

ALIEN EXODUS IS WIDESPREAD SAYS LABOR MEN

Many Foreign Born Return to Native Lands Freed From Hun Rule by Victory of Allies.

Washington, May 16.—A widespread exodus of aliens from this country was reported today by the Department of Labor. Inquiries by the department's investigation and inspection service have revealed that already large numbers of foreign-born residents are leaving the country, and that even more expect to depart when steamship accommodations and passports can be obtained. Unemployment and family interests were said to be important factors in stimulating the eastward flow of the human tide which for decades has set only westward. Ethelbert Stewart, director of the investigation service, said many aliens reported they had not heard from their families since Europe was thrown into war and that they were going overseas to make a personal investigation.

Help Settle Estates.
Another cause of the immigration is the desire of some aliens to participate in the settlement of estates of relatives killed in the war. There also is the desire of many foreign-born to return to lands freed from German or Austrian domination.

Figures from many cities show that fully 50 per cent of the aliens of certain races intend to return to Europe, many of them to remain there.

An investigation by a steel plant showed that 61 per cent of its alien employees declared their intention to return, and of this number 91 per cent said they were going to stay. A prominent Hungarian of Chicago estimated that 50 per cent of the 30,000 unassimilated Austro-Hungarians in that city would return to Europe.

Among Lithuanians there is a strong feeling that if Lithuania becomes independent there will be a large movement back to that country.

Commercial Cable Company Sued Under Income Tax Statute

New York, May 16.—An income tax and penalty suit against the Commercial Cable company was brought by the government today in the federal court here.

The complaint, filed by United States District Attorney Caffey and containing seven counts, alleges that the returns made by the company between December 31, 1909, and July 1, 1916, were "incorrect, misleading and false, and failed to set forth and show the true net taxable income within the meaning and intent of the income tax law."

The internal revenue collector has demanded payment of back taxes due, the complaint sets forth, but the company has refused to pay. The government asks the court to award interest of 1 per cent a month on the amount of the taxes alleged to be unpaid.

The true income of the defendant from 1909 to 1915, inclusive, aggregated about $5,211,000, the complaint states, and the taxes due the government total $54,654.

"THE RED GLOVE" Caught In The Trap

Illustrated by H. Y. MAYER EPISODE No. 9

Fleeing from the cabin of the old Mexican woman, Tia Juana, with the whole band of Vultures hard at her heels, Billie comes upon Kern Thode, her sweetheart, who has escaped from the Hidden Valley, where he has been held prisoner by the same outlaw gang.

Thode is afoot, and there is no hope of outdistancing the Vultures on their fleet-footed horses. The ruffians, urged on by their leader, who hopes to gain the great reward offered by Starr Wiley for the recovery of the Red Glove, urge them on.

Billie has the Red Glove, which she found in Tia Juana's cabin, safely tucked in her waist. Within it is the secret of the Pool of Lost Souls, that hidden lake, subject of Indian superstition, which both Thode and Starr Wiley, his business rival as well as his rival in love, believe is the source of all the oil supply of that part of the coastal region of Mexico.

Thode and Wiley, representing rival oil companies, had each moved heaven and earth to gain the Red Glove and its secret, but Thode had fought fairly, while Wiley had not hesitated to call on the relentless and cruel Vultures to aid him. Thode's honesty had won the support of Billie, the frontier girl, who had turned out to be the heiress to the millions of Giles Murdaugh.

And now Thode and Billie cast hurriedly about for a means of escape. Faintly they can hear the hoofbeats of the pursuing band. Nearby is an oil spring, a faint trickle of oil that bespeaks a hidden reservoir beneath the surface of the earth. With sudden inspiration, Thode sees in it his means of escape.

With powder from the cartridges in his own belt and Billie's he constructs a fuse leading to a pile of gunpowder, which will in turn ignite the oil. Hastily lighting the fuse, he joins Billie and they scramble to a rocky eminence not far away.

The Vultures are getting nearer and nearer. They catch sight of the man and girl awaiting them, and swerve their horses until they must pass right by the hidden trap. Just as they reach it, the fuse ignites the powder, which in turn explodes the oil confined in the subterranean chamber.

As Thode holds Billie tightly to him, the band of Vultures is enveloped in a burst of flame, spattering burning oil in all directions. Is this the end of the outlaws? And what of Starr Wiley, the evil genius behind them?

Britain Stubbornly Refuses Light on Kitchener Enigma

Lord Jellicoe's History of Grand Fleet Fails to Clear Up Mystery Connected With Sinking of Cruiser Hampshire and Death of Former War Chief.

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

London, May 16.—Is somebody besides the late Lord Kitchener responsible for Lord Kitchener's death in the icy waters north of Scotland, where the deadly torpedo found its mark in the cruiser Hampshire? That is still a vital question in Britain today, made all the more so by Lord Jellicoe's recent book on the history of the grand fleet while he was in supreme command of it.

Englishmen are constitutionally opposed to mysteries, particularly when they are woven by the government, and it appears that the present government of Great Britain has chosen to perpetuate the mystery surrounding the sinking of the Hampshire which its predecessor compounded. In parliament Horatio Bottomley, who is more or less considered the "wild ass of the desert" in the commons, arose to inquire from Bonar Law, the house leader, when the report of the admiralty inquiry upon the sinking of the Hampshire would be published. It may be by the mark to insert parenthetically that in a recent editorial

Bottomley remarked upon the "niggers" Columbus encountered, when discovering America.

"The government sees no reason," Mr. Law answered, "to depart from its usual custom not to publish the report of the inquiry held into the loss of the Hampshire. The reports of these courts never are published. There are reasons for and against publication of these reports, with which I do not profess to be familiar."

Unquestionably the publication of the report of the special court of inquiry which sat upon the loss of the Hampshire would have absorbing interest for Britons at the present moment when the controversy arising out of Lord Jellicoe's book still waxes hot. The enemies of the former admiral of the fleet have openly charged Lord Jellicoe with full responsibility for the death of Kitchener, declaring that Jellicoe was criminally culpable in permitting the then secretary of war to embark on the Hampshire.

It will be recalled that Kitchener was bound on a highly important mission to Russia, the exact nature of which has not been unlocked from the secret war cabinets of the government. Russia was at the moment tottering on the abyss of revolution, her army was demoralized and the support the allies expected to receive from the great empire in the east was not forthcoming. Lord Kitchener was dispatched post haste to Petrograd, presumably to stiffen the swaying empire's morale.

He went to a naval base in the north of Scotland to embark on a cruiser which would convey him to Archangel, whence he planned to make Petrograd by rail. Lord Jellicoe's book hints that the secretary of war would brook no delay and that though the weather was unfavorable and the only channel open had not been adequately swept for mines, the hero of Khartoum insisted upon sailing immediately.

Jellicoe reluctantly gave the cruiser Hampshire sailing orders and the German admiralty, unquestionably acting on spies' advice, had a submarine waiting to sink the British cruiser.

The Hampshire went down in the mist, and with it the man who might have been able to rescue Russia from the anarchy toward which it is drifting—who knows? It is true that Lord Kitchener's own imperious will which would brook no delays was responsible for his death? Did responsibility lie with the admiral of the grand fleet who permitted his vessel to traverse a submarine haunted channel? Why, even under the interpolation of so chaotic a member of the commons as Horatio Bottomley, does the government of Great Britain decline to publish what it knows about the last hours of a man whose name was so potent to rally the sons of the empire around the Cross of St. George?

TRADE JAUNT IS READY FOR TOUR OF NORTHWEST

One Hundred and Fifty Business Men Have Signed Up for Trip; Will Leave Sunday.

One hundred and fifty business men of Omaha have signed up for the trade excursion through the northwest being promoted by the Chamber of Commerce and which departs Sunday night on a tour of one week. Everything is ready for the start and a profitable trade boosting trip is anticipated.

On the Omaha trade excursion there will be music galore. A band of 30 pieces is being taken along and in addition a chorus of 75 voices has been organized, with Jake Spiesberger as song leader. This chorus will sing at each and every point where stops are made. On the repertoire are such songs as "Omaha Is Growing," "This Is Some Town," "Till We Meet Again," "I Like a Town Like Omaha," "Smiles," "There's a Long, Long Trail" and many others.

The Chamber of Commerce whistle is to be taken along and at every city and town through which the train passes, blasts will be sounded. Commissioner Ellis has written to the mayors of the cities and towns, telling them of the whistle and asking if there are ordinances against the making of loud and unusual noises. Generally the replies are: "Toot as loud and long as you can," or something similar.

Alleged 'Moonshiner' Is Bound Over to the Federal Grand Jury

Mely Jandrich, 5521 South Thirty-first street, charged with illicit distilling, waived preliminary hearing yesterday morning before United States Commissioner McLaughlin and was bound over to the federal grand jury on a $750 bond.

Jandrich was arrested a week ago when a complete distilling outfit was found at his home. He was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail by Police Judge Foster at the time of his arrest on the charge of illegal possession of several gallons of alcohol, said to be the product of his still.

Stingy Man Makes His Wife Use Her Wash Water Twice

Columbus Grove, O., May 16.—That her husband is so stingy that he made her save the water in which she did the family washing, in order to save soap, is the main argument advanced by Mrs. Martha A. Botkins, who wants a divorce from Edward M. Botkins. She says her husband is worth $40,000.

The Right Laxative For The Little Ones—

The natural condition of a child is to be happy and carefree. When the girl mopes and is indifferent to school and study, or the boy is sullen and refuses to go out and play, the child needs a laxative to empty the bowels and stir up the liver.

But something should be given that will produce the result in as simple and natural a way as possible. Harsh cathartics and physics are neither necessary nor desirable.

Many mothers have found that the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin sold by druggists under the name of Dr.

Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin produces a free movement of the bowels without griping. A very little is required, and it is pleasant to take. A few hours after its use the child will be its happy self again.

It is an excellent remedy for the mother herself, and for the other members of the family, in obstinate or occasional constipation, for the relief of headaches, as an aid in colds and fevers, minor skin eruptions and all disorders where the basis of the trouble is constipation.

The druggist will refund the money you pay for Syrup Pepsin if it fails to do as promised.
