

U. S. WILL START THREE PLANES ON ATLANTIC FLIGHT

American Navy Aviators, Five in Each Crew, Will Make Attempt to Span Ocean Early in May.

Washington, April 22.—Three naval seaplanes, the NC-1, NC-3 and NC-4, will attempt the flight across the Atlantic ocean. They will leave Rockaway Beach early next month, but so far as is known now no decision has been reached as to whether the route will be direct from Newfoundland to Ireland or via Azores.

Each plane is expected to carry a crew of five men, will be driven by four Liberty motors of a total of 1,600 horsepower, and will carry sufficient gasoline to make a stop on a direct flight to Ireland unnecessary, unless storms or strong head winds are encountered.

Tests Satisfactory.
It was learned today at the Navy department that tests conducted with the NC-2 have been eminently satisfactory. This craft is several hundred pounds heavier than any of the other three, however, and it is for this reason that it will not be used in the overseas voyage. The arrangement of motors in the three planes to make the flight is different from that in the NC-2, each having three pulling and one driving engine, whereas the NC-2 has two driving and two pulling.

Comparative tests between the two types have shown that the arrangement in the three planes is much the better, particularly should trouble develop in one of the pulling motors.

The flight distance from Rockaway Beach to Newfoundland will be approximately 1,500 miles—the longest trip ever undertaken by naval planes—and after the crafts reach Newfoundland they must be carefully examined and given any necessary overhauling. Even with the machines ready, favorable weather must be awaited before the "hop-off."

British Still Delayed.

St. Johns, N. F., April 22.—Conflicting winds which meteorologists predicted would continue for at least 48 hours held up again today the plans of Harry G. Hawker, Australian flyer, and Captain Frederick P. Raghnam, his British rival, to start their long deferred attempt to fly across the Atlantic.

Germany Violates Terms of Surrender of Submarines

New York, April 22.—In violation of terms under which German submarines were to be surrendered to the United States the submarine U-111 which arrived here Saturday for exhibition in connection with the Victory Loan was damaged before it changed hands, it was learned yesterday. Examination revealed that her main ball thrust bearings were damaged, it was said, and temporary repairs were necessary before the craft started for the United States.

FLASHES FROM FILMLAND

It is estimated that "Common Clay," showing at the Strand, has been witnessed by more than five million persons. Under the direction of A. H. Woods, it ran for a full year as a Broadway attraction, playing to the capacity of the house. During the three years following it was interpreted by six companies throughout the United States and Canada and everywhere attracted large audiences.

A society romance that leads to a lover through a series of thrilling escapes from death is the theme of "The Jungle Trail," starring William Farnum, at the Sun theater the last of this week.

One of the dramatic incidents of the play is said to be a fight between an American hunter and a whole tribe of Africans. He avoids death by pulling up the posts to which he is bound and thereafter, until the time of his escape, following a fight in which he overthrows the statue of an idol, he is worshipped as the god of strength.

"Out of the Fog," the latest screen drama in which Nazimova is seen, at the Rialto theater, is a powerful intense story of the sea—dealing with elemental human emotions and passions. This play, which was adapted for the screen from the stage drama by H. Austin Adams, "Ception Shoals," which created such a furore during its long New York run, brought to Nazimova much of the fame which she has attained as an actress or supreme emotional character.

Mary Pickford, in "Rags," will be the feature attraction at the Muse today and Thursday. The play is one of Miss Pickford's successes of the past and one which audiences have liked at every showing. The situations in the production alternate constantly between the pathetic and the happy, the sympathetic and the necessary overhauling. Even with the machines ready, favorable weather must be awaited before the "hop-off."

"Fit to Win," which will play a return engagement at the Boyd theater for men only, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, is undoubtedly the most unusual picture production which has played in Omaha for many days. Its theme, while broad and often startling in

MUSIC

Lazzari-Ganz Concert.

It would be hard indeed to imagine a more happy combination than the rich contralto voice of Carolina Lazzari and the brilliant piano playing of Rudolph Ganz, with which the "All Star" course, presented by Mrs. A. L. Green, ended yesterday evening. Mr. Ganz has been heard here before and music lovers knew just what wonderful things to expect of him; but Miss Lazzari came as a stranger, completely captivating her audience, as she has done wherever she has sung. Held captive, as her manager explains, for some years, by the Metropolitan Opera of New York, without an opportunity to sing a role of importance, she has been but a comparatively short time on the concert stage.

Miss Lazzari's offerings last night were in three groups, the first in Italian, opening with the ever lovely "Lungi cal core bene" of Secchi, the best of songs to compose the listener and produce the musical mood. This was followed by "Ridomani la calma" by Toselli, and "Sotto il cielo" by Sella. No sooner was her first lovely tone emitted than the listener knew that all was well and that the rest would surely be pure joy. The voice is exuberant, warm and of luscious quality and its wide range is handled with apparent ease and reserve and with consummate smoothness. An aria from "Gli Ugonotti," by Meyerbeer, was sung with beautiful legato as was "The Last Hour," by Cramer, and "Before the Crucifix," by LaForge. "Gallie," by Mokrejes, held some startling effects of power, while "The Roadways," by Denmore, was rhythmic. Gertrude Ross' "Down in the Desert" was thrilling, and two songs by Mr. Ganz, with accompaniment played by the composer proved charming. An encore was graciously added after each number. Isaac Van Grove, at the piano, was such an excellent accompanist that he was all but forgotten.

Mr. Ganz fully justified his reputation as a great technician. He is not a sentimentalist, but believes, evidently, in letting the composer

If you didn't this will give you some idea of what you have missed: Reel 1. Officer Muldoon, crouching behind the billboards at Fifteenth and Davenport streets, waiting for one Clara Miller. Muldoon thinks Clara is a vagrant. Clara approaches. Muldoon accuses her, "You're under arrest!" "Maybe," responds Clara. (One moment, please, operator is changing film.) Reel 2. BURLESON ASKS CRITICISM OF POSTAL SERVICE

Invites Delegates to Washington Conference to State Troubles; Recommend More Care in Preparing Packages.

By EDGAR C. SNYDER.

Washington, April 22.—During the first week of April a three-days' conference was held at the post office department which will probably result in a closer co-operation hereafter between the postal service and the business organizations of the country.

A consultation with postmasters of 75 of the largest cities, including Charles E. Fanning of Omaha and the corps of inspectors and superintendents of the railway mail service, there were 13 representatives of leading firms and business organizations. The United States Chamber of Commerce, the American Bankers' association, the Association of National Advertisers, the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Publishers' Postal Service, Sears, Roebuck & Co., Marshall Field & Co., Montgomery Ward & Co., the National Cigar and Cigarette Association, and the Charles Williams stores were among the business organizations represented. The conference was presided over by First Assistant Postmaster General Koons and attended by officials of the several bureaus of the department.

Over 30 Topics.

Subjects affecting the business interests throughout the country, as extensive users of the mail, were fully discussed from a practical operating point of view. The range of the discussion was wide and it was pointed out that a special committee appointed to receive suggestions, complaints, etc., reported more than 30 topics for consideration by the conference.

Postmaster General Burleson in his address opening the conference spoke plainly of the conditions under which the postal service has been operated and the policies which have been attacked in some quarters.

"I want you and invite you, gentlemen," he said, "speaking to those who represent the business interests particularly, to make known the criticisms which you have of the postal service. I do not want you to be merely mouthed about it. I want you not only to make criticisms, but if there are criticisms to be made, I ask that they be not mild criticisms. I pledge you in advance that every knock will be welcomed by these men (referring to postal representatives) of the postal service. It is an honest desire behind it for improvement of the postal service."

The members of the conference followed this suggestion.

Many of the topics discussed were purely technical, though of importance to the efficiency of the service, and with respect to all of these definite recommendations were made.

Special Subjects.

Topics of special public interest that were discussed and acted upon were the special delivery service, the expediting of indemnities on insured parcels post, the safe-guarding of parcel post packages by special label, the improvement of method of handling fragile, perishable and special delivery parcels, improvement in the delivery of third-class matter, plans for closer co-operation between the post offices and publishers, and complaints with reference to inadequate and slow railroad train service between important business centers and failures of mail trains to make connection or to allow sufficient time for the transfer of the mail.

The discussion, which occupied two full days of the conference, was neither accusative or defensive in tone, but was characterized by frankness and familiarity, on the part of the business representatives as well as of the postal officials, with every detail and intricacy of the service under consideration.

The business representatives on the committee reporting subjects for consideration were Charles J. Bell, president of the American Bankers' association; F. B. DeBard, the Merchants' Association of New York; A. B. Schmidt, Sears, Roebuck & Co., who, for a number of years resided in Omaha, being a brother of the late George B. Tschack, Chicago; E. A. Skinner, Chamber of Commerce of the United States; George Rosenberg, the Publishers' Service, New York; and H. L. Fairfield, representing the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Perfect Understanding.

One result of the conference was the establishment of a perfect understanding between business men and the representatives of the postal service, with assurances on both sides of co-operation.

A consensus of opinion with reference to some of the problems was that the difficulties in the way of a more perfect service could be met only through the co-operation of users of the mail by improving their method of packing and delivery to the post office for transmission.

Commerce High Union Called Merely Fancy

Superintendent J. H. Beveridge of the public schools and Chairman Arthur Wells of the teachers' committee state that they have been working for nearly two months on the salary situation of the school system.

"We have been obtaining data from many cities and have been compiling this information with a view of making readjustments according to what the board believes to be right," explained Mr. Wells.

These school officials add that the so-called organization of teachers at High School of Commerce exists more in fancy than in fact; that an effort has been made to start a union, but it has failed.

B. J. Polzin and G. F. Knipprath of the High School of Commerce faculty are mentioned at school headquarters as the leaders of the movement to unionize the teachers at this institution.

AT THE THEATERS

LAUGHTER and song will hold sway at the Brandeis tomorrow, Friday and Saturday for Klaw & Erlanger's musical comedy production, "The River Girl." It is to be seen there on those dates. The comedy tells a story of picturesque love and carries a message of cheerfulness that lightens the heart, and its auditors cannot fail to be impressed with its sunshine. Swaying melodies, richly scored ensembles and dainty dance measures constitute the score. Klaw & Erlanger have never staged a more wonderful production.

Matinee and evening performances at the Boyd today close the engagement of "Old Lady 31," the Rachel Crothers comedy that has delighted so many lovers of good clean plays. Effie Ellsler heads the cast, which is almost an all-star aggregation of the best talent of the company has shown uncommon ability. The fun is of the whole-some type that everybody enjoys, rich and unctuous, without a problem to solve or a question to answer.

That songs of 20, 40 and 50 years are still popular is attested by the Orpheum act, contributed this week by Dane Claudius and Lillian Scarlet. The verses of old ballads are projected upon the motion picture screen, while the melody of the songs is played by the two banjo instrumentalists. After each song is played the audience applauds enthusiastically. One of the conspicuous elements of the offering is the attractiveness of the old-fashioned costumes worn by the two musicians. A decidedly pleasing act is contributed by the harpist and vocalist, Anna Gray. Her song numbers are very happily chosen, and she sings them delightfully.

Whether you are old or whether you are young or whether you are just between the two you are sure to enjoy "Mickey," which will be shown at the Brandeis the last times today.

Excellent singing numbers, graceful dancing and comedy that furnishes laughter, are features of the stellar attraction at the Empress "Follies of Today," which closes its engagement at that house this evening. Rieff Bros. and Murray have an offering that comprises singing, dancing and comedy talk. Pauline Haggard renders a number of songs in effective manner and also plays the piano.

Frank Finney and Phil Ott, who head the "Bostonian Burlesquers" all next week at the Gayety theater, have never revealed in such laugh opportunities as they have in the present production. The comedians have a big song hit in their "What Do You Think of the Hat?" which is utilized as a finale for the first act. A one-armed lunch scene is also another portion of the show which proves a big laugh getter. Ladies' matinee daily at 2:15.

BURGLARS LOOT SAFE IN OFFICE AND STEAL $225

Yeggmen of "Jimmy Valentine" Type Open Strong Box Without Using Explosives.

The safe in the office of the McKenney dental establishment, 1324 Farnam street, was found open yesterday morning and $225 in cash was gone from the strong box. No nitroglycerine or other explosive had been used. The combination had been worked either by someone who knew it or by a burglar of the "Jimmy Valentine" type who was able to get the combination by a highly trained sense of touch and hearing.

Mr. McKenney had locked the safe Saturday afternoon and did not open it from that time until yesterday morning, when it was found open. The strong box had been broken into and the cash removed. The detectives have no clue at all to the mysterious safe expert.

Burglars broke into the home of E. L. Plattner, 2861 Newport avenue, last night and stole silverware worth $35. The family was at home, but heard nothing of the thieves, who gained entrance by prying open a back door.
