BUDGET SYSTEM ADVOCATED FOR UNITED STATES

Former Reserve Bank Governor Tells Credit Men This Necessary to Effect Greater Economy.

Detroit, Mich., June 10.—A national budget system was advocated by Paul M. Warburg, former vice governor of the Federal Reserve board, addressing the opening session of the National Association of Credit Men here today, as the only means of effecting greater economy in the national administration.

Mr. Warburg likened the financial administration of the government to a department store where chiefs of various sections entered into commitments obligating the corporation without knowledge of what expenditures were being undertaken in other departments.

"That," continued the speaker, "substantially is the condition of the United States. The financial methods of our government must undergo a thorough reorganization. Our future as world bankers offers opportunities which baffle imagination.

"We should have a permanent board to co-ordinate the estimated income and expenditures," Mr. Warburg declared. American trade acceptances were destined to play an important part in promoting American trade throughout the world.

this is only the beginning," he said. American business, he concluded, must husband its resources and concentrate its efforts on doing the constructive things, based on production and saving, rather than be lured on by fictitious prosperity born of easy money and unnecessary inflation of credit and prices.
