Spellman Helps Omaha Crew With Circuit Drive: Connelly Gets One for Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia., July 7.-In one of the wildest ball games seen here in years, Omaha defeated Des Moines, 13 to 10, in eleven innings, and evened the series with the locals. Omaha tallied six runs in the first of the tenth while Des Moines came back and tied the count on heavy hitting. The visitors secured the victory in the eleventh frame by pushing over three tallies off the delivery of Musser.

THE YEAR OF THE BIG DROUTH.

W HILE the prohibs are stepping around pretty with a grin that you could hang earnings on the brawers are the with a grin that you could hang earrings on, the brewers are packing expressions that look like the claws of a hungry owl. The Dec of Independence chirps that all men are born free and equally

NO EXEMPTIONS.

Everybody is snared in the prohibeerinist draft and there are no outs The Willard-Dempsey battle at for silly feet or loose eyes. No exemptions for scrambled arches or wild Toledo, O., July 4, sets a new high whiskers in the toupee. Before the armistice the lads in uniform couldn't mark for purses, as the two fighters snitch a drink. Impossible to grab a glee powder in uniform. Which for their efforts. Tex wasn't the tough part. The corrugated part was to keep the drink in Rickard, the promoter, set the your uniform after you got it there. The headache foundries were previous high mark when he gave crocheting liquor out of everything from 17-year locusts to stuffed hair parlor sofas. After July we will all be in the army. There will be nothing to drink and millions to drink it.

STAGGERING HOME FROM A STAG.

There are some cits who could die of thirst in water up to their neckpieces. They'll be outta luck like a flea on an iron deer. There are a bunch of the birds we will miss though. F'r instance:

This bird would park his toes on the brass bar rail and inhale the snifters like a cow grabbing buttercups. About the 11th stanza he suddenly remembers that there wasn't any Santa Claus and would bust loose with a set of tears that looked like the Canadian side of Niagara Falls. His shoulders would shimmy with sorrow and his frame would rattle like a rheumatic darky in two gulf breezes. He'd cry until he had to swim and then he'd cry because he couldn't swim. Prohibition is the plumber that will fix this leak.

THE LEANING JAG. This cuckoo could make the Tower of Pisa look straighter than a left field foul line. After he had oiled up on a few dozen yards of nose rouge his cargo would shift and his left shoulder would swing up like a railroad semaphore signaling big wreck on west-bound siding. He'd start going around in circles like a glass-eyed zebra on a Coney Island carousel. This is a precarious souse, as all the responsibility is on one suspender

THE SINGING RUMMY.

After absorbing his quota of near beer and far beer this baby would decide that Caruso was all wet. He'd warm up on a few notes from the "Banks of the Wabash" and then clatter into "The Moss Covered Bucket." The more moss on the bucket the better. That showed it hadn't been used in a long while. After gargling a couple of verses from "Sweet Annaline" he would sing all he knew of "Home, Sweet Home." He knew Annaline he would slig an he she all of that song except the address.

THE KISSING SOUSERINO. Before slamming the door from the outside, this baby had to kiss the barkeep by-by. His evening wasn't complete unless he blew his gin-spangled breath on everybody in the works. Just as popular as camphor with a moth, but not quite so fragrant. He'd drink himself cross-eyed and then buzz, "Here's looking at you." When he was, he wasn't, and when he wasn't he was. What can you do with a sapp like that? These are only a few of the sapps that gummed the works for the regular guys who tried to drink a nightcap in the daytime. There were lots others, such as the fighting jag, the laughing souse and a hundred

"massed" athletics. That which made Carlysle famous in the days of Glen Warner, that which made berths at Annapolis and West Point coveted, that which, if you please, made the marines indomitable at Chateau Thierry is nothing more nor less than "mass athletics."

Nebraska woefully lacks this sort of athletic "craze." Yet it is the Nebraska woefully lacks this sort of athletic "craze." Yet it is the "mass" of high school and secondary colleges, running full blast throughout the state, small in attendance but keen in competition, that has furnished the superb development, the intensity of interest necessary to the success of Cornhusker football teams.

Henry Thomas Takes Forest City Stake With Natalie, the Great; Large Fields Are Feature.

Cleveland, O., July 7 .- The largest crowd which ever witnessed the opening of the Grand Circuit was on hand Monday afternoon to see Frank Dewey, b. h., by John Dewey, Walter Cox up, take the big end of the 2:08 pace for a purse of $3,000, the feature event on the card. Four-teen starters lined up for the word in the first heat, with the winner finishing in 13th place at the end of the mile. In the second heat he finished third and was 1-1 in the last two in 2:041-4 and 2:123-4. Harvester, a brown colt by The Harvester, with Will Fleming up, won the second heat and second money, pacing the mile in 2:04 1-4. O. U.
