

WOMAN'S SECTION OF THE BEE

So bright the tear in Beauty's eye
Love half regrets to kiss it dry,
So sweet the blush of bashfulness
Even Pity scarce can wish it less.—Byron.

To the generous mind
The heaviest debt is that of gratitude,
When 'tis not in our power to repay it.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Love Comes Unbidden and, "To Love or Not We Are No More Free Than the Ripple to Rise and Leave the Sea."

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Broken Engagement. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a returned A. E. F. man, warm was the homecoming welcome at the American port of landing where my company disembarked, and the journey previous to my leaving to enter the service. One contingent promise made by a young lady friend who was an employe of the same office as myself has not been fulfilled, viz. I was to partake of a dinner cooked by her own hands in a prospective home of her own on my first Sunday at my home town after the war was over.

The fair one is still in the office and has made great gain in proficiency. The home has not materialized and the prospective masculine has removed to parts afar. We notice that the engagement ring has been removed from its accustomed place on the finger of the above-mentioned. I am back at the old job but have so far refrained from very much mention of our agreement, fearing that it might be a painful subject and perhaps wound her feelings. Is there an honorable way of approaching the subject without appearing too familiarly inquisitive, and you know what? Advise me, and please do not publish my name and address.

Treat the matter as though the young lady had broken the engagement—this may possibly be the truth, you know, since it is her privilege. Men are usually conceited and believe that engagements are broken only by men, but I assure you, my dear reader-friend, that girls quite frequently change their minds. If you wish to know the truth and are in the habit of discussing her personal affairs, why not mention the fact that you are delighted that she decided not to marry that chap. This will give her the opportunity of telling you if she cares to.

A Lonesome Lass.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I am a young school teacher and a constant reader of The Bee. Would like to say that if some of the men really found us out "and only understood," they would not be so hasty in thinking we are all a frivolous set. I, too, like Beverly Bayne, know that some day I can make some good man happy. I am 21 years old and am making my own way in the world. I know that I have walked straight, and what is more, I will keep on in the straight path.

I have not yet met my ideal, although I have met many young men, but my mother's favorite saying stands in my mind. "To thine own self be true, and it shall follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man." I am still waiting for the right one. Some one who really cares for the beautiful things in life, some one who can read a really good book and enjoy it. I believe no one enjoys music, flowers and good books more than I do. I dearly love my little pupils and hope that some day I shall have the real home that I read of. I don't mean a book story home, but I have seen homes which were superior to any book story I have read. Now, a word to my sisters: Girls, our youth is like a budding flower in the morn, before the dew has been rubbed off of it. When the dew has been removed by a hand, no hand can put it back like it was, when nature put it there. Let us keep our youthful dew until the sun's heat dries it or we ourselves absorb it. (Beverly Bayne's Twin Sister). "BEE BAYNE."

Her Attitude.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I would like to see the answer to this in The Omaha Bee. I am a young man of 26, considered sensible, and I have known a young lady for two years and became engaged to her six months ago. I am just starting in business and am some in debt yet. Would it be right to marry her, or should I wait till I get out of debt? Very respectfully yours, A THOUGHTFUL READER.

It depends entirely on the attitude of the young lady. Be honest with her, and if she loves you enough to help pull through the crisis, marry her. If not, wait until you are free from debt. But if she does help you pull through, when you have enough money be generous. Don't show your appreciation of her efforts by asking her to wear her last year's hats and old shoes. A stingy man is awful!

A Little Late.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: About a week ago I picked up a part of The Bee paper, probably March 16 issue, containing a letter from A Little Widow. Read the letter and left it at the shop, so that I

Miss Lipsey Wins Phi Beta Kappa Which Is Highest Award for Scholarship at Lincoln

Miss Lea Lipsey

Phi Beta Kappa, the highest award for scholarship that is conferred by the University of Nebraska, was awarded to Miss Lea Lipsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Lipsey, 1228 North Thirty-fourth street, of this city. The 30 members of the graduating class who received those honors were announced in convocation at the university on Tuesday, April 2, Phi Beta Kappa day. Miss Lipsey was the only Omahian among this group, which includes one-tenth of the graduates of this year having the highest grades in a prescribed course of study. Miss Lipsey graduated from the Central High school in 1915, where she was prominent in dramatic work. She is leading woman of the University Players, the dramatic organization of the university which is on tour in the state at the present time offering "The Doll's House."

A short reply will be appreciated by a reader of The Bee. Your letters were mailed to her you may receive a reply. I cannot tell you how many inquiries she received—that wouldn't be fair. Ask her that question.

Her Red Hair. Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I have been reading your advice for some time and appreciate it very much. It seems to come in handy so often. Now, I am a girl past 18, and about as homely as anyone that has ever been invented. My hair is red and oh, my face! It is simply covered with freckles, and my features are terribly irregular. As to my physique, some call me "sturdy" and others "powerful." It seems to furnish entertainment for many of my schoolmates. Now, on account of the above mentioned, I seem to be terribly unpopular with the boys, and also many of the girls. I use slang, but otherwise am quite refined. How can I get dates with some of the boys? Thanking you, "KATINKA."

I fear you are over-sensitive about your appearance. Why, girl, alive! women are using chemicals, dyes and all sorts of things to make their hair red. Get a good freckle lotion from your druggist and use it according to directions. Irregular features are attractive if there is personality back of them. Girls of your type are not so popular with the young, foolish set, but you are just the kind of a person to carry away the matrimonial prize when you are a wee bit older and know how to carry yourself gracefully, and when you have learned to be tactful with your associates.

Information is Private. Dear Miss Fairfax: Could you please give me the name and address or at least the address of the author of enclosed clipping. Am curious to know if letter concerned me. Can you give further details? Could you answer a letter written to you (without printing same), providing self addressed envelope is enclosed for reply? A BASHFUL BOY.

Sorry, but I cannot give you the name and address of the party in question, nor any details. Yes, a letter written to me will be answered providing you enclose a stamped envelope.

In Doubt—I can see no reason why you should hesitate writing this woman whom you met while in the west. If she is interested in you, she will surely answer.

In Trouble—if you will just hold out a little longer I feel sure your husband will get the divorce himself as he is so anxious for it. It would be better for you, would it not, than to have another man pay for the divorce.

Dolly—Perhaps your little friend—thought that you cared no more for her when she had had trouble in her family and was no longer in a position to be so popular. Could you blame her for feeling hurt? Why do you not talk to her frankly, as you wrote me? Girls of 14 can explain and forgive.

Worried Wife—if you do not know why your husband left you or where he is, do not see how I can tell you how to win him back. Trust him a little longer, can't you, and perhaps there will be a reason after all.

Peggy—I can only tell you that it will be better for you in the end to

Red Cross Nurses to Co-Operate With the Health Department

The American Red Cross, through its department of nursing, has entered into an arrangement with the United States public health service whereby graduate enrolled Red Cross nurses are supplied to the army and the navy.

As it is expected the number of patients to be cared for in hospitals of the public health service will be increased from about 50,000 a year to fully 75,000, Surgeon General Rupert Blue turned to the Red Cross as a source for a greatly enlarged public health nurse corps. There are now approximately 90 nurses employed in this service, but through the Red Cross it is planned to develop the corps in the near future to at least 750.

On recommendation of the department of nursing of the Red Cross Surgeon General Blue has appointed Miss Luch Minnegerode of Fairfax, Va., superintendent of the United States public health nurse corps. Miss Minnegerode's appointment to this office followed on a tour of inspection of marine hospitals which she made for the surgeon general to canvass the nursing needs. Miss Minnegerode is a graduate of Bellevue Training School for Nurses of New York. She was selected to be chief nurse of an American Red Cross unit which was sent to Kief, Russia, in 1915, and gave distinguished service in that capacity. Following her European experience she was appointed superintendent of nurses of Columbia hospital, Washington, D. C. When the United States entered the war Miss Minnegerode was called by the Red Cross to take charge of the preparation of Red Cross nurses for assignment overseas.

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician
Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color. These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system. If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results. Thousands of women as well as men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep in the pink of condition. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.
