of the company.

Romeo Bosacchi as Don Jose, had a distinct triumph. His splendid tenor is displayed to excellent advantage in this role, and he is possessed of more than ordinary dramatic ability. He plays the role with an intensity and realism which vividly portrays the character and the insane jealousy of Don Jose.

DO NOT NOTICE SPEED FLYING IN BIG AIRSHIP

Passenger on Dirigible Traveling Sixty Miles Hour Unable to Tell Rate of Progress.

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE, (Universal Service Staff Correspondent.)
London, March 28.—Universal Service was able to secure an interview with Capt. Lancer Rush Brooke, royal air force, who flew as a passenger aboard the giant R-33, Britain's greatest dirigible, when it made its three-hour trial trip from the Selby hangar in Yorkshire.

Built by Armstrong, Whitworth & Co., for use of the British admiralty, the giantess of the air was designed originally for war work. Her armament was to include machine guns and rapid firers and from her gondolas four bombs of 580 pounds each and eight of 250 pounds were designed to be dropped upon the enemy.

Were the R-33 to settle down on Broadway, the great skyliner would more than fill the street and stretch for three blocks. Her length is 670 feet and at her greatest diameter the huge girth of the rigid gas bag is 79 feet. Four gondolas, one forward and one aft in line and two abreast amidships, swing under the gas bag and five engines capable of developing 250 horsepower drive the huge craft at a maximum speed of 70 miles an hour.

The amidships engines in the twin power cars were already running at low speed when I clambered into the control gondola under the bow of the airship. Capt. Rush Brooke began the story of his experiences. "Then Major Thomas, the commander, signalled to the ground officer that all were aboard and ready.

"At the blast of a bugle all hands let go and the vessel rose slowly from the ground. Imperceptibly the men on the ground grew smaller and shorter. The sudden clang of a bell twice repeated aroused me from the first dazed sensation of flight and almost immediately a muffled drone behind me announced the starting of the engine in the compartment adjoining the control cabin in which I stood.

"Looking out from one of the windows along the vast fish-form hull of the ship I saw a cascade of water ballast pour out from an aperture in the keel, followed in a moment by another towards the stern.

"We were now well clear of the ground and rapidly climbing with upturned bows. The airship was remarkably steady, however, and but for the dimming size of objects on the ground passing slowly a thousand feet below, one was scarcely conscious of motion.

"My surroundings now claimed attention. The helmsman and height coxswain at the rudder and the elevator wheels were intent on their duties.

"As occasion permitted, the captain explained to me the uses of each of the numerous clocks and control boards; the bubble statorope, which is sensitive to the slightest rise or fall; the aneroid height recorder, gas thermometer, gas valve controls, the controls for the water ballast, discharge and trail rope release. The engine room telegraphs were operated by turning an indicator handle on a dial marked with the necessary commands, one communicating with each engine. In addition the captain could talk either by telephone or voice pipe to every station of the crew of the ship.

The embargo on war material, gold, silver, and securities, will be maintained, but Germany may export such products as coal, dyestuffs, various iron and steel manufactures, sugar, window glass, electrical machinery and other articles. The other third may be exported as Germany may see fit.

"The air speed indicator, to my surprise, was registering 52 knots—60 miles per hour. One has no sensation of speed in these huge vessels. We were traveling at considerably more than the velocity of an express train without the slightest sense of speed and none of the clamorous shriek of engines and wires that is so noticeable when flying in an aeroplane.

"Presently the captain invited me to take a walk through the corridor in the hull of the ship to the rearward engine cars. The keel corridor is like a tunnel with the sectional shape of an inverted V, the gas bags when full reaching down on either side.

"Walking down the center gangway one passes a long row of petrol tanks and water ballast bags on either hand. Some of these petrol tanks are suspended from quick release hooks so that on pulling a lever they, if necessary, be jettisoned as ballast.

"Further along down the corridor we came to the quarters for the crew while off duty. No doubt the bunks are appreciated on a long flight. My guide informed me the ship could cruise for 100 hours if necessary.
