

OLD SWINDLE IS BROUGHT FORTH FOR HOUSEWIFE

Making Two Pounds of Butter From One Is an Old Idea, Says Prof. Frandsen.

Prof. J. H. Frandsen, head of the University of Nebraska, dairy husbandry department.

"The high price of butter has given opportunity to interest housewives again in an old familiar swindle variously known as 'making two pounds of butter out of one,' 'wonderful butter increaser,' or 'magic buttermaker.' It is generally pointed out that two pounds of butter can be made out of one pound of butter mixed with milk," said Prof. J. H. Frandsen, head of the University of Nebraska, dairy husbandry department. "There is nothing new about this device as it has been sold in different parts of the country off and on for at least thirty or forty years."

"According to law, butter must contain at least 82 per cent butter fat, and not to exceed 16 per cent water, which, of course, would not be the case if skim milk or water were mixed with it. As a matter of fact, butter made in this way generally contains less than 50 per cent of butter fat. It is, therefore, illegal to offer such a product for sale as butter. Furthermore, if the housewife desires the soft and slushy fat, she could secure an article of approximately the same merit by buying rich cream which would be cheaper and probably more palatable than worked-over butter. It is simply another way of adding water or skim milk to the butter—the same results might be accomplished by spreading the butter about half as thick, so far as actual nourishment is concerned. There is, of course, no law against this kind of camouflage in the home, but it is hardly playing fair to one's stomach to pretend that a pint of butter added to a pound of butter doubles the amount of butter or its food value. It is well the remember that butter is one of the most desirable and easily digested energy foods that we can take into our system."

But Two Colleges Taught Geography Sixty Years Ago

The rapid development of geography as a college study, since its first appearance in a university curriculum about half a century ago, is discussed by Prof. R. H. Whitbeck, of the University of Wisconsin, in a recent article on "Geography in American and European Universities," published in The Journal of Geography. He points out the following interesting facts:

In 1860, Harvard and Princeton were the only American universities offering courses in geography. Cornell and the University of Wisconsin introduced the subject in 1868, and Yale followed in 1872. In 1900 only twelve American universities taught the subject, but by 1910, 31 universities were offering a variety of 142 courses.

With 704 students enrolled in geography, the University of Wisconsin led all others in 1910. With 1,069 enrolled in 1917, it led all others except the University of Pennsylvania. It now offers seven courses in physical and economic geography, climatology and other phases of the subject.

"Arguments From Sky"

Now Filed in Library

Propaganda leaflets that were dropped over the enemy lines by American balloons and aeroplanes during October and November, 1918, have been sent to the University of Wisconsin war collection by the general headquarters of the American expeditionary forces.

Most of the propaganda is printed in German and among the leaflets are President Wilson's answer to Germany of October 14, his note of October 23, containing peace terms offered; an account of the withdrawal of Germany's allies and Austria's bidding for a separate peace; a statement urging that Germany's rulers and not her soldiers will benefit by the war; details of American treatment of German prisoners, growth of American army, gains of the allies in territory, men, and munitions; and postcards which German prisoners might send to their people when captured.

Fishes Tagged to Show Ages and Wanderings

To study the age of fish and the extent of their migrations, the federal government is conducting through the zoology department of the University of Wisconsin a series of experiments in which thousands of fish are being tagged and recorded.

Fish of all kinds are caught in the Madison lakes, measured, weighed, recorded, and put back into the water at the spot at which they were caught. Metal tabs are attached to their gill-covers to identify them. Samples of their scales are filed with their records since age may be determined by the rings on their scales. When they are caught again, the tags and records will indicate how far they have migrated.

About 1,200 fish have been tagged and placed in the Madison lakes in the past two years.

To Teach Aeronautics at Grinnell Next Fall

Grinnell, April 25.—A course in military aeronautics will be offered to men students at Grinnell next fall, under the R. O. T. C. The plan, as announced by the War department at the recent aeronautical exposition in New York, is to give the work formerly done in the ground schools—that is, engines, airplanes, map-making, and infantry and artillery co-operation—at the colleges and universities during the college year, under the R. O. T. C. Actual flying training, with of course military training, will be given during the six weeks spent in summer camps at northern flying fields.
