

JUNIOR LEAGUE FORMED BY BEE CLASHES TODAY

Seven Games Scheduled for Various Sandlots at 10 O'Clock This Morning; New Division Formed.

When the fourteen teams, representing division one and two of the newly organized Omaha Bee Junior Base Ball association clash at the various municipal diamonds and parks they will be the happiest kids in Omaha today for they will have the honor for the first time in the history of amateur base ball to play regular scheduled games and it will also mark the first time that an organization of this kind for the young kids of the city was formed by a newspaper.

Judging from the interest displayed by the youngsters, many of them making their first appearance on the sand lots, it will be the greatest thing ever attempted in this city by any newspaper. The members of the various teams are overjoyed with enthusiasm and every one will work hard to make it a grand success.

Players on the various teams in the association are between the ages of 13 and 16 years, with the exception of a few who will be 17 years near the close of the season. No player who is a member of the Municipal Amateur Base Ball association or who has participated with any team in the Omaha Amateur Base Ball association last year will be allowed to play in the Bee association, according to the ruling passed by the managers at the meeting.

Launched by The Bee. In former years no attempt was made to organize Sunday leagues for the kid leaguers by either of the officials of the Omaha Amateur Base Ball association. The new Municipal body, and it was at the suggestion of the sports department of The Bee that this association was launched so as to give the youngsters a chance to play and a little recreation.

The games in The Bee association will be staged on Sunday morning starting promptly at 10 o'clock so no to interfere with playing of the Sunday afternoon teams. The new association will not be affiliated with the Municipal Amateur Base Ball association and it is not the intention of the officials to interfere with the latter organization.

With the opening of The Bee Junior league last Sunday, when six of the eight teams started ball to rolling considerable interest was shown by the youngsters and it was necessary to form another league.

Second Division. Division two will probably also consist of eight teams, as the J. B. Roots division, managed by Eugene Coubrurier, have applied by a franchise and the Vinton Cubs, a team between the age of 15 and 16 years will likely enter this week. Bill LaChapelle is manager of that team.

If both the Roots and the Cubs enter the second division they will probably stage their game Decoration day or play a "twilight" game some evening. The postponed game between the Beemis Park's and the R. A. M.'s, scheduled for last Sunday will likely be staged Decoration day. It will be announced in The Bee. Tuesday should these teams play.

Blozier's President. William O. Blozier, amateur sport writer of The Bee, was elected president of the association, while Leo McCabe, secretary of division one, and Frank Birby of division two were chosen secretaries of the association to assist the president in handling protests and other business.

It is planned to stage a series of games between the winners of each division at the close of the regular playing schedule to determine the championship of the association. Teams are requested to watch the sport page of The Bee for announcements as to meetings and other details of the association. Managers of each division are urged to telephone their secretaries the result of other games as soon as possible; telephone Secretary McCabe's telephone number is Tyler 3850, while Secretary Baird's is Harney 1113.

Today's Games. Following is where the teams of division one and two play today:

DIVISION ONE. Thirty-first and Ames Avenue—Charles Street Merchants against Locust Street Merchants. Foundelle Park—Brandeis Juniors against Fort Omaha Merchants. Lulus Park—Suburbans against R. A. M. Creighton Field—West Dodge Dairy against Bemis Park.

DIVISION TWO. Central High School grounds—Slogs Juniors against Farnam Candy Company. Twenty-third and Vinton Street—Omaha Merchants against Suburbans. Twenty-ninth and Hurst streets—Liberty Juniors against Leavenworth Merchants Juniors. The games in each division will start promptly at 10 o'clock.

Trained Blueberries and Wild Ones in Demand. Washington.—How about some trained blueberries? If you have any to notch wild ones, says the American Forestry association, get in touch with Miss Elizabeth C. White, of New Lisbon, N. J., who is cultivating blueberries. She has them now as big as three-quarters of an inch through, but she wants to do better.

The blueberry is a peculiar fellow. Many of the new varieties are poorer than the parents and about one in 1,000 turns out better than either parent, which is no nice way for the children to do if we are to get any.

Then, too, the blueberry will not behave at all on a well-balanced soil. They require a sour or acid soil and are killed by fertilizer that would help most anything else along. Now Miss White has asked the American Forestry association to help her find some wild, wild blueberry plants, so she Miss White for correct shipping instructions at once.

Amateurs Start on Second Round of Play Here Today

By WILLIAM O. BLOZIER. Teams of the City, American, Booster, Inter-City and Gate City leagues, members of the Municipal Amateur Base Ball association, will start on the second round of their playing schedules this afternoon, and the following teams, Bowen Furniture's, City league, Townsends, Gate City league, Harding Cream company and Highland Park Pharmacy, Inter-City league, will have the honor of starting round two with a clean sweep of victories.

The Ramblers, who are leading the Booster league with four victories, have no play this afternoon as this is their day of rest in the league on account of a seven team organization.

Strong Teams Mix. Followers of the national pastime who have been anxious to see the Greater Omaha league teams play, will have the opportunity to witness the opening contest in that organization this afternoon at Thirty-second and Dewey avenues, when the Murphy-Did-Its and the Nebraska Power Co. teams lock horns.

This will be the only contest in the crack class A circuit and as considerable rivalry exists between these two clubs, a fast and snappy contest is expected. Neither Manager Kasper or Manager Gerhardt would state who they would send to the firing line but both are predicting victory for this afternoon.

The Power company team practically consists of the members of the famous old Ramblers of the National league, who several years ago were defeated by their derby slugging in class A circles, when that team was under the charge of Otto Pecha. They were a scrappy and game bunch of ball players and won the heart of every amateur fan.

Davidson to Pitch. It was announced last night that prior to the opening game, J. E. Davidson, vice-president and general manager of the Nebraska Power Co. would pitch the first ball and Bert Murphy, backer of the Murphy-Did-Its, will try and catch Davidson's delivery.

As a preliminary to the Greater Omaha league contest, the Townsends, leaders of the Gate City league in class C circuit will fight the Harney Cream team, who have not been defeated this season by any team in the Inter-City league, will clash with the John Day Rubber company for the second time this season. Although the rubber lads have won but one game thus far they are confident of pulling out a victory. The Inter-City afternoon, as they have added some new material to their line-up and will spring a few "dark horses" on their opponents.

Considerable rivalry exists between the Highland Park Pharmacy's and the Harley-Davidson aggregation, as the latter club has a hard fought battle is anticipated when these two teams meet at 1:30 o'clock at Miller park.

At Luxus Park. Four of the seven teams in the Booster league will be seen in action at Luxus park and all of the games promise to be of great interest. The initial contest will be put on by the Trimble Bros. of "Sheeley and the Daily News" team, tall of the league, while the second battle is scheduled between the Manly Milling company and the World-Herald team. Both Manager Krakowski of the Trimbles and Manager Hiron of the Milling outfits predict that their teams will be at the big end of the score when their games are over.

The game between the Union Outfitting company and the Willard Storage Battery, scheduled at Fontenelle park, will be a real treat for the fans and probably the feature game in the City league. The Storage Battery boys are out for revenge over the 6 to 3 defeat handed them at the opening of the season, and have been practicing hard during the week. Manager Bascall of the Outfitters says his warriors will be at the large end of the score when the game is finished. Elmer Nufer will again be seen in the box for the Outfitters, while George Easton, formerly with the Willard Storage Battery crew, will play against his former teammates.

At Miller Park. Although the McCaffery Motor company trounced the Mickel Victrolas at the opening game of the season by a lopsided score of 18 to 1, Manager Walter Pates of the latter crew says they will not do it again, when they meet in the second game of the season this afternoon at Miller park. A pitcher's battle is expected as two of the crack twirlers in the city will oppose each other. Bill Gooten will do the heaving for the Mickels, while Jimmy Moore will be on the firing line for the Motor lads.

At Riverview park at 3:30 o'clock the Paxton-Vierlings, leaders of the American league, will meet the Sample-Harts and a hard-fought game can be expected, as the teams are evenly matched. Manager Frank Hubatka, the old "war horse" of the motor team announced last night that he is confident that his crew will even up matters with the iron workers. Scheaf will do the hurling, and as he is in the best of form, the opponents will find his curves hard to hit.

Strengthen Rubber Team. In the opening game at Riverview park the Harney Cream team, who have not been defeated this season by any team in the Inter-City league, will clash with the John Day Rubber company for the second time this season. Although the rubber lads have won but one game thus far they are confident of pulling out a victory. The Inter-City afternoon, as they have added some new material to their line-up and will spring a few "dark horses" on their opponents.

Considerable rivalry exists between the Highland Park Pharmacy's and the Harley-Davidson aggregation, as the latter club has a hard fought battle is anticipated when these two teams meet at 1:30 o'clock at Miller park.

At Luxus Park. Four of the seven teams in the Booster league will be seen in action at Luxus park and all of the games promise to be of great interest. The initial contest will be put on by the Trimble Bros. of "Sheeley and the Daily News" team, tall of the league, while the second battle is scheduled between the Manly Milling company and the World-Herald team. Both Manager Krakowski of the Trimbles and Manager Hiron of the Milling outfits predict that their teams will be at the big end of the score when their games are over.

The game between the Union Outfitting company and the Wil-

Sandlot Base Ball Gossip

The Ernle Holmes crew will play at Griswold, Ia., today. Bill Goodro, star heater for the Mickel Victrolas, is pitching gut-side ball this season.

In W. Short, La Chapelle, Eckmiller and Sinclair, the Vinton Cubs have an infield hard to beat.

The Holmes White Sox defeated the crack Herman, Neb. team last Sunday by a score of 7 to 1.

Teams wishing to secure games with Portsmouth, Ia., address Dan Doyle, manager, at that place.

McIntyre, playing right field for the Union Outfitters, made a pair of nifty catches in the outfield.

Fred Ziegler has attached his name to the Mickel Victrolas' contract, and will be seen in the box for the Outfitters.

The hitting of Greko and the pitching of Barry featured for the Hien Bleat team last Saturday against the Bemis Bag team at the Fontenelle.

In Hoffman, Grimm and Hiatt, Manager Pates of the Mickel Victrolas claims the best of the fontenelle in the City league.

The Mickel Victrolas had the Bowen Furniture outfit play in the department of the game, but lost in the final round on scraps.

Ernie Langer, on the mound for the Ernle Holmes last Sunday, allowed the heavy hitting Herman team but three hits.

Decorations day the Holmes will play the best of form at Plattsmouth, Neb., playing one game in the morning and the other in the afternoon.

Walter Nufer at corner two for the Union Outfitting team made his first error of the season when he slipped, trying to field a hard hit by the catcher.

Leo Klinge, well known in local amateur base ball circles and a member of the University of Illinois, has signed a contract with the Ernle Holmes.

Scheaf will do the hurling for the Sample-Harts this afternoon, and as he is in the best of form the Paxton-Vierlings crew will find his curves hard to hit.

Guinotte, Union Outfitting catcher, is sure to play some ball this year. He fields good, has a perfect throw to the bases and holds the ball on the nose.

Liberty Munch won his place in the "Hall of Fame" last Sunday when he drove out some run with the sack loaded. He is connected with the Sample-Harts.

will be ready for the teams to play on within a few days.

Eugene Holmes, catcher for the Saunier Park outfit, has had several offers to play with the crack Class C team, but he has declined them.

Secretary James Milota of the Municipal Base Ball association and former manager of the Brown Park Merchants' team, left for Chicago for a western business trip.

Following is the line-up of the Ernle Holmes: Catcher, Ernest Holmes; first, second, O'Keefe; first, G. Sutej; third, Hubbrook; catcher, Martin; left, right, Eugene Wiman, who several seasons ago, was one of the hurlers for the Rube Rube's team, and who pitched a few games this season for thirty O'Connell's Brandeis team.

The City Base Ball league at Beatrice held a meeting last week and elected Dr. G. H. Branch president, V. R. Johnson secretary and Harry Hill treasurer.

The league consists of eight teams and the prospects point to a most successful season.

Teams wishing notes in these columns are urged to send them to Bill Blozier, care of The Bee, Thursday of each week, and in reporting scores of Saturday and Sunday games managers are requested to telephone Wainwright 2625 not later than 10 o'clock.

Where the Amateur Teams Play Today

Greater Omaha League. Thirty-first and Ames Avenue—Charles Street Merchants vs. Nebraska Power Co.—3:30 p. m. City League. Fontenelle Park—Union Outfitting Co. vs. Willard Storage Battery, 5:00 p. m. Thirty-first and Ames Avenue—McCaffery Motor Co., 3:30 p. m. Elmwood Park, East Diamonds—Bowen Furniture Co. vs. Omaha Printing Co., 3:30 p. m. American League. Riverview Park—Sample-Harts vs. Paxton-Vierlings, 3:30 p. m. Elmwood Park, West Diamonds—Union Outfitting Co. vs. J. B. Roots, 5:00 p. m. Thirty-first and Ames Avenue—American Railway Express vs. Riggs Outfitters, 3:30 p. m. Booster League. Lulus Park—Daily News vs. Trimble Bros., 1:30 p. m. Manly Milling Co. vs. World-Herald, 3:30 p. m. Thirty-first and Ames Avenue—Leavenworth Merchants vs. Leavenworth Merchants, 1:30 p. m. Inter-City League. Riverview Park—Harding Cream Co. vs. John Day Rubber Co., 1:30 p. m. B. & V. cafe, 1:30 p. m. Anderson Drug Co. vs. Boddess, 1:30 p. m. Miller Park—Highland Park Pharmacy vs. Omaha Printing Co., 1:30 p. m. Gate City League. Thirty-second and Dewey Avenue—Townsends vs. Vinton Street Merchants, 1:30 p. m. Blinnon Co. Park—East diamonds, McKenney Dentists vs. Omaha Printing Juniors, 1:30 p. m. west diamonds, Originals vs. Boddess, 1:30 p. m.

Dry Goods, Not Wet, Now. Akron, O.—From a ratskeller to a dry goods store in two months. Akron's most famous dispensing place of liquors, which since the civil war had been known as the V. B. & V. cafe, anticipating statewide prohibition, closed its doors

Willard's Photograph Belies Stories That Champion Is Not in Good Shape

Three interesting photographs of Jess Willard, heavyweight champion of the world. The center photograph shows him in his training camp in Los Angeles, where the champion was going through the first stages of his training for his coming championship mill with Jack Dempsey July 4. The photograph belies the recent reports that the champion was hot fat and out of condition. The insert on the right is one of the few pictures published showing the champion in cowboy costume. He is shown with a little Indian baby, a member of the champion's wild west show troupe. The insert on the left is a good likeness of Willard. It was made at his Los Angeles training camp.

From The Sporting Editor. A Remington typewriter advertisement featuring a photograph of a man sitting at a desk with a typewriter. The text says "From The Sporting Editor" and "Remington".

Now it develops that Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey may not be restricted to a 12-round center when they meet for the heavyweight championship at Toledo July 4. While the boxing commission of the Ohio city has granted a few licenses for bouts of greater length than 12 rounds there is no restriction to the distance if the commission cares to affirm a struggle of that kind. It is up to the commission entirely, and it may be that Tex Rickard will be able to prevail upon the Toledo officials to lengthen the argument to the accepted 20 rounds.

Rickard does not have to make any announcement regarding the extension of the bout, since the articles call for a fight of any distance up to 45 rounds. It will make little difference to Dempsey, who is confident that the further the fight goes the more certain he is to knock Willard loose from his crown. Willard is supremely confident that he can win in conversation with friends recently. Willard could not conceive of the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence may work more harm than good, for it may keep him from training as diligently as he would otherwise. Willard has advised Rickard of his confidence in the possibility of losing. He believes himself supreme in the ring and has no great respect for Dempsey. His overconfidence