EVERY GMC Truck possesses more power than is needed in ordinary daily service-but it is there for two purposes.

First, because having abundant power, GMC Trucks are never pushed to their utmost in ordinary work. This cuts down the operating cost, the depreciation and maintenance cost.

Second, because having abundant reserve power, GMC Trucks have ample power for any emergency -and "get there"-in extreme road conditionswithout strain or injury to the truck.

The Engines on all GMC models are 4-cylinder, 4-cycle, vertical, water-cooled type. They are attached to the frame on a 3-point suspension; traveling over rough roads the engine is protected and is not subjected to strain.

All GMC Engines are built with larger shafts and bearings than are generally used on trucks of like capacity. This means much to the truck owner for over-size bearings and larger shafts assure longer life for the truck, the truck requires less attention, and costs less to maintain.

The water-cooling system on GMC Trucks is a special GMC feature. It is practically impossible to over-heat a GMC Truck in any climate or altitude.

We urge you to give us the opportunity to explain the GMC Engine and other GMC units in detail.
