

POLICE CLASH WITH ATTORNEY IN COURT ROOM

Near Riot Breaks Out When Officer Grapples With H. H. Claiborne, Attorney for Man Discharged.

An attempt by Police Court Sergeant John Holden to wrench two revolvers from the hands of H. H. Claiborne, attorney, resulted in a near riot in police court yesterday morning that was only put down with the assistance of several policemen.

The two revolvers were held as evidence against Felix Seldana, who had retained Claiborne as his counsel. Seldana, who was charged with being keeper of an ill-governed house, was discharged, and Attorney Claiborne was in the act of taking the two revolvers to the desk sergeant for a release to turn the guns back to Seldana, when Holden interfered.

Shouts For Assistance. The two men grappled. Claiborne shouted for assistance and a crowd in the police court rushed to his assistance. They were stopped by several policemen.

Acting Police Judge Holmes rushed through the crowd and separated the two men.

Claiborne's hands were cut and bleeding in many places. "Claiborne said he was not going to take the guns to the desk sergeant," said Holden. "If he didn't sign for the guns it would cost me at least $40, as I am responsible for the evidence held."

Fight Follows Argument. The fight between Claiborne and Holden followed a heated argument between the two and Attorney J. R. Lones. The two attorneys declared they had been refused the right to see clients held at the jail.

"I wish you would tell me why the police have more jurisdiction over this court than the court itself," shouted Lones at Acting Police Judge Holmes. "As it is now we can't see any man locked up here for trial unless a police captain has no objections."

Judge Holmes ordered Lones' client produced.

My Heart and My Husband

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

What Does Alfred Really Think of Rita Brown?

"Oh, somebody say something or I shall scream!" she said petulantly. "Do you realize that we've all been sitting here absolutely silent for 10 whole minutes?"

I think there was unconscious resentment in every glance turned upon her. I know that for myself her exaggerated statement disturbed the contemplation of a rare picture, that framed by the screened veranda at the rear end of the Durkee home. There are many gnarled old apple and pear trees in the grounds surrounding the houses purchased by Dicky and Alfred Durkee, and the spring, unusually mild, had brought extremely early and abundant blossoming. The exquisite beauty of their drifting pink and white petals against the tender first green of the other trees, the vista of greenward between them stretching down to the sparkling waters of the little lake at the foot of the gardens, made a vision which I for one grasped jealously, knowing that at best it could last but a few days, and that another long year would elapse before the wonder and the glory of apple-blossom time came back again.

It was a picture which could not help stir the pulses of the artist, and I had seen rapt enjoyment in Dicky's eyes as he stretched his lazy length in one of Mrs. Durkee's comfortable veranda chairs and pulled at his after dinner cigar. Alfred Durkee, also smoking, registered the same contemplative enjoyment, while my father's tired, strained face relaxed for a little from the mental burden which I knew he was carrying as he gave himself up to the beauty spread out before him.

Dicky Protests. Edith and Leila Fairfax, my mother-in-law, volatile Mrs. Durkee—not one of the group gathered on the Durkee veranda after a most delectable dinner—had evinced the slightest impulse to speak after the first involuntary exclamations at the beauty of the view. Rita Brown's petulant exclamation was like a rude hand deflecting the bow of a master violinist to a discordant note.

Both Dicky and Alfred Durkee, however, answered her challenge at once, although indolently. Neither rose from his seat, but both took their cigars from their mouths, spoke almost simultaneously.

"Say not so, Rita," Dicky drawled. "There are six women in this crowd. Ten minutes' silence! Nay! Nay!"

Alfred's reply held a different note. "Don't you like our pet view, Rita?" he asked, and I wondered as I heard his voice, saw the expression on his face, if his mother had been right for the first time in her ridiculous guesses, and if Alfred Durkee really cared for the girl just now turning her lovely bored face to his.

"Oh, of course, it's a beautiful effect!" she retorted carelessly, flashing a brilliant provocative smile at him. "The coloring—"

"Rita!" Dicky sat upright and shook a protesting fist at her. "I warn you, I'll stand for a good many things from you but I won't listen to any jargon about 'effects' and 'coloring,' and all the other patter you have at your tongue's end. This is my day of rest, and I don't want any suggestion of me trade running around loose. If you can't stand it any longer without conversation I'll turn on the spigot, and furnish you selections of the choicest brands. But if you love me, prate not of 'effects' when you've had the chance to look at anything like this."

But Alfred Responds

He indicated the drifting blossoms, the lake vista with a careless wave of the hand, but I knew him well enough to guess that he was annoyed at the girl's intrusion into his contemplative reverie. "But I don't love you," the girl replied with a mocking look at me. "I never saw to love a married man—when his wife's around. It's only Alfred that I love, and I know he's coming over here to talk to me, so you can keep your fascinating conversation to yourself. And I'll not forgive you in a hurry either for your patter and your jargon stuff."

"I'll kill him on the way over if you say so, Rita," Alfred Durkee said, as he rose and made his way to the girl's side.

It was all the veriest playful nonsense, but again something in Alfred Durkee's face and voice made me wonder what were his real feelings toward Rita Brown.

DIVORCE ASKED BY COMMON-LAW WIFE OF FARMER

Mrs. Grace Blum Asks Half of Husband's Property Valued at $75,000; Charges Cruelty.

John Blum, Jr., a wealthy farmer and stock man of Millard, was sued today in district court by his common-law wife, Grace Blum, for a divorce and half of his property, valued at $75,000.

Sophus Nebel, Jr., attorney for Mrs. Blum, secured a restraining order from District Judge Day, to keep Blum from molesting his wife in their home. Blum is reported to have said the sheriff would have to take his dead body from his home, declaring he would fight to resist the order.

The Blums entered into the relation of man and wife in 1916. Mrs. Blum alleges that he told her he didn't believe in the marriage ceremony. She had been married before, and her daughter went to live in the Blum home and took the name of Blum.

Mrs. Blum alleges that during the last two years her husband has spent his spare time in saloons, playing cards; that he has applied vile epithets to her; that he has not bought her wearing apparel without first fighting and yelling at her so that the neighbors could hear; and that he threatened to kick her out of their home.

She says that by their joint efforts they have accumulated a large amount of property valued at about $75,000, and that her husband has an income of $500 a month.

Mr. Hunt says the copy which he brought here is one of the original draft and was obtained in Paris. He says it is quite easy to obtain German translations of the treaty in Germany and neutral countries.

Another American correspondent abroad also secured and mailed a full copy of the treaty, but the British censor held it up. A complaint in the matter will be officially made today to the foreign relations committee of the senate.

Assisting Britishers in preparing for the reception of the dirigible in this country will be a staff of American aviation officers' and mechanics.

GAS CO. HEARING BEGUN BEFORE THREE JUDGES

Galaxy of Attorneys Represents Corporation in Arguments Before Condemnation Board.

The Board of Condemnation, which will determine the price at which the city of Omaha can acquire the plant of the Omaha Gas company began work yesterday in district court room No. 7 in the court house.

On the bench were Judge Allen of Madison, Neb., former United States senator; Judge E. E. Good of Wahoo, and Judge George Day of the district court of Douglas county. These compose the board.

The gas company is represented by a galaxy of attorneys, including W. H. Alderman and Judge W. D. McHugh of Omaha, J. W. Dana of Kansas City, and W. T. Douthitt of Philadelphia, representing the United Improvement company, principal owners of the Omaha Gas company. Mr. Douthitt is a director of the Omaha Gas company.

Lambert Represents City. Corporation Counsel Lambert was the sole representative of the city of Omaha. Mayor Smith was present for a time as a spectator.

Two experts who have been at work for a year making an inventory of the company's property were present. They are Clinton S. Burns and H. L. Baldwin, both of Kansas City.

Mr. Lambert reviewed briefly the manner in which the case has come up as a result of a vote of more than 18,000 in favor of the city purchasing the gas plant, and only about 3,000 against this move in the election of May 7, 1919.

It is proposed to take the testimony of the city's witnesses and then take an adjournment of a week or two before cross examination of the witnesses by the gas company attorneys. A similar adjournment is to be taken between the examination of the gas company witnesses and the city's attorneys.

London Doctor Says Fat Men Should Wear Corsets

London, June 10.—Men with a paunch should wear corsets. That was the advice of Dr. Leonard Williams gave the Peace Nursery and Mid-wifery conference. His reason is based upon health principles. "Aboriginal man," said Dr. Williams, "certainly was a four-footed animal. The abdominal construction was intended for that posture. Since human beings began to walk on their hind legs the position of abdominal organs had been thrown out of gear."

"People who take plenty of outdoor exercise and athletes might get on very well without corsets, but persons who live a sedentary life require some kind of support as given by corsets."

Dr. Williams said people who wore tight collars prevented proper draining of their brains and thereby suffered bad tempers.

"Since women gave up wearing tight collars they have become sweeter tempered," he said.

Federal Court Permits 150 Pickets at Factory

According to the order, no more than 50 can be on duty at one time, with a maximum of six to be stationed at one gate, and all must be citizens of the United States.

The court ruled that in the event of disorder, attributable to pickets, the right of picketing will be abolished altogether.

PRESCRIPTION WAS WRITTEN 60 YEARS AGO

The True History of Father John's Medicine

One of the interesting places in Lowell, Mass., is the old apothecary shop on Merrimack street, established in 1827. This location is still a drug store, although of course modernized in many departments. The old prescription books, however, have been preserved and form an interesting record covering nearly a century.

The Old Drug Store

Perhaps one of the most interesting books is that of the year 1855. On one of the pages of this book, that dates June 9th, 1855, is written the original prescription for Father John's Medicine. This prescription was compounded for the Reverend Father John O'Brien at the old drug store on that date, and was so successful in treating Father John's ailment, which was a severe cold and throat trouble, that he recommended the medicine to his friends and parishioners. In going to the store and calling for the medicine, they always asked for Father John's Medicine, and in this way the medicine got its name and was advertised.

Father John's Medicine is a safe family medicine for colds, coughs, throat troubles, and as a tonic and body builder, because it does not contain opium, morphine, chloroform, and any other poisonous drugs, or alcohol, but is all pure, wholesome nourishment.

SPARKS GAINS TWENTY-FOUR POUNDS HE SAYS

Contracting Painter Says He Has Best of Reasons for Praising Tanlac.

"Not in years," said J. W. Sparks, a well known contracting painter of 1611 Washington street, Kansas City, Missouri, while in the Owl Drug Store, recently, "have I enjoyed such good health or felt so well generally as I do now and I want the people to know that it is all because of what Tanlac has done for me."

"For a long time," he added, "I had suffered from indigestion and had very little appetite. My food just seemed to lay in my stomach like lead and form a sour gas that would bloat me all up and press on my heart almost cutting off my breath. Then I had a severe attack of grippe which left me in such a run-down, weakened condition that I couldn't do any work. There were intense pains in my back. I couldn't sleep, and my stomach was so weak and upset that I could hardly eat anything. After taking the usual treatment for such troubles and using a number of different kinds of medicines, without any relief, I decided to take a trip, thinking a change of climate and surroundings might help me, but nothing did me any good."

"Seeing Tanlac endorsed by so many people right here in my own town put me to thinking there must be something to it. So I got a bottle and it helped me so much that I bought another, then another and so on until now I have taken four bottles and can not only eat just anything, but I have actually gained twenty-four pounds in weight. My stomach never troubles me now no matter what I eat, and my old time energy and strength have come back to me. My nerves have also gotten back to normal, but before I got Tanlac the least noise or unusual occurrence would almost distract me. I now sleep like a log at night, eat heartily after every meal and feel fine all the time and so I have the best of reasons for praising Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Omaha by all Sherman & McConnell Drug Company's stores, Harvard Pharmacy and West End Pharmacy. Also Ford and Meany Drug Company in South Omaha and the leading drug store in each city and town throughout the state of Nebraska.—Adv.
