I had heard her frank confession that she loved the artist, but I had also heard the decision she had made-that if the husband who had wronged her should come back after his baptism of fire, needing her, she would take up her life with him again, no matter what heartbreak it brought to herself and the artist who loved her so devotedly. Yet there was no trace of regret, no protest in her voice or face, and I knew there was none in her heart -for Lillian is too big a woman to stoop to pretence about her perconcerns-when at Allen Drake's last words she turned to

Then, with an involuntary flush at my own stupidity the explanation came to me. With the news of Harry Underwood's safety there had been lifted from my friend's heart the terrible burden it had carried for so long-the suspicion that Robert Savarin's love for her had le' him to seek Harry Underwood, whom he foathed as the cause of his liege lady's unhappiness, and do him

Mr. Drake rose to his feet, with no appearance of haste, yet with a definite air of withdrawal. "I am sure you will excuse me now," he said to Lillian. "And thank you so much for the coffee." "Thank you!" Lillian said meaningly, and Allen Drake flushed almost boyishly as he saw that she had fathomed his kindly ruse to give her his news when she was at home in her own living room. He turned to me, held out his hand, smiling down at me friendly fashion. "May I Congratulate You-"

New York, July 24.—The market for coffee futures showed a steadler tone during the earlier trading on reports of a firmer tone in the market at Rio and talk of a slight improvement in spot demand. The opening was 2 to 9 points higher and active months sold 5 to 10 points above last night's closing figures during the morning, with December touching 21.55c. There was scattered realizing by brokers with Wall street and commission house connections at this level, however, and prices eased off in consequence, with December selling down to 21.45c and with the market closing at a net decline of 10 to 15 points. I felt a sudden shamed remorse for my cavalier thoughts of him. After all, he had spent much valuable time and energy in my service.
"It is I who should congratulate you, I think," I returned, feeling un-wontedly shy as I spoke. "And I want you to know that I am very, very grately for all your kindness to me.

His face changed oddly as 'he looked down at me. Into his eyes came a quick glint of some emotion I did not understand. He crushed my hand in his as if involuntarily, then released it as quickly. "If I may only assume that you will call upon me whenever you need the poor assistance I can give you," he said earnestly.
"I shall be only too glad to ask your aid," I replied, and truly felt that I meant it.

MYSTERY WOMAN TO NORFOLK, VA.

Wife of Dead Army Officer Prominent In Society, to Face Charge of Forgery.

Mrs. Viola Wilson, member of a prominent Virginia family, held in the county jail for a month on the charge of forgery, will be taken to Norfolk, Va., by officers who are now on the way to Omaha. In police circles she is known as the 'Woman of Mystery."

She has been identified, it is alleged, by the Pinkerton Detective agency as the same woman who forged a check for $2,000 in Norfolk It is said she told such a good story in presenting the check that the jaw elry store proprietor did not ever take the precaution to call up the signer of the check. She bought a $1,500 diamond with the check and received the rest in cash, it is said J. Stafford, room clerk at the Fontenelle hotel, says Mrs. Wilson passed a forged check for $150 on hotel in Little Rock, Ark., where

e was working a few months ago Her alleged forgeries in Omaha have been "made good" by her brother, R. Fraland of Roanoke, Va Her family has paid her way out of other scrapes of this kind, it is said, Asked in the county jail why she committed these forgeries, smiled and, in a soft southern drawl replied: "I really don't know." Mrs. Wilson's husband, a captain in the American army, was killed in France a few months before the close of the war. She receives $57.50 a month from the government on his insurance. She also has an income of between $50 and $100 a month from her property in Vir-

She is 22 years old and has a college education.

"I shall be very glad to go back to Virginia," she said. I have nothing whatever to fear there. will clear that all up in an hour." Her alleged forgeries here consisted of a $50 check on the Fonte fidante in the long weary months nelle hotel and $50 on the Ryan Jew following Harry Underwood's de- elry Co.

HERDZINA HITS YOUTH OVER HEAD WITH REVOLVER

Detective Continues Lawless Police Record by Striking Young Man as He Arrests Him.

Continuing his lawless police rece ord, Detective Herdzina Wednesday night struck a defenseless youth over the head with the butt of a reusual thing. * * * I think I am glad of it. For one thing, it has secured volver. This most recent instance of brutality on the part of Herdzina, formerly a South Omaha saloon keeper, was displayed Wednesday night when the morals squad raided pool hall at 1012 Dorcas street. Joseph Swoboda, 20 years old, 1202 Castelar street, fled from the place when the officers entered. Herdzina gave chase.

Swoboda was outdistancing Herd-zina when the latter stopped and, aiming his revolver, fired. Swoboda stopped at the shot. Walking She shook her head slowly, and back to where Herdzina stood with the weapon still aimed, he was met something in the gesture shattered with a blow on the head.

At the police station Swoboda was booked as an inmate of a common, ill-governed house. His injury, a scalp wound, was dressed by a police surgeon.

Seven other men, including James Shields, proprietor of the pool hall, were discharged in police court yesterday by Judge Fitzgerald. Police said a gambling game was in progress at the place. A pack of cards and 75 cents were introduced as evidence.
