Use Coconut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulified coconut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair. Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage. You can get mulified coconut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—Adv.

FILIPINO BODY IN OMAHA ON WAY TO WASHINGTON

Mission from Philippine Islands Passes Through Here En- route to Capital for Gov- ernment Conference.

"The Philippine islands are not seeking independence at this time and their inhabitants have no desire to set up an independent government, but we are anxious for closer industrial and economical relations with the United States. With this idea in view, we are on our way to Washington for a conference with government officials," said Manuel L. Zuezon, president of the Philippine territorial senate, who with 33 other prominent business men, bankers, lawyers and capitalists were in Omaha for a few minutes between trains yesterday.

The Filipino mission, as it is known, will remain in the United States a month or so, visiting the larger cities, studying business and economical problems, with an idea of applying the information to affairs at home.

They arrived in Omaha over the Union Pacific, occupying two compartment cars. From Omaha east, they went over the Northwestern.

Make Rapid Strides.

As spokesman for the party, Mr. Zuezon, in pointing to the rapid strides being made in the islands, said:

"At its last session the territorial legislature appropriated $5,000,000 a year for the next three years for the establishment and maintenance of public schools. The teachers in these schools, many of which are now in operation, generally are natives of the islands. Some of them have been educated in the colleges of the United States, but as a rule they have obtained their education in our own schools.

"The islands are very prosperous and everywhere business is good. Our crops consist largely of sugar cane and coconuts, but gradually we are working into diversified farming and stock-raising, having come to realize that we can raise practically such grains as are grown in the United States. Live stock of all kinds does well, especially cattle."

Mr. Zuezon expressed astonishment at the immensity of the United States, never having been here before. He said that to him Nebraska seemed to be a most wonderful agricultural area.

Liquor Continues to Pour Into Omaha, Is Report From Camp of State Agents

This is a picture taken by The Bee photographer of one corner of the liquor store room in the basement of central police station. It is said to be a drop in a bucket compared to the quantity sequestered and safe in the possession of Omaha bootleggers.

Bootleggers, Undaunted by Recent Indictments and Implication of "Higher-Ups," Said to Penetrate to Remotest Corners of Dry States With Cargoes of Contraband.

In spite of the concentration of Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and federal liquor agents on the Missouri boundary lines, contraband liquor in unlimited quantities continues to pour into Omaha from St. Joseph and Winthrop, it was reported here yesterday by a representative of Gus Hyers' office enroute from Lincoln to the camp of the "allied whiskey chasers."

Undaunted by the recent indictments returned against Marvin Kirkman and William Bub, former county judges of St. Joseph, and the implication of a number of alleged "higher-ups" in illicit interstate traffic, wholesale quantities of wet goods, in steady and unencumbered streams, are penetrating to the remotest corners of the driest deserts of a half dozen neighboring states, he said.

Federal Agents Assist.

For three weeks the attention of Nebraska state agents has been centered on the border. Federal secret service men have been working in conjunction with the forces of other states, and the supply of liquor in this city and Council Bluffs has not depreciated in the least, according to estimates of local bootleggers, and as far as the police and county authorities have been able to determine.

A departure from the path beaten routine heretofore followed by bootleggers of this city has been noted within the last week. Vendors of prohibited liquor in the past have contented themselves to remain in the background, while customers looked them up. It has been their practice to obscure themselves in safe and secluded haunts until the thirsty ones willing to pay from $4.50 to $6 a pint for the stuff located them.

Many Solicit Business.

This method now is being used only by the most conservative bootleggers. The more progressive ones are soliciting business. Competition has grown so keen here, it was pointed out, that a number of dealers even are offering to deliver consignments to any section of the city limits.

A thirsty customer in Omaha called on his favorite bootlegger Tuesday in the hope of inducing him to take his order for a half dozen pints. He had been obtaining his whiskey from the dealer in limited amounts, but was told the smallest quantity he could order now was 24 pints, or a case.

Another Omaha bootlegger, who until six weeks ago was selling it at $5 a pint in single bottle lots, and peddling it from specially designed pockets in his clothing, was said to be using an automobile from and to solicit his orders, and is delivering in no smaller lots than a dozen cases.

One of the most puzzling problems with which the authorities on the Missouri border have had to deal is the woman problem. Most of the shipments now leaving St. Joseph and Winthrop are said to be piloted by women. Four-fifths of the liquor being brought to Omaha is coming in automobiles driven by women. Most of the drivers of the cars conveying the contraband are women who are identified in circles of respectability, and some of them are said to be prominent residents of the community in which they live.

Officers stationed at the bridges and state lines hesitate to subject many of these women to the indignities of searching them, it was declared. Frequently they are stopped and questioned, and invariably they assume the attitude of injured innocence, establish, in a greater number of instances, a satisfactory identification and are allowed to continue their journey with automobiles loaded to their capacities with the stuff for which hundreds of dealers and thousands of consumers are waiting in the dry centers of population.

Methods Are Moderated. Following recent raids on a prominent hotel in Omaha and a number of private residences here, on account of which a decided reaction in public sentiment is declared to have set in against the movement championed by radical prohibitionists, the police and state authorities are said to have been instructed to use extreme moderation in their methods. In fact, it was declared by a Nebraska state agent recently, that the liquor agents' authority had been curtailed to such an extent the men did not know how far they could go without stepping over the danger line.

"And all of this has come about because irresponsible men have been given responsibilities which they do not appreciate," was the state agent's comment. In addition to the great number of women who are bringing into Nebraska and Omaha wholesale quantities of whisky and beer for consumption in private homes, at the instance of husbands and relatives who voted the prohibition ticket, and men of standing and responsibility, as reckoned in their communities, there are members of organized gangs of women bootleggers who are making fortunes in the risks they are taking, it was said.

The queen of Nebraska women bootleggers is said to be located in Omaha. The authorities declare they know in their own minds who she is, but they have been able to obtain no evidence with which to convict her in court.

Fear Public Sentiment.

Asked why he did not pick her up and hold her for investigation, like the police arrested their prisoners every day, the state agent replied that this practice in the past was responsible for the turning of the tide in public sentiment against the operations of the state's department of justice.

The Nebraska queen is said to be the directing brains of a systematized and organized gang of bootleggers. She is said to remain in her palatial home here, while she keeps in closest touch with the operations of the women and girls who work under her.

One of the strictest rules laid down by this woman is to employ no girl who is not smart. She insists on her girls having keen brains. Another qualification is that the girls must have the very best reputations. They must be dignified, refined and educated and equal to meet any prospective emergency which confronts them in the dangerous undertakings.

Must Have "Nerve."

No women of questionable character will be considered for a moment for a job by the queen, it was said. The girls are required to have "nerve," presence of mind and a personality in which the "stage doors in the road" will stand in awe when they attempt their everyday familiarity. Women bootleggers are not allowed to flirt. They are not allowed to drink their own stuff and they are required to assume the dignity of a parson's wife and Sunday school teacher as they go about their serious daily duties.

To these rules, and to the mistakes of the police and the indiscretion of the state agents, is attributed the success of the female bootlegging undertaking and the weakening in the cause of the radical prohibitionists, by those who say "they know."
