

Exclusive Photographs Never Before Published of Scenes on

Battlefields at Chateau-Thierry and in the St. Mihiel sector, where American troops fought from June to September; devastated towns from which Yankee troops drove out the invading Huns; and trophies of war captured by the First, Second and 26th divisions, in some of the memorable engagements of the great allied offensive of 1918. Photographs taken by George Rothwell Brown, staff correspondent of The Washington Post with the American armies on the western front.

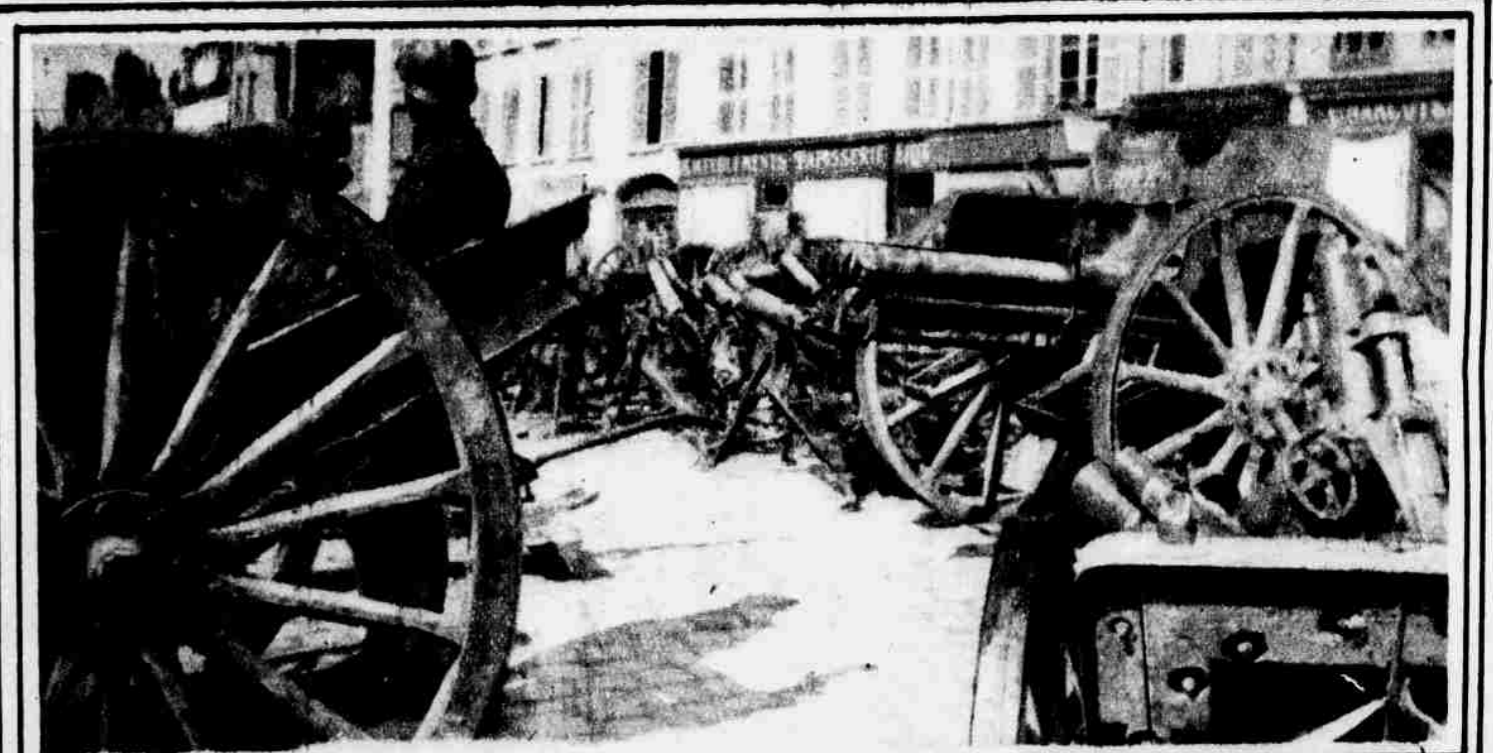

(Copyright, 1918, by Washington Post Co.)

THE HEART OF CHATEAU-THIERRY AS IT IS TODAY.

AMERICAN TROOPS ON THE MARCH LINED UP FOR MESS.

FIELD ARTILLERY AND TRENCH MORTARS AT VILLERS-COTTERETES, CAPTURED BY FIRST AND SECOND DIVISIONS, SOUTH OF SOISSONS ON JULY 18, IN THE FIRST OFFENSIVE, THAT MARKED THE BEGINNING OF THE GENERAL ALLIED OFFENSIVE THAT CONTINUED TO THE END OF THE WAR.

GERMAN FIELD ARTILLERY, MORTARS AND ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS CAPTURED BY FIRST AND SECOND AMERICAN DIVISIONS, IN PUBLIC SQUARE AT VILLERS-COTTERETES.

FIRST DIVISION RESTING AT TROYON, ON THE MARCH TO THE ARGONNE. ARTILLERY CAMOUFLAGED TO HIDE IT FROM THE HUN AVIATORS.

ONE OF THE DEVASTATED TOWNS IN THE ST. MIHIEL SECTOR CAPTURED BY THE AMERICANS, SEPTEMBER, 1918.