

RECALL RESULT OF EFFORTS TO BETTER POLICE

Mayor Defends Commissioners on Grounds of Inexperience; Has No Fear of Outcome.

"It would be a thousand times better if Commissioners Ure, Towl and myself should be recalled than Dean Ringer," declared Mayor Ed. P. Smith, speaking at the Plymouth Congregational church yesterday morning.

"If Ringer should be recalled it will make a moral coward of every man who takes the police commissioner job in the future," the mayor continued. "It is the result of Mr. Ringer's efforts to improve the police department that has started the recall movement. The interests which have lost control of the police department are trying to put the recall over."

Mayor Smith urged the people of the Plymouth Congregational church to register and vote. He declared he had more respect for the person with convictions, even if he did vote for the recall, than the person who was too lazy to register and ignore the city's politics.

Admitting that many mistakes had been made by the council and that many more would probably be made, Mayor Smith explained that five of the present city commissioners had never held public office before, and had found difficulty in mastering their duties.

"The police department has wrecked more commissioners than any other commissioner job," the mayor declared. "It is the same in every city in the country."

"Personally I will welcome the filing of the recall petition," the mayor concluded. "I will clarify the atmosphere, and we have no fear of the result. If the state should vote on the recall it would be defeated by a 10 to 1 vote. I believe it will be defeated by the voters of the city."

Believe Danger of Further Riots in Chicago Over

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Adjutant General Frank S. Dickson of Illinois, and Chief of Police Garrity were entirely satisfied with conditions in the race riot zones today, they said. The militia and police continued to maintain order with only a few minor disturbances, and Chief Garrity said he believed the danger of further rioting was ended.

With the exception of an attack on Capt. A. R. Wehrheim, G. company, Fourth reserve militia, who was fired on and stabbed by three negroes, and the forming of a white mob in the stockyards district early this morning, no outbreak of violence had occurred since Thursday. The captain will recover, it is said.

Six hundred whites were dispersed only after a machine gun mounted on an automobile had appeared and militiamen with fixed bayonets had prepared to charge them.

While police are slowly being withdrawn from the negro district today the sheriff was swearing in former soldiers as special deputies and expected to have between 1,000 and 2,000 on duty in the riot zones tomorrow.

Chicago Soldier Killed.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Sergeant E. W. Gropp of the 110th regiment, reserve militia, was killed tonight by the accidental discharge of a machine gun mounted on an automobile.

THE WOMAN IN BLACK

CHAPTER XLII
"You Pay for the Dinner." "I am afraid I startled you," Trent heard the voice of Mr. Cupples say. He forced himself out of his stupefaction like a diver striking upward for the surface, and with a rigid movement raised his glass. But half of the wine splashed upon the cloth, and he put it carefully down again untasted. He drew a deep breath, which was exhaled in a laugh wholly without merriment. "Go on," he said.

"It was not murder," began Mr. Cupples, slowly measuring off inches with a fork on the edge of the table. "I will tell you the whole story. On that Sunday night I was taking my before-bedtime constitutional, having set out from the hotel about a quarter past ten. I went along the field-path that runs behind White Gables, cutting off the great curve of the road, and came out on the road nearly opposite that gate that is just by the eighth hole on the golf-course. Then I turned in there, meaning to walk along the turf to the edge of the cliff, and go back that way. I had only gone a few steps when I heard the car coming, and then I heard it stop near the gate. I saw Manderson at once. Do you remember my telling you I had seen him once alive after our quarrel in front of the hotel? Well, this was the time. You asked me if I had, and I did not care to tell a falsehood."

A slight groan came from Trent. He drank a little wine, and said stonily: "Go on, please."

"It was, as you know," pursued Mr. Cupples, "a moonlight night; but I was in shadow under the trees by the stone wall, and anyhow the car did not suppose there was any one near them. I heard all that passed just as Marlowe has narrated it to us, and I saw the car go off towards Bishopbridge. I did not see Manderson's face as it went, because his back was to me, but he shook his left hand at the car with extraordinary violence, greatly to my amazement. Then I waited for him to go back to White Gables, as I did not want to meet him again. But he did not go. He opened the gate through which I had just passed, and he stood there on the turf of the green, still. His head was bent, his arms hung at his sides, and he looked somehow . . . rigid. For a few minutes he remained in this tense attitude, then all of a sudden his right arm moved swiftly, and his hand was at the pocket of his overcoat. I saw his face in the moonlight, the teeth bared and the eyes glittering, and all at once I knew that the man was mad. Almost as quickly as that flashed across my mind, something else flashed in the moonlight. He held the pistol before him, pointing at his breast."

"Now I may say here I shall always be doubtful whether Manderson intended to kill himself then. Marlowe naturally thinks so, knowing nothing of my intervention. But I think it quite likely he only meant to wound himself, and to charge Marlowe with attempted murder and robbery."

"At that moment, however, I assumed it was suicide. Before I knew what I was doing I had leapt out of the shadows and seized his arm. He shook me off with a furious snarl, giving me a terrific blow in the chest, and presented the revolver at my head. But I seized his wrists before he could fire, and I clung with all my strength—you remember how bruised and scratched they were. I knew I was fighting for my own life now, for murder was in his eyes. We struggled like two beasts, without an articulate word, I holding his pistol-hand down and keeping a grip on the other. I never dreamed that I had the strength for such an encounter."

The relative price of Manila hemp is usually from 20 to 30 per cent higher than that of Mexican sisal. This is accounted for by the fact that one pound of sisal is required to make 500 feet of binding twine, while one pound of Manila fiber will make 650 feet of twine.

Traveling Salesmen

Bert E. Bauer

From mechanic to electrician to traveling salesman to assistant sales manager to husband are steps taken by Bert E. Bauer of the Master Sales Co. during the last six years. Events have happened in rapid succession in his young life and now he is asking: "What next?"

The greater part of the last six years he has been traveling over Nebraska, especially the northern portion. As a preference to his sale, it is said, he generally renders free service as an electrical authority and greets his customers with a lead-in smile.

During the war Bauer was forced to forsake his usual mode of life and help Uncle Sam solve his electrical troubles. He was stationed at Fort Omaha in charge of storage batteries on cars and trucks.

Not only does Bauer fail to balk at mechanical troubles, but he even shows his disregard for marital short circuits by bestowing his name on another last month. When the week's work is over, he now returns to 2612 Dewey avenue. He is 27 years old.

PEOPLE WATCH WORKINGS OF NEW CODE LAW

Governor Thinks New Measure Has Power to Deal With Profiteering in the State.

By P. A. BARROWS.

Lincoln, Aug. 3.—(Special).—With the new administrative code law in effect the people of Nebraska will watch with a great deal of interest its workings, for they have been told that while it will to a certain extent revolutionize the business methods of the state, it is guaranteed to give beneficial results if given a chance.

That Governor McKelvie is sincere in his belief that the code will work out in a beneficial way, hardly any one will dispute. The governor has been in the habit of putting new things into effect in his private business and being rewarded with results eminently satisfactory. His confidence in the beneficial workings of the new code law stand for something in the face of the fact that he has been in close touch with similar action taken in other states successfully.

Control Profiteering. Governor McKelvie has said that the code law had within its provisions sufficient power to start things in regard to profiteering, consequently in the face of recent acts of the special session of the legislature, the result of the workings of the new law in that regard will be watched with a great deal of interest.

One thing which will help things materially is the probable action of the federal government to punish the profiteers. If the federal government will give its attention to the big fellows, there is little doubt but that Nebraska can handle the local situation. But with the federal government passive, any state attempting to go after the situation would probably find itself up against a hard proposition in which the big fellows of the country would concentrate their energies in an effort to win the first round in the controversy.

Wholesalers Punish Retailers. One of the worst propositions which has come to the attention of certain wholesale firms in trying to punish retail dealers who have attempted to buy direct from the producer.

One story goes that a certain apple grower came to town with a proposition to sell certain merchant apples at so much per barrel. The matter came to the attention of a certain wholesale dealer in the city and the grower was told if he bought apples of the farmer he would have to buy all the rest of his food products of the farmer as he could do business no more with that merchant firm. The result was that the merchant was compelled to turn down the farmer, for the only place he could buy the other things he needed in his business was from the wholesalers.

If the new code bill can bring about a solution of that problem, allowing the merchant to buy where he can get goods the cheapest, it will have performed a great thing and the people of the state can truly feel thankful that the law is in operation in spite of the referendum.

My Heart and My Husband

ADELE GARRISON'S New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

The Way Madge Met Dicky's "Surprise"

"That's a corking good idea, Rita," Dicky spoke in such cordial heartiness in answer to Rita Brown's sneering suggestion that I be blindfolded in order to be more completely surprised by whatever the boys had brought from the city that for a moment I thought he didn't realize the girl's real motive, her attempt to make us all appear absurd. Then, as he approached me, pulling one of the extra handkerchiefs which he always carries from his pocket, his left eyelid drooped to his cheek in a prolonged wink, while his face was filled with mischievous understanding.

My spirits bounded at the smile of comradely comprehension that beamed at me as he flourished the handkerchief. It was a smile which relegated Rita Brown to the hethermost outland.

The Surprise Revealed. "Now I've got you, where you'll stand without hitching," he declared merrily, as he turned me around, adjusted the handkerchief, and then, slipping his hand under my arm, guided my footsteps across the lawn. I knew that we were going in the general direction of the Durkee home, and was not surprised when my feet struck the gravel of the old-fashioned carriage drive which winds around the house.

We had been surrounded on our brief journey by the others, and laughing admonitions to Dicky flew thick and fast when he finally stopped. "Not that way." "You're half a mile off your course. Turn sou' by sou'west." "Turn her so that she'll see it first thing."

"Don't make her hunt for it." "Only Rita Brown's voice was silent. I could visualize, through my confining handkerchief, the ironical superior smile her face was wearing.

"Who's doing this?" Dicky demanded, taking me by the shoulders and turning me half way round. "There, now, it'll hit her spang between the eyes. Don't open your eyes until I say ready, Madge," he admonished fumbling with the handkerchief.

I obediently kept my eyes closed until my husband's rather theatrical call of "ready." When I did open them it was upon the sight of a big touring car, with the beautiful lines and appointments characteristic of the costlier machines.

Out From Silence. Apprehension mingled with the first flash of pleasure with which any woman views a new automobile. This must be the surprise, and from the bantering remarks I had gathered that Dicky and Alfred Durkee were joint owners of the machine. I knew that our circumstances didn't warrant the purchase of such a car, and the knowledge took from me all the pleasure I would otherwise have experienced at the sight of the car.

"You wasted your effort! Mrs. Graham doesn't appear to be over-whelmed," either by surprise or pleasure.

Rita Brown's drawing, ironical tones were like the touch of a whip.
