Most Skeptical of Peace Conferees in Paris Had Turned to League in Seeking Solution of Problems, He Says.

President Wilson's address in full will be found on pages 2

Washington, July 10.—The peace treaty with its league of nations covenant was laid before the senate by. President Wilson Thursday in an address accounting to the country for his part in the negotiations at

The league, declared the president, was born of the conviction of practical statesmen that an international concert had become a world necessity to end the old order and guarantee civilization. He asserted that in such concert the world looked confidently to America for leader-ship, and added that while the treaty might not be exactly as the American delegation would have written it, no vital principle had been sacrificed by the necessary compr. mises. The senate, already divided in a bitter fight over the league proposal, received the president with cheers and listened to his words ingrave silence. When he had conlended there was another burst of cheering until he had passed out of the chamber and had gone to his capitol office, where he talked for an treaty or of the negotiations. In these conferences the president dis-cussed freely such subjects as the disposition of Shantung, the German indemnities and Irish freedom. No Direct Mention Made. In his address, however, there was no direct reference to many of the questions around which senate deate has centered, the president declaring he could not construe details of the treaty in a short address. He did not directly mention the Monroe doctrine, Shantung, or the obligations assumed under article ten of the league covenant, nor did he as vations into the ratification. asserted a hope that he would be given opportunity to discuss details later, either with the whole senate or the foreign relations committee.
