"The advisory commission of seven men was throughout the war composed of at least three and probably four republicans, as was the huge majority of the council's com-mittees. The council's minutes, which I furnished to Mr. Graham's committee with the hearty consent of Secretary Baker, chairman of the council and voluntarily supplemented with those of the advisory committee, disclosed beyond any question that the council had in the most conservative way looked far ahead into the immediate future to the end of preparing the country for war. "It is my deliberate judgment that if the council, utilizing the greatest experts in the leading inlustries and utilizing them in a wholly nonpartisan way, had not taken its forehanded steps America would not have laid in time the oundation for mobilizing its industrial resources which made possible the winning of the war. Matter Decided Long Ago.

"The council's minutes having disclosed these facts to Mr. Graham, he addressed himself to the counmore than a year ago.
