

CARL HAGENBECK COMBINED SHOWS TO BE HERE SOON

Famous Circus This Year Carries More Than 1,000 People and Uses Three Large Trains.

The billboards and dead walls about the city are proclaiming in all the eloquence of pictorial art that the Carl Hagenbeck and Great Wallace shows combined is to visit Omaha Monday, June 30, at Twenty-first and Paul streets.

The Carl Hagenbeck trained wild animals are famed in every nation on the globe. At the European headquarters of the show, London, England, the animals are transported after their capture and taught to perform remarkable feats.

Today he is rated as America's richest circusman. The assertion has never been questioned. Yet, with his many varied interests, he devotes his personal attention to the interests of the Hagenbeck-Wallace shows.

Man Both Ringer and Eberstein Say They "Can't Find" Makes Full Confession in Conspiracy Against Mrs. Thomas Brown.

Bootlegger, Who Boasts Police Are Afraid to Arrest Him Because He "Knows Too Much," in Signed Statement Tells How, at Instance of Detectives Armstrong and Herdzina, He Placed Whisky in Girls' Room and Was Then Allowed to Escape When Raid Was Pulled Off—Admits He Is Not Married to Woman - He Claimed As His Wife—Says Officers Were Drunk.

Conscience stung, Roy Kelly at at the 11th hour has made a clean breast of the cowardly and criminal conspiracy between himself and Detectives Herdzina and Armstrong to brand the Mrs. Thomas Brown flats at Twenty-first and Cass streets as a disorderly house.

Kelly, who is an acknowledged bootlegger and who has boasted of selling whisky in Omaha under police protection, is only 18 years old. In a signed statement pleading that his conscience would not allow him to remain silent longer, the boy tells the details of the sordid story of the conspiracy instigated by the two detectives, whom Commissioner Ringer is defending for having entered the Brown flats, after having framed up to show that the house owned by Mrs. Thomas Brown at 2106 Cass street is a place of prostitution.

Kelly asserts that he has been in Omaha ever since he was allowed to make his escape early on the morning of June 6. He has talked to scores of policemen, who read Mr. Ringer's statement last week that he had been rearrested and was being held at the city jail. The policemen also knew Judge Foster ordered Kelly arrested on sight.

Kelly has been riding around the city every day in his automobile without fear of arrest. He was told he would not be called on to testify at the Brown trial. He was led to believe he was not wanted to appear at the council hearing of the case against Herdzina and Armstrong.

Kelly declared he is going to leave Omaha to start life over again. He tells how Detectives Herdzina and Armstrong approached him late on the night of June 5. They asked him to take them for a ride in his car.

Kelly says he drove the two detectives around the city for a while when they suggested getting some whisky. The officers procured several bottles of liquor and drank with the boy until three of them were drunk, he declared.

Kelly says that he objected, because the girl whom he had represented to be his wife, was staying in the house. The officers told him to call up and have the girl to get out of the house.

Kelly's Statement

On the night of June 5, 1919, I met Detectives Herdzina and Armstrong in the vicinity of 2106 Cass street. I was unable to say what the exact time was, but I would judge that it was about an hour before the officers made the raid on the house.

The detectives told me that they wanted me to take them for a ride. I had nothing in particular to do, and invited them into my car. Later they obtained several bottles of whisky. I do not know where they got the liquor. They insisted on my drinking until I was intoxicated. Both of the officers were intoxicated.

I was allowed to escape according to my previous arrangement with Herdzina and Armstrong. I would never have agreed to this arrangement if the officers had not gotten me drunk. I do not know how long I could not do some of the things I wanted to do if I did not remain on friendly terms with the members of the police force.

My motive for making the above statement is that I do not want to see innocent persons victimized by these two detectives, whose purpose, in my opinion, was to incur favor with their superiors at the expense of those living in the Brown flats.

I feel I have done these parties a grave injustice and am taking this mean to right the wrong. I am leaving this part of the country to start life over again.

Herdzina and Armstrong gave him the bottle of liquor to place in the room occupied by Mrs. Esther Applegate and Mrs. Helena Baldwin, who were taken to jail with Miss Elsie Kubat and Miss Wilma Reed, with Mrs. Thomas Brown and her son Thomas Brown, Jr. The girls were held for examination by Dr. Palmer Findley on orders of Commissioner Ringer and Chief of Police Eberstein, who have issued instructions to the captains at the police station that no woman who is arrested shall be allowed to furnish bond until it is determined whether or not they should be treated in the Women's Detention home.

These orders were issued by the heads of the police department despite the provision set forth in Commissioner Ringer's new Detention home ordinance that no woman shall be committed to prison in the Detention home until they have been convicted in open court.

Miss Reed is still being held in the Detention home, though Dr. Findley announced the day following her arrest that she was not discharged.

Miss Reed's father was told by one of the detectives at the police station his daughter was being held because the heads of the department were afraid she would talk too much about the Brown case. He was told his daughter was not discharged and that she would be released after the city council had heard the case against Detectives Herdzina and Armstrong.

Miss Reed was forced to sign a statement exonerating the members of the police department after she had been given a grueling third degree. This statement she has repudiated.

His statement in full follows: "On the night of June 5, 1919, I met Detectives Herdzina and Armstrong in the vicinity of 2106 Cass street. I was unable to say what the exact time was, but I would judge that it was about an hour before the officers made the raid on the house.

The detectives told me that they wanted me to take them for a ride. I had nothing in particular to do, and invited them into my car. Later they obtained several bottles of whisky. I do not know where they got the liquor. They insisted on my drinking until I was intoxicated. Both of the officers were intoxicated.

I was allowed to escape according to my previous arrangement with Herdzina and Armstrong. I would never have agreed to this arrangement if the officers had not gotten me drunk. I do not know how long I could not do some of the things I wanted to do if I did not remain on friendly terms with the members of the police force.

CLASSES RAID AS TRESPASS ON OWNER'S RIGHTS

Court Rules Testimony Falls to Show Any Evidence of Wrongdoing at 2106 Cass Street.

(Continued From Page One.) fer in my court," declared Judge Holmes. "Have you never heard the story of Mary Magdalen?" The court asked the two insistent prosecutors.

It was a bad day all around for the prosecution. Judge Holmes at the outset insisted that the prosecution speed up, and stop sparring for time. When the state had concluded its testimony, Attorney Magney and the judge asked for the report referred to last week by Captain John T. Dunn, and in which Captain Vanous stated that the Brown flats were watched six nights and nothing wrong observed.

"I move for a dismissal of this case on the grounds that the prosecution has not made a case," said Attorney Magney.

"Where is that report that was referred to?" asked the judge. "Is there anything to conceal in this report? Does the witness refuse to bring the report in. I recall that witness testified that the Brown place was observed six nights before the raid and that the officers did not see anything wrong."

Failed to Prove Case. In support of his motion for dismissal Mr. Magney said: "It is my firm conviction that the state has not proved its case."

During a discussion on the motion for dismissal the following dialogue ensued: Judge Holmes: "Mrs. Brown is charged with a serious offense and she is entitled to the benefit of any doubt. Isn't it incumbent upon the state to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that she had knowledge of the things charged in the complaint?"

Attorney Magney: "Detectives Armstrong and Herdzina did not testify to the same facts, although they were together at the time of the raid. I can't reconcile their testimony. Is this the best the city can do, to go to Iowa for witnesses to appear in a misdemeanor case? The state's case is flimsy and weak. I am within my rights when I insist that Mrs. Brown be dismissed here, and now."

Prosecutor Mossman: "It is wrong to infer that either Armstrong or Herdzina lied, because they happened to differ in their evidence as to whether a woman wore slippers or whether she was barefooted. It may be that these men are not used to seeing women in dishabille."

Judge Herdmann: "There hasn't been any evidence of prostitution; there may have been some indications. There is something about this case I don't understand. The officers who made the first investigation were there a week and found nothing wrong, according to the report. Then two other men were sent and they used their own construction on what they believed constituted an illegitimate house. Nothing has been shown in the testimony that Mrs. Brown had any knowledge of the character of the tenants, and it seems strange that these officers took the word of the so-called inmates, as to who was the keeper of the place. It was said many years ago that every man's home is his castle. What was the cause of the officers going to this woman's home and taking her out of bed? It seems to me that these officers unlawfully trespassed on the rights of this defendant, when they arrested her and took her to the police station. Whether or not it was a disorderly house, seems to have been left entirely to the discretion of the arresting officers."

Prosecutor Mossman: Why does the court ignore the presence of men and women in a room together at 1:30 a. m.?" Judge Holmes: "It is not a legal question."

Wash That Itch Away We know of no sufferer from Eczema who ever used the simple wash D. D. D. and did not feel immediately that wonderful calm, cool sensation that comes when the itch is taken away. How to Acquire Hair Beauty You can enjoy a delightful shampoo with very little effort and for a very trifling cost, if you get from your druggist a package of canthox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to the hair. You shampoo as you would your head. Your shampoo is now ready. Just pour a little at a time on the scalp and hair until both are entirely covered by the daintily perfumed preparation that thoroughly dissolves and removes every bit of dandruff, excess oil and dirt. After rinsing, the hair dries quickly with a fluffiness that makes it seem heavier than it is, and takes on a rich luster and a softness that makes arranging it a pleasure.—Adv.

presumption that they were necessary there for immoral purposes." The court held that the prosecution had not shown that Mrs. Brown knowingly permitted any wrongdoing in her flats.

When the prosecution introduced Policeman Fred Palmtag, Judge Holmes was moved again to express himself in forceful language. Palmtag was sworn as a witness to testify to the reputation of a young woman who was arrested at the time of the raid at 2106 Cass street.

"If this line of testimony would be admitted, it would tend to blacken the character of a young woman who may have reformed. Did you ever hear of the Mary Magdalen?" the judge asked of the prosecutor. Palmtag was excused. Pearl Tisher, another witness for the state, testified that she lived one year in the Brown flats. On one evening she overheard three men arguing in an automobile outside of the Brown place.

"Never heard anything wrong inside," she testified. "What is the use of taking up the time of this court with this kind of witnesses?" asked the court. Miss Tisher was excused.

Witness Excused. Miss Delta Tillman, resident of the Young Woman's Christian association home at 2106 Cass street, started to testify, but when she admitted that all she had ever heard of the reputation of the Brown flats was gossip inside of her own place of residence, the court ordered her excused and her testimony stricken from the records.

Alice M. Mason, house secretary of the association home, 2106 Cass street, testified that she heard taxicabs stop at 2106 Cass street. "What do you know of 2106 Cass street as a place frequented by immoral women?" was asked of the witness.

"Only what was told to me." "Did you ever make any complaint to the officials?" "I never made a complaint." "Do you think that all of the taxicabs you heard stopped at 2106?" "No, not all of them."

The judge asked the witness if she knew anything of her own knowledge, and she admitted that she did not, whereupon Attorney Magney entered strenuous objections to the prosecution introducing witnesses whose information was based on hearsay and gossip.

Federal Officials Seize Liquor Sent to Nebraska Farmer With John Gelnarty, Broadwater, Neb., it is going to be a long time between drinks, for his supply of whisky, presumably for use during harvest time, has been taken over by the investigation bureau of the Department of Justice.

When a well-nailed box, two feet square sent by the Italo-American Importing company, St. Louis, and consigned to John Gelnarty reached the Burlington station, it was leaking badly and at the same time emitting an odor that indicated whisky.

Department of Justice officials were notified and responding, they took the box to the federal building, where it was found to contain a dozen quarts of liquor of the kind that was on sale prior to the time when Nebraska went dry. The stuff has been put into the vaults and will be held for government disposition.

Grand Island to Entertain. Members of the Nebraska Electric Light association will hold their annual meeting next Wednesday and Thursday at Grand Island.

J. E. Davidson, vice president and general manager of the Nebraska Power company, is president of the association. He will open the convention Wednesday morning. Representatives from nearly all the electric companies in the state will be in attendance. Manufacturers will arrange an exhibit for the two days of the meeting.

Walter Byrne, assistant sales manager of the Nebraska Power company, will address members of the association Thursday evening on "New Business."

TELEGRAPHERS SAY ADDITIONAL OPERATORS QUIT

Claim Men and Women Employes Joining Ranks Daily; Officials Report Conditions Improved.

Additions to the ranks of the strikers are being made daily, according to officials of the local Telegraphers' union now on strike.

Many of the telegraphers and girl multiplex operators have left their positions after refusing to obey the strike orders issued by the national president of the telegraphers.

Officials of both the Western Union Telegraph company and the Postal Telegraph and Cable company declare the situation improved.

In direct contradiction to the claims of the union these officials stated that many are deserting the strikers and returning to work.

Almost every local, comprising the Central Labor union have pledged support to the striking telegraphers and their helpers. Yesterday afternoon packing house operators promised financial aid to the commercial keymen.

Striking teamsters raised more than $100 for female strikers at a meeting in the Teamsters' hall Sunday afternoon.

A dance is being arranged for the striking telegraphers next Sunday.
