

UNIVERSITY DAY TO BE OBSERVED IN OMAHA MAY 2

Students From State University to Spend Day in City As Guests of Business Men.

The Chamber of Commerce has decreed that Monday, May 2, is to be University day in Omaha. Upon that occasion 1,000 or more of the students of the State university will spend the day in the city. Organizations affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce are raising the necessary money to finance the trip. The university students will occupy two special trains, coming over the Burlington, reaching Omaha at an early hour in the morning. Students interested in live stock and the packing industry will go direct to the stock yards and packing houses. There they will be entertained by members of the exchange and the officials of the Union Stock Yards company. Late in the day they will board street cars and come up to the city.

Students not particularly interested in the live stock industry will come direct to Omaha. During the day, under the guidance of the alumnae of the university, they will make trips about the city, visiting the manufacturing plants and business establishments.

At 6 o'clock at night a buffet luncheon will be served in the Auditorium. Following this there will be a reception to former graduates of the Omaha High school and the High School of Commerce, now university students.

The affairs of the day will conclude with a dance in the Auditorium, given for the visitors and their guests.

Germany Doomed by U. S. War Entry Was Prediction of Ballin

London, April 17—The following interesting letter from the late Herr Ballin is reprinted from the Register of Adelaide, South Australia: The death of Herr Ballin, the great German shipowner, who committed suicide upon the signing of the armistice, might almost have been foretold by those who were aware of a letter written by him, a copy of which was recently received in Sydney. It is dated December 4, 1917, and was addressed "to my dear Herr Geheimrat" (understood to mean Privy Councillor Dr. Rathenau of Berlin). It proceeds:

"What sorry lies have been dished up to our people on the subject of shipping. One reads of resounding strokes of riveters as they work at the creation of new leviathans for our overseas commerce. Our yards are only working for the navy, and as for other ships, we have no material or accommodations and above all, we have not the necessary labor, skilled and unskilled. I almost despair when I think how different it all might have been.

"You and I were never advocates of this fatal policy of unrestricted submarine warfare. You will remember how I went to Berlin to seek to stay the hand of the authorities. I begged them to reflect and they told me the country insisted on it. This was not true. I pointed out how it would inevitably draw America into the conflict, and they pooh-poohed me, smiled at America and scorned her threat. Do they smile now?"

"Let me tell you that it is my opinion the entry of the United States into this struggle may spell absolute disaster for us; but if I am concerned about our relations with the United States, I am still more anxious about our relations with Great Britain. I realize as never before that all the increase in our wealth, all the success which attended our enterprises in the years before the war, was owing to our intercourse with the British empire. Her home ports, her dominions and colonies, were freely opened to our shippers and traders. Sometimes I wondered at this generosity, and even called it folly. Is it to be imagined for a moment that these old relations will return?"

"I am not to be supposed as saying one word in favor of Britain's policy in this war. I believe that she entered it from some base motives; but I am now only dealing with the fact that by our conduct of this war by the just and the just of our pan-Germans and our unspeakable press, we have turned her in-born dislike of us into loathing, so cold and fierce and lasting, as sometimes to make me tremble for the whole future of our economic existence.

"With a hostile British empire yalied and fretted with our military success, raging at its losses, hopelessly alienated, how are we to procure the raw material which that empire alone can supply? That great empire is self-contained, and we are not; and all the military victories and all the will-o'-the-wisps about Hamburg to Bagdad will not help us.

Did Him Credit.

The old sea captain in brass buttons sat smoking comfortably by his fireside, when Jack, his sailor son, broke in upon him. "Weather too rough," explained the son, "so we've put in for a day." "Too rough!" exclaimed Mr. Tar, with visions of his own days on the briny. "Why, sir, I was once sailing around the cape when a storm came on and it blew down the mainmast and the mizzenmast was swept away, but we didn't even think of putting in!"

"Well, you see," explained the son, "this storm was so bad it blew the anchors off the captain's buttons, took the paint off the ship's bow and—"
