Ak-Sar-Ben to Have Charge of Opening Festivities With Gus Renz Promising Big Surprise.

Omaha base ball lovers may be assured that Wednesday, home open- New York ing day at Rourke park, when the Tulsa club plays Omaha, will be a day of full pleasure. The opening celebration will be handled by the Ak-Sar-Ben Board of Governors who have arranged an elaborate program including a linear of the control of the program, including a lineup of famous ball players and a promised surprise by Gus Renz. Gus will not give any one a hint of what form his surprise will take nor will he tell when it will come off, any more than that it will be sometime during the opening festivities.

Considering the advertising that their team has already had, the fans are anxious to see them in action on the ball field and the Ak-Sar-Ben officials will come in for plenty of guying if anything should go wrong and they would have to "plug" their line-up. Ball "bugs" are especially anxious to see the light-footed shortstop, Everett Buckingham. tripping gaily around the short field

The two league teams will probably uncork a fast article of baseball for the Omaha club will try hard to crawl up the scale a few points, now that they are almost on equal terms with the southern clubs in the matter of condition and the Tulsa ag-gregation is fighting hard to regain the top position. The leaguers will present the following line-up: OMAHA

Fifteen Inning Tie,

New York, May 12.—New York and Washington played another long tie game here today, the score standing 4-4 at the and of the 15th inning when Umpire Owens called the game on account of larkness.

New York had victory in its grasp in the ninth, when Pratt threw wild on an easy double play which should have ended the same. The throw enabled Foster to tie the score and placed Gharrity on third base, from where he stole home a moment later. Umpire Owens, at the plate first called Gharrity out, but when the Washington players appealed to Dineen, the field umpire, he reversed his decision. In the argument that followed Manager Huggins of New York was ordered off the field.

New York then tied the acore in its half of the ninth when Ayres gave four bases. the ninth when Ayres gave four bases balls. The score:

T'S an ill wind that doesn't blow the foam off of somebody's beevo. But unless the breezes cut out the breezing it looks as if the boys who are going to play leap-frog with the ocean will spend the summer shooting pinochle in Nova Scotia.

The weather has been rougher than a cat's tongue, and the aviator who tries to buzz into the teeth of a gale is going to get bit. Uncle Sam's unfeathered birds are all set, however, and waiting for the go-go office from the weather traffic cop. And it's diamonds against door knobs that the first hopper to hop across the vat will be a Yank.

We don't claim that Yanks do everything first. Some of 'em don't even wait that long. But the nation that tossed together a watch that would last long enough to sell for a dollar ain't going to stop at any soup tureen just because it happens to be a few thousand miles wide from handle to handle. The Limies and French have both entered varsity crews in the marathon regatta, but all they've done so far is to flutter around for the movie cameras. The United States navy crews have been tuning up their air fiddles like a symphony orchestra just before the leader wiggles his elbows. An orchestra works more tuning up than it does playing the tune. Which is the same with airplanes.

The Yank birds have two good reasons for leaving this side of the chowder pot before July 1. The second reason is that fifty-thousand smacker prize.

Flying across the Atlantic irrigation system is going to be a tough blow to the ticket speculators who usually control all the grand stands along the line of march. Anybody who has an uncle with a rowboat can oar himself right into a seat in the orchestra circle and cheer himself dizzy. We never heard of a school of fish graduating and going to college. but any herring that is playing hookey from the delicatessen store is sure going to get a pop-eyed view of the whole pageant.

Outside of a few whales, the big hop will be practically private.

walrus or two may horn into the proceedings, but only as spectators. The boys will try to do the big bath in one hop. A hop-and-a-half will be as bad as a half-a-hop, as fractions are very damp in midocean.

Flopping across the nimble wave department is all right if you don't get your feet wet, but the ocean is a poor lawn to light on. Once the boys get on their way there won't be any chance of beating their neighbors to the exit, as there is no exit. It's whole hog or none. Just like a dinge staking the rent money on the last roll of a set of round-cornered bones. Only difference is that the dinge has a chance to walk home while the big hoppers land into an order of porridge that is very moist either at high or low tide, new or old time, or democratic or republican adminis-

The ocean is the ocean, and any bird who skids into it will soon find himself wishing he was back on a nice, safe Chicago boulevard lined with blackjack festooned feet pads.

The air route to Europe is practically safe compared to a Long Island turnpike. No constables, detours or broken bottles line the cloudways, but you can't tell what will happen after Zepp picnic parties get throwing vacant olive bottles out of the windows.

The hoppers are picking out a route free of rent sharks, coat room brigands and taxes on toothpaste. The only danger they run is of their airplane thinking it is a sardine and doing a chin-dive into the tank. The trip will be express, no stops being made for refreshments or local pas-

There isn't much doubt that flying across the Atlantic will soon become a habit like snuff or bridge whist, but most gents will continue to prefer the Cunard system of getting seasick Ain't so bad when your heart aviates into your mouth, but when your Adam's apple drums "Home, Sweet Home" on your hat the world looks slightly scrambled.

Medals on your chest from flying is fine business, but bunions on your feet from walking is safer.
