

BOARD PLANS EXTENSION OF COMMERCE HIGH

Plans Being Made for Submission of Another Bond Issue at Election in September.

The Board of Education is considering the submission of another bond issue at the September primary election, to increase the size of the new High School of Commerce for which plans are being drawn.

No formal action has been taken, but the tentative proposal is to submit a proposition of not less than $500,000 and it may be $750,000. There is now in the school district treasury $850,000 for this new school. According to estimates, this amount will pay for a building of 1,200 capacity. Supt. J. H. Beveridge is confident that by the time the building is ready, the enrollment will be not less than 1,700.

THE WOMAN IN BLACK

By EDMUND CLERHEW BENTLEY

Copyright, 1919, by the Century Company.

CHAPTER XVII.
Mr. Bunner on the Case.
"Calvin C. Bunner, at your service," amended the newcomer, with a touch of punctilio, as he removed an unlighted cigar from his mouth. He was used to finding Englishmen slow and ceremonious with X'lyiurti-lEiau shrdiu shrdiu shrd strangers, and Trent's quick remark plainly disconcerted him a little. "You are Mr. Trent, I expect," he went on. "Mrs. Manderson was telling me a while ago. Captain, good morning." Mr. Murch acknowledged the greeting with a nod. "I was coming up to my room, and I heard a strange voice in here, so I thought I would take a look in." Mr. Bunner laughed easily. "You thought I might have been eavesdropping, perhaps," he said. "No, sir; I heard a word or two about a pistol—this one, I guess—and that's all."

To erect a building of 1,700 capacity and to provide technical features in compliance with the federal aid provision of the Smith-Hughes bill, the board figures that $1,500,000 will be necessary. "I intend to explain the matter fully to the taxpayers and then let them decide whether more bonds should be voted," said Member Arthur R. Wells.

Mr. Bunner was a thin, rather short young man with a shaven, pale, bony, almost girlish face and large, dark, intelligent eyes. His waving dark hair was parted in the middle. His lips, usually occupied with a cigar, in its absence were always half open with a curious expression as of permanent eagerness. By smoking or chewing a cigar this expression was banished, and Mr. Bunner then looked the consummately cool and sagacious Yankee that he was.

JUDGE VICTIM OF WRATH OF HEAD OF POLICE FORCE

Resolution Directed Against Holmes, Who Rebuked Department, Adopted by Ringer and Three Others.

Judge Holmes of the municipal court is the latest victim to be visited by the wrath of Police Commissioner Ringer, who was supported in the city council yesterday

JUDGE VICTIM OF WRATH OF HEAD OF POLICE FORCE

Resolution Directed Against Holmes, Who Rebuked Department, Adopted by Ringer and Three Others.

Judge Holmes of the municipal court is the latest victim to be visited by the wrath of Police Commissioner Ringer, who was supported in the city council yesterday

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

by Commissioners Ure, Towl and Falconer in the adoption of a resolution directed against the judge. The resolution charges that Judge Holmes, while serving as acting police judge June 13, destroyed a complaint against Frank Maloney, charged with unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors, in the face of Maloney's admission of guilt. The resolution provides that the alleged offense be brought to the attention of Governor McKelvie.

Attack Upon Judge.
This action by the police commissioner is obviously and palpably an attack against Judge Holmes, who recently dismissed charges against Mrs. Thomas Brown, whose home was violated by Detectives Herdzina and Armstrong. On that occasion the judge, serving as acting police judge, heard 17 witnesses for the prosecution and then dismissed the disorderly house charge without requiring the defense to offer evidence. In giving his decision on the Brown case, the judge rebuked the methods of the police department and cited the fact that one of the elemental principles of the law is that every man's home is his castle, and that it should not be violated except by due process of law.

Holmes Not Perturbed.
Judge Holmes was not in the least perturbed when informed of the action of Mr. Ringer, supported by three other members of the city council. "There is absolutely nothing to the charge. I will have to look up the records before I can make a positive statement as to just what transpired, but my recollection at the moment is that the complaint against Maloney was dismissed at the instance of City Prosecutor Thomas Murray, who asked if it would be all right with me if the case should be dismissed and he gave me to understand that he had a friendly interest in the matter. I was told that Maloney was a returned soldier and had bought a bottle of what was supposed to have been whisky, but the arresting officer, who was standing at the side of Murray at the time, stated that after the arrest it was learned that the bottle contained tea, and that the soldier had been imposed upon by the person pretended to have sold him whisky."

Be Want Ads Will Attain the Desired Results.

MOVING STORAGE PACKING
We are at your service at a few minutes' notice. We have the very latest equipment to do it the easiest and quickest way possible.

OMAHA VAN & STORAGE CO.
806 South 16th Street
Phone Douglas 4163.

The Bee's Fund for Free Ice and Milk

Mr. "Three-in-One" was in again yesterday and left another contribution to help the poor babies.

This is the second time he has contributed this year. "I don't know of any cause that is more deserving of help than this one," he said. "And I find it a real pleasure to have a share in bringing health and happiness to these kids."

Every penny you give to this fund goes to buy either pure milk or cooling ice for the babies and small children of the deserving poor of Omaha.

The work goes on every day and the fund is in need of all the money it can get.

If YOU can do something, SEND or BRING your contribution to The Bee office. It will be acknowledged in this column.

Previously acknowledged: $297.55
M. Alfok..... 2.00
Tom Flynn..... 2.00
"Three-in-One"..... 15.00
Carl Pomy..... 1.00
Total.....$317.55

New Record Price for Hogs.
A new top on hog prices was established yesterday at the South S'de market when 159 head sold at $22 a hundred. The top price Monday was $21.80. Hogs sold 65 cents higher in Chicago yesterday than here, due to the difference in freight costs. Stockmen generally predict a continued advance in the price of hogs.

Home Builders' Offices Being Moved to 18th & Dodge St.

W. B. Jones, Superintendent of Home Builders' Construction Department, has moved his office from the Brandeis Theater Building to Home Builders' new building, 18th and Dodge Sts.

All other departments of the Home Builders and the American Security Co. will complete the transfer of their offices by the 15th of July.

Home Builders
INCORPORATED
American Security, Fis. Agts., Omaha, Nebraska.
G. A. Rohrbough, Pres.
C. C. Shimer, Sec'y

Woman Suffrage Defeated in Legislature of Georgia

Atlanta, Ga., July 8.—Ratification of the federal woman suffrage amendment was defeated in the Georgia senate today when a motion to disagree with a committee report against ratification was lost by a vote of 37 to 12.

MRS. E. MORGAN GAINS 22 POUNDS TAKING TANLAC

Was Told That an Operation Was Her Only Hope—Health Entirely Restored.

"Anyone who had noticed the dreadful condition I was in can readily see the wonderful change Tanlac has made in me," said Mrs. E. M. Morgan, residing at 1817 Norton street, Kansas City, Missouri, in telling of the remarkable benefits she has derived from the medicine recently.

"I have actually gained twenty-two pounds in weight on five bottles of Tanlac," she continued, "and have improved so much that my neighbors often speak of it. My health had been all broken up for more than a year and I was so nervous that the least noise would upset me. My appetite left me and what little I did eat would sour on my stomach causing gas and intense pain. I would bloat terribly and during these times my heart would palpitate frightfully almost cutting off my breath, and I was so weak and dizzy that I could not walk a block without stopping to rest. I was badly constipated, had raging headaches, and was losing weight and strength all the time. I would roll and toss most all night, unable to sleep, and would get up in the morning even more tired than on going to bed. I was constantly under treatment and all the time taking some kind of medicine, but nothing helped me and I finally got right down in bed.

"At the time I got Tanlac I had been confined to my bed for a month. I had been told that an operation would be necessary and was almost in despair, as I always had a horror of the operating table and the knife. Up to this time I had not thought seriously about Tanlac being good for me, although I had often read the wonderful results others claimed to get from it. But, being so anxious to avoid an operation I decided first to try Tanlac and sent for two bottles. Well, before I had finished my second bottle my appetite was better, the gas stopped forming on my stomach and I did not suffer from shortness of breath and palpitation any more. Now, to put it all in a few words, my nerves are normal and I have no more headaches, dizziness or trouble of any kind. Tanlac has not only relieved me of my physical suffering, but it has eased my mind, too, as I fully believe it has saved me from an operation. I can truthfully say Tanlac has made me feel like a new person and I can't praise it enough."

Tanlac is sold in Omaha and all Sherman & McConnell Drug Company's stores, Harvard Pharmacy and West End Pharmacy. Also Forest and Meany Drug Company in South Omaha and the leading druggist in each city and town throughout the state of Nebraska.—Adv.

Beaton Says

After each meal—YOU eat on EATONIC

(FOR YOUR STOMACH'S SAKE) and get full food value and real stomach comfort. Instantly relieves heartburn, bloated, gassy feeling, STOPS acidity, food repeating and stomach misery. AID digestion; keeps the stomach sweet and pure.

FREE TO ASTHMA SUFFERERS

A New Home Method That Anyone Can Use Without Discomfort or Loss of Time.

We have a new method that controls Asthma and we want you to try it at our expense. No matter whether your case is of long standing or recent development, whether it is present as Hay Fever or chronic Asthma, you should send for a free trial of our method. No matter in what climate you live, no matter what your age or occupation, if you are troubled with asthma, our method should relieve you promptly, our method should relieve you promptly.

FREE TRIAL COUPON
FACILITIES ASTHMA CO., Room 423-X, Niagara and Hudson Sts., Buffalo, N. Y.
Send free trial of your method to:

Next Time—Buy

FISK TIRES

A remarkable Product. Every tire worth more than it costs.

The Over-size Non-Skid Fabric; The Big Fisk Cord; The Red Top, Extra Ply, Heavy Tread.

GOOD LOOKING, GOOD VALUE TIRES

For Sale by Dealers

Big Sale of Dinner Sets Saturday at Union Outfitting Co.

Firm Makes a Fortunate Purchase of a Carload of Dove of Peace Dinnerware.

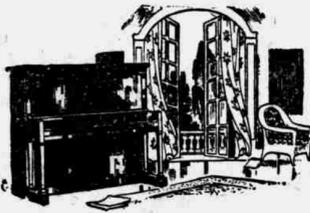

One Thousand Dove of Peace Plates Given Absolutely Free to Those Who Come and Inspect the Sets.

One of the greatest money saving events that has occurred in Omaha in months, comes as the result of a special purchase of a carload of Dinner Sets by the Union Outfitting Company which will be placed on sale Saturday at about Half Price.

This Dinnerware comprises the famous and much talked about Dove of Peace Dinner Sets which created such a sensation when they recently appeared in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other metropolitan cities.

Even though you may not need new Dinnerware at this time, you will be interested in seeing these beautiful sets. Every woman who calls at the store before next Saturday to inspect the wonderful values will receive a Dove of Peace plate absolutely free.

This fortunate purchase is further evidence of the ever growing purchasing power of the Union Outfitting Company, located just out of the High Rent District, where, as always, you make your own terms.

Are you one of those piano buyers who choose for themselves, and not because a piano is played by this or that virtuoso?

Do you look for depth and sweetness of tone as of greater importance than a purchased reputation?

Then you are practically certain to purchase a guaranteed

STEGER

which is musically the most valuable piano in the world

Shown and Sold On Convenient Terms by

SCHMOLLER & MUELLER PIANO CO.

Exclusive Factory Distributors

1311-1313 Farnam St. OMAHA, NEBRASKA

When Your Liver is out of Order

You know the signs—a heavy head, sick stomach, bad taste in the mouth, latent dyspepsia. Pay strict attention to these symptoms and get prompt relief by using Beecham's Pills. A few doses will stimulate the liver, help the stomach, regulate the bowels and make a great difference in your general feeling. Nothing will put you on your feet so quickly as a dose or two of

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Becham's Pills of Any Medicine in the World Sold Everywhere. In boxes 10c, 25c.

Footwear of Style and Quality

Anticipating a great Oxford season we selected the smartest, niftiest, staunchest models that America's best boot-makers will produce this season.

Our stock of Oxfords this year has been literally "hand-picked"—the very snappiest models were carefully chosen for our patrons, who demand the latest, smartest and best.

After all, the best advertisement a footwear house can have is a reputation for giving maximum quality and value.

We attribute much of our rapid expansion to the fact that we are advertised by our patrons.

FRY SHOE CO.

16th and Douglas.

FOR BEST RESULTS TRY BEE WANT ADS

into a broker's office on leaving college, and had attracted the notice of Manderson, whose business with his firm he had often handled. The Colossus had watched him for some time, and at length offered him the post of private secretary. Mr. Bunner was a pattern business man, trustworthy, long-headed, methodical and accurate. Manderson could have found many men with those virtues; but he engaged Mr. Bunner because he was also swift and secret, and had besides—a singular natural instinct in regard to the movements of the stock market.

Trent and the American measured one another coolly with their eyes. Both appeared satisfied with what they saw. "I was having it explained to me," said Trent pleasantly, "that my discovery of a pistol that might have shot Manderson does not amount to very much. I am told it is a favorite weapon among your people, and has become quite popular over here."

Mr. Bunner stretched out a bony hand and took the pistol from its case. "Yes, sir," he said, handing it with an air of familiarity. "The captain is right. This is what we call out home a Little Arthur, and I dare say there are duplicates of it in a hundred thousand hip pockets this minute. I consider it too light in the hand myself." Mr. Bunner went on, mechanically feeling under the tail of his jacket, and producing an ugly-looking weapon. "Feel of that, now, Mr. Trent—it's loaded, by the way. Now this Little Arthur—Marlowe bought it just before we came over this year, to please the old man. Manderson said it was ridiculous for a man to be without a pistol in the 20th century. So we went out and bought what they offered him, I guess—never consulted me. Not but what it's a good gun," Mr. Bunner conceded, squinting along the sights. "Marlowe was poor with it at first; but I've coached him some in the last month or so, and he's practiced until he is pretty good. But he never could get the habit of carrying it around. Why, it's as natural to me as wearing my pants. I have carried one for some years now, because there was likely to be somebody laying for Manderson. And now," Mr. Bunner concluded sadly, "they got him when I wasn't around. Well, gentlemen, you must excuse me. I am going in to Bishop's bridge. There is a lot to do these days, and I have to send off a bunch of cables big enough to choke a cow."

"I must be off, too," said Trent. "I have an appointment at the Three Tuns inn."

"Let me give you a lift in the automobile," said Mr. Bunner cordially. "I go right by that joint. Say, Cap, are you coming my way, too? No? Then come along, Mr. Trent, and help me get out the car. The chauffeur is out of action, and we have to do 'most everything our selves except clean the dirt off her." Still tirelessly talking in his measured drawl, Mr. Bunner led Trent downstairs and through the house to the garage at the back. It stood at a little distance from the house, and made a cool retreat from the blaze of the midday sun.

Mr. Bunner seemed to be in no hurry to get out the car. He offered Trent a cigar, which was accepted, and for the first time lit his own. Then he seated himself on the foot-board of the car, his thin hand clasped between his knees, and looked keenly at the other.

"See here, Mr. Trent, he said after a few moments. "There are some things I can tell you that may be useful to you. I know your record. You are a smart man, and I like dealing with smart men. I don't know if I have that detective staid up right, but he strikes me as a mutt. I would answer any questions he had the gumption to ask me—I have done so, in fact—but I feel encouraged to give him any notions of mine without his asking. See?"

Trent nodded. "That is a feeling many people have in the presence of our police," he said. "It is the official manner, I suppose. But let me tell you Murch is anything but what you think. He is one of the shrewdest officers in Europe. He is not very quick with his mind, but he is very sure. And his experience is immense. My forte is imagination, but I assure you in police work ex-

(Continued Tomorrow.)

Demand the genuine by full name—nicknames encourage substitution

THE COCA-COLA CO. ATLANTA, GA.

Sold Everywhere

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

Trent pulled a crate opposite Mr. Bunner's place on the footboard and seated himself. "This sounds like business," he said. "Tell me your ideas."

"I say what I do because of the change in the old man's manner this last few weeks. I dare say you have heard, Mr. Trent, that he was a man who always kept himself well in hand. That was so. I have always considered him the coolest and hardest head in business. That man's calm was just deadly—I never saw anything to beat it. And I knew Manderson as nobody else did. I was with him in the work he really lived for. I guess I knew him a heap better than his wife did, poor woman. I knew him better than Marlowe could—the never saw Manderson in his office when there was a big thing on. I knew him better than any of his friends."

"Had he any friends?" interjected Trent.

Mr. Bunner glanced at him sharply. "Somebody has been putting you next, I see that," he remarked. "No; properly speaking, I should say not. He had many acquaintances among the big men, people he saw 'most every day; they would even go yachting or hunting together. But I don't believe there ever was a man that Manderson opened a corner of his heart to. But what I was going to say was this: some months ago the old man began to get like I never knew him before—Gloomy and sullen just as if he was everlastingly brooding over something bad, something that he couldn't fix. This went on without any break; it was the same down town as it was up home, he acted just as if there was something lying heavy on his mind. But it wasn't until a few weeks back that his self-restraint began to go; and let me tell you this, Mr. Trent—the American laid his bony claw on the other's knee—"I'm the only man that knows it. With everyone else he would be just morose and dull; but when he was alone with me in his office, or anywhere where we would be working together, if the least little thing went wrong, by George! he would fly off the handle to beat the Dutch. In this library here I have seen him open a letter with something that didn't just suit him in it, and he would rip around and carry on like an Indian, saying he wish he had the man that wrote it here, he wouldn't do a thing to him, and so on, till it was just pitiful. I never saw such a change. And here's another thing. For a week before he died Manderson neglected his work, for the first time in my experience. He wouldn't answer a letter or a cable, though things looked like going all to pieces over there. I supposed that this anxiety of his, whatever it was, had got onto his nerves till they were worn out. Once I advised him to see a doctor, and he told me to go to hell. But nobody saw this side of him but me. If he was having one of these rages in the library here, for example, and Mrs. Manderson would come into the room, he would be all calm and cold again in an instant."

(Continued Tomorrow.)

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

Trent pulled a crate opposite Mr. Bunner's place on the footboard and seated himself. "This sounds like business," he said. "Tell me your ideas."

"I say what I do because of the change in the old man's manner this last few weeks. I dare say you have heard, Mr. Trent, that he was a man who always kept himself well in hand. That was so. I have always considered him the coolest and hardest head in business. That man's calm was just deadly—I never saw anything to beat it. And I knew Manderson as nobody else did. I was with him in the work he really lived for. I guess I knew him a heap better than his wife did, poor woman. I knew him better than Marlowe could—the never saw Manderson in his office when there was a big thing on. I knew him better than any of his friends."

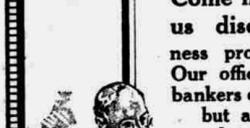

"Had he any friends?" interjected Trent.

Mr. Bunner glanced at him sharply. "Somebody has been putting you next, I see that," he remarked. "No; properly speaking, I should say not. He had many acquaintances among the big men, people he saw 'most every day; they would even go yachting or hunting together. But I don't believe there ever was a man that Manderson opened a corner of his heart to. But what I was going to say was this: some months ago the old man began to get like I never knew him before—Gloomy and sullen just as if he was everlastingly brooding over something bad, something that he couldn't fix. This went on without any break; it was the same down town as it was up home, he acted just as if there was something lying heavy on his mind. But it wasn't until a few weeks back that his self-restraint began to go; and let me tell you this, Mr. Trent—the American laid his bony claw on the other's knee—"I'm the only man that knows it. With everyone else he would be just morose and dull; but when he was alone with me in his office, or anywhere where we would be working together, if the least little thing went wrong, by George! he would fly off the handle to beat the Dutch. In this library here I have seen him open a letter with something that didn't just suit him in it, and he would rip around and carry on like an Indian, saying he wish he had the man that wrote it here, he wouldn't do a thing to him, and so on, till it was just pitiful. I never saw such a change. And here's another thing. For a week before he died Manderson neglected his work, for the first time in my experience. He wouldn't answer a letter or a cable, though things looked like going all to pieces over there. I supposed that this anxiety of his, whatever it was, had got onto his nerves till they were worn out. Once I advised him to see a doctor, and he told me to go to hell. But nobody saw this side of him but me. If he was having one of these rages in the library here, for example, and Mrs. Manderson would come into the room, he would be all calm and cold again in an instant."

(Continued Tomorrow.)

Demand the genuine by full name—nicknames encourage substitution

THE COCA-COLA CO. ATLANTA, GA.

Sold Everywhere

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

Trent pulled a crate opposite Mr. Bunner's place on the footboard and seated himself. "This sounds like business," he said. "Tell me your ideas."

"I say what I do because of the change in the old man's manner this last few weeks. I dare say you have heard, Mr. Trent, that he was a man who always kept himself well in hand. That was so. I have always considered him the coolest and hardest head in business. That man's calm was just deadly—I never saw anything to beat it. And I knew Manderson as nobody else did. I was with him in the work he really lived for. I guess I knew him a heap better than his wife did, poor woman. I knew him better than Marlowe could—the never saw Manderson in his office when there was a big thing on. I knew him better than any of his friends."

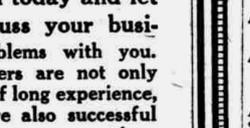

"Had he any friends?" interjected Trent.

Mr. Bunner glanced at him sharply. "Somebody has been putting you next, I see that," he remarked. "No; properly speaking, I should say not. He had many acquaintances among the big men, people he saw 'most every day; they would even go yachting or hunting together. But I don't believe there ever was a man that Manderson opened a corner of his heart to. But what I was going to say was this: some months ago the old man began to get like I never knew him before—Gloomy and sullen just as if he was everlastingly brooding over something bad, something that he couldn't fix. This went on without any break; it was the same down town as it was up home, he acted just as if there was something lying heavy on his mind. But it wasn't until a few weeks back that his self-restraint began to go; and let me tell you this, Mr. Trent—the American laid his bony claw on the other's knee—"I'm the only man that knows it. With everyone else he would be just morose and dull; but when he was alone with me in his office, or anywhere where we would be working together, if the least little thing went wrong, by George! he would fly off the handle to beat the Dutch. In this library here I have seen him open a letter with something that didn't just suit him in it, and he would rip around and carry on like an Indian, saying he wish he had the man that wrote it here, he wouldn't do a thing to him, and so on, till it was just pitiful. I never saw such a change. And here's another thing. For a week before he died Manderson neglected his work, for the first time in my experience. He wouldn't answer a letter or a cable, though things looked like going all to pieces over there. I supposed that this anxiety of his, whatever it was, had got onto his nerves till they were worn out. Once I advised him to see a doctor, and he told me to go to hell. But nobody saw this side of him but me. If he was having one of these rages in the library here, for example, and Mrs. Manderson would come into the room, he would be all calm and cold again in an instant."

(Continued Tomorrow.)

Demand the genuine by full name—nicknames encourage substitution

THE COCA-COLA CO. ATLANTA, GA.

Sold Everywhere

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great deal. "Outweighs nothing," replied Mr. Bunner emphatically. "This is not a reason why. I believe the old man knew there was something coming to him. Another thing, I believe it was something he thought he couldn't dodge."

perience outweighs it by a great