Calico Frocks

By Gertrude Beresford.

English print is the name under which the softer weaves of calico are traveling this summer. The charm of this material is particularly well exploited on the youthful figures of young girls. These frocks are mostly trimmed with picturesque fichus of organdie, either self-trimmed or trimmed with lace. Broad sashes of organdie tie in bows and long streamers at the back. The frock carries a new suggestion for trimming a fichu of organdie in the hand of tucks outlined with val insertion. This tucking continues into a sash, which is cut in one with the fichu, or which may be attached to it at the underarm seam. The vestee of white organdie is tucked and edged with val insertion. The gown itself is made in the plainest way. The sleeves are sewed in and the skirt is gathered to a belt of the material. The design of this print is particularly pleasing. A ground of coral pink is blocked in white and scattered with tiny green apples.

Rhubarb and Cherry Pie

Cut rhubarb fine and put in oven to dry. Cover a deep plate with rich crust, put in a layer of rhubarb and a layer of strawberries. Repeat till level full, add a heaping cupful of sugar and a few pieces of butter. Cover with upper crust and bake like an apple pie.

Dainty Fruit Salad.

Line a salad bowl with crisp lettuce leaves. Fill the bowl with shredded pineapple, orange sections and stoned dates or preserved cherries. Chill and serve without mustard and to which half a cupful of cream, whipped, has been added.
