ROURKES USE 12 MEN, BUT LOSE TO OKLAHOMA CITY

Cooties Have Easy Time Winning Game, 10 to 2; New Player in Right Field Part Time.

Oklahoma City, June 19.—(Special Telegram.)—Southpaw hurling, as exemplified yesterday by Messrs. Townsend and Fuhr of the Omaha team, failed to puzzle Holland's tribe, the league leaders swatting the portside duo with much zest in a one-sided affair that ended with Oklahoma City on the long end of a 10-to-2 decision. Oklahoma City bunched five hits for four runs in the third, and added a second quar tet of tallies in the fifth when four blows, two for extra bases, were grouped with a walk and fielder's Hale was safe on Lindimore's error in the seventh, and Barbeau walked. Both moved up when Mason grounded to Adams. Hale scored on Spellman's out at first. and Gislason's double sent Barbeau acrossi Score: OMAHA.

W E ain't hep who is responsible for the peace treaty leak, but you can bet the cat's whiskers that it ain't Woody. Fourteen points is too thin a margin to play with down in Wall street.

There are yards of leaks down in that old percentage lane, but the big leak is the leak in old Joe Public's pocket. Which is what keeps the commission grabbers fatter than a 10-ham hog. The public has about as much chance in that old margin boulevard as a dish-faced champanzee in a beauty contest. When you're wrong you are wrong. And when you're right you are wrong.

When all the dope has been cancelled, the broker has his commission, the banker has his interest, and all you have is a stubby feeling in your check book. The old checkerino volume is as full of stubs as a corn field

Just when the small investor is figuring that he has discovered the footprints of a fortune, the brokers get their skulls together like door knobs in a hardware store and knock him loose from his toupee. when he is loitering around the suburbs of a bankroll the old-timers switch in the house dice and he goes dizzy by a huge majority. He grabs a life membership in a bread line with all his dues paid up and walks around making motions like a bird cutting out paper dolls for the wholesale and retail trade.

This is what Wall street calls a healthy reaction. Any time the public is sitting pretty with a little velvet piling up the brokers pull the ash pan out from under the bottom of the heater and the works go coo-coo. Your old bank roll shakes you pay-day and the broker wears a smile

If that's a healthy reaction, we'd hate to be to windward of an unrealthy one. Smell something like a Turkish cantonment in the garlic season. Here are a few of the healthy reactions that make the public ook like a twin getting his brother's sulphur and molasses. No wonder the small investors are walking Spanish. International Mercantile Marine had a healthy reaction and flopped from 29 to 116 in bout three wiggles of an eight-day clock. After seeing the old bank roll hop south, the small investor took off his smaller straw kelly and a new crop of butterflies fluttered out.

The reaction was healthy, but not for Gus Investor. Old General Motors was busted by the chief-of-staff and clattered from 243 to 211, indicating that the general ain't much more than a major at present. The reaction was so healthy that 56 margin jugglers rattled into a relapse and it took six stethoscopes to detect one murmur in their bank rolls. Studebaker started to get healthy around this time and acted like a busted Zepp. She sunk from 123 to 101, which is almost as bad as the Brooklyn Dodgers on a road trip.

Mexican Pete was knocked off from 205 to 178, which looks more like the size of a carary bird's collar than an oil stock. Atlantic Gulf stepped out with the other healthy guys and was 16 points lighter at the time of going to the epitaph carvers. Just about the time the obituary column went to press, American Wool was clipped from 123 to 110 and United States Steel was 7 points

All of which is catalogued under the head of fun and healthy reac-Yea, bo. If that's health, we'll take vanilla. If you lamp a bird with a face wrinkled like a Palm Beach suit that has been slept in, you can bet that he is the victim of a healthy reaction. He's old Philip Public and he's just got over an attack of healthy reaction-ing down in the street of narrow ticker tape and narrower margins.

It's sweet stuff for the brokers and accomplices, but it's tough pickings for the public. Which is only another reminder that a sucker should stick to his own game. Some suckers' game is being a sucker, but the barber should stick to his banjo lessons, the jamitor to his pinochle and the second lieuetenants to flirting. Every man to his own trade.

Describes His Early Experience With Deadly Grip and Gives His Manager Credit.

"Followers of wrestling believe that the toe hold is the most terrible grip in the game," says Dr. B. F. Roller, the famous physician-wrestler, "but that is an erroneous idea. The best hold in the game is the great Lewis headlock, perfected by Ed "Strangler' Lewis and his manager, Billy Sandow. This grip is the dread of all professional wrestlers "

When Lewis was training for his match with John Olin, a Chicago newspaper printed the following: "I have often been asked," says Ed "Strangler" Lewis, how and when I discovered the headlock.

"When Billy Sandow took charge of me, and started to make me a champion, he used to wrestle and coach me on the mat and constantly calling for speed, speed, speed, the word got to be like a whip on my back. It forced me to work and I got into the habit of fairly jumping up at my wrestling partners. Suddenly I discovered that by leaping into the air and at the same time putting on a headlock gave me a lot of force and when I tried it on my partners I pinned them to the mat in a jiffy.

"That was the real start of what is now called my headlock. I have studied for hours and hours on the mat to perfect that hold and finally found out just where to apply it After I perfected the headlock could not get wrestling partners to work with me, so my manager, Billy Sandow invented the wooden Many wrestlers have raised ob-ections to the headlock, stating the hold is brutal. This Lewis, of course, strenuously denies. "Exceptions cannot be taken to it on this ground," said he, "without including also the toe hold, and body and head scissors. I'll admit that my headlock may be a punishing hold but it is not nearly so brutal as the toe hold or the body scissors. I'll venture to say that Gotch and Stecher won 90 per cent of their matches with the toe hold and body their opponents 'resigned' before their shoulders were pinned to the mat. I have seen Stecher's opponents bleed from the ears, nose and mouth while he had them in the scissors, and Gotch's toe hold is, I think, the most painful known to sport. Yet neither of them are ever protested.

"As for me sneaking it into strangle hold, that's bunk. My rivals offer that contention merely to befog the real issue. I defy any referee in the world to pronounce my headlock a strangle."

At any rate the great "Lewis Headlock" has been perfected and to this day is the dread of all professional wrestlers.
