

My HEART and My HUSBAND

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

What Happened After Rita Brown Went to Telephone. Here's your drug shop. Alfred swung the car to the side of the road, drew up in front of a village pharmacy as if he had been driving a car for years.

"And here's your mazzume." He held out a bill. "Oh, I don't want that! I'll only have to get it changed." Rita Brown spoke petulantly. I surmised that she was glad of an excuse to vent her resentment against Alfred Durkee.

"Allow me, old dear." Dicky sprang to his feet, held out some silver to the girl, then opened the door and assisted her to the ground with a sweeping flourish of his hat.

"May I assist you in telephoning, hold the receiver to your shell-like ear or any little thing like that? I should so like to help you." Dicky's voice expressed the most elaborate concern.

I wished that he would forego his love of teasing in this particular instance, for the girl's eyes were smoldering with wrath. She was in no mood for pleasantry of any description.

Dicky Would Bet. She had accepted the silver coins with a cool "crisp" "Thank you." She turned on Dicky now with a look that spelled anger rising almost to the danger point.

"Suppose you close your trap and bolt it!" she said raucously with a reversion to the type from which I suspected she had been bred, and turning upon her heel, walked haughtily into the drug store.

"Dear chee-ild! I'm so afraid she's upset about something," Dicky's face was like an undertaker's, his voice a piping falsetto. "What can it be? Alie, you naughty, naughty boy, why didn't you let her have the seat by your side?"

Alfred spread his hands toward Leila, nodded his head smilingly, but vouchsafed no other answer. The Virginia girl's cheeks vied in color with the berries she had been hulling before the ride. Dicky regarded her quizzically. I was afraid he would make some other teasing remark to her, rose to my feet quickly, seizing the first excuse I could think of to divert Dicky's attention.

"Oh, Dicky, there's a display of those rubbers for the canning jars which mother and Mrs. Durkee wanted so much! See, in that grocery window. We couldn't get them in the Marvin stores. Let's hurry. We can get them by the time Miss Brown finishes her telephoning."

"Anything but an obligation to you, petty-dear." When Dicky is in a teasing mood he generally invents some ridiculous "pet name" with which to address me, knowing my abhorrence of public endearments. But as we walked toward the grocery store he dropped his affected manner abruptly.

"Bet you a fiver we see the last of Her Grace of Greenwich to-night," he said in a voice meant for my ear only.

"What do you mean?" I asked startled. "What I say. She'll fly the coop tonight."

"But she's made all plans to stay days longer." "That was when she still had an idea she might cop old Alf out when he wasn't looking, or had forgotten to cross his fingers. But she isn't quite bone from her neck up, you know and anybody who wasn't solid ivory above the shoulder blades would deduce from our Alie's little performance this afternoon that he was quite fed up on the Rita Brown proposition, and intended to cast his glances in another direction."

Has Dicky Intuition? I gave an impatient little sigh at Dicky's atrocious slang, but I had learned wisdom with the years and didn't voice my irritation. Instead I devoted my mind to the mental translation of his jargon.

"You really think he's attracted by Leila?" I asked eagerly, forgetting Rita Brown for the moment in this hint of a romance. Dicky cast a whimsical glance at me.

"Oh, no he doesn't know she's on earth," he began teasingly, then abruptly changed his manner. "I don't remember ever seeing old Alf quite so sitting up and taking quite so much notice," he said reflectively. "I only hope the Fairfaxes won't go when the Brown departs."

"What makes you think she's going?" I persisted. "Intuition, life-of-me-heart. I know as well as if I were listening to her that she's arranging with somebody in dear old Greenwich village to send her an urgent summons some tonight."

Bee's Straw Vote on Peace Treaty Now Shows Opposition to Pact of More than 10 to 1

Of 1,398 Opinions Received, 1,284 Oppose Treaty, While But 114 Favor Immediate Ratification—Smaller Up-State Towns Show Much Interest in Contest and Send in Large Petitions Opposing Pact.

Against the league of nations as a whole	983
Total against peace treaty in present form	1,284
Total for ratification of peace treaty in its present form	114
For peace treaty	114
Against treaty	1,284
Plurality against treaty	1,170

The straw vote of The Bee on the league of nations and peace treaty issues shows a growing opposition to both. With a total of almost 1,400 votes accounted for, the opposition to the treaty as a whole has grown to stronger than 10 to 1.

Of the 1,398 persons who have expressed their attitude towards the peace treaty in its present form, 1,284 oppose the treaty, while but 114 favor immediate ratification of the covenant.

From Sterling, Neb., The Bee received a petition signed by 31 persons, 23 of whom oppose the league of nations issue, and eight of whom favor radical changes in the instrument. The petition also included 42 names advocating the immediate repeal of the daylight saving law.

A Neligh, Neb., party sends in a petition with 19 names opposing the league of nations issue. A Seward, Neb., petition bears 28 names, all opposing the league of nations.

Following are some of the letters voicing the sentiment of a few of The Bee readers on the covenant issues: H. J. Bailey, city: "I enclose my vote in your straw vote on the peace treaty. I do not think this straw vote is going to indicate the sentiment of the people of this section."

Writing of his opposition to the league of nations, J. A. W. Johnson of Kilgore, Neb., quotes President Wilson in his famous address on

"Entangling Alliances" on May 6, 1914, in which the president said: "There are just as vital things stirring now that concern the existence of the nation as were stirring then (to wit, in Washington's time) and every man who worthily stands in this presence should examine himself and see whether he has the full conception of what it means. America should live its own life. Washington saw it when he wrote his farewell address. It was not merely because of passing and transient circumstances that Washington and we must keep from entangling alliances. It was because he saw that no country had yet set its face in the same direction in which America had set its face. We cannot form alliances with those who are not going our way, and in our might and in the confidence and definiteness of our own purpose we need not and we should not form alliances with any nation in the world. Those who are right, those who study their consciences in determining their policy, those who hold their honor higher than their advantages, do not need alliances. When we go out from this presence we ought to take the idea with us that we too are devoted to the purpose of enabling America to live its own life, to be the justest, the most progressive, the most honorable, the most enlightened nation in the world." R. Rumble, city: "I fail to see anything in the league of nations that will prevent future wars. I am not a lawyer nor a statesman. But I am quite sure that the best preventive of future wars is to punish those guilty promptly for the damage that is done and allow no indemnity or territory to be held for such; that no nation shall have the right to make collections of national or international indebtedness."

Treaty Oppresses Nations. W. M. Tanton, city: "Am opposed to the league of nations that does not include oppressed nations under British, Japanese or other tyrant rule as well as that of Germany and Austria."

William Johnson, 3123 Mason street, city: "I want Japan to say how much coal and other minerals she will take from China and when she will leave China."

F. Beck, 2868 Mary street, city: "Japan has no right to any territory in China and ought to be made to get out at once."

George Laucomer, Scottsbluff, Neb.: "I am personally acquainted with Senator Norris and his sentiments are mine. I am an American and believe that we shall have the American interest at heart first, and I am not in favor of the foreign entanglements which the league of nations as it stands today would bring us into."

"I was a soldier in the Union army and fought to save the Union and I cannot see the right in the league of nations as it stands today. I hope that the American people will support me in my opinion."

L. L. Westcott, Oshkosh, Neb.: "It will take us 200 years to perform the obligations that we will be under, if we have a league of nations and we probably have enough obligations to keep us busy for awhile."

League Lofty Idea. W. Wilhelms, Bruning, Neb.: "I consider the league of nations a lofty idea as the daylight savings law and others for instance which only require a little time and they will blow up."

Dr. W. T. Eikner, Sidney, Neb.: "I am opposed to the league as I cannot see how any red blooded American can be otherwise. If we concede we might just as well have King George take over our republic."

Divorce Courts

Charles R. Davies says Mattie S. Davies insists on living with her mother and father instead of with him; that her mother exercises a control over him, interferes with the raising of his child, and ridicules him when he attempts to study and better his condition, in a petition for divorce filed in district court. They were married in Omaha on February 14, 1910.

August Schmitt is charged with cruelty by Margaret Schmitt in a divorce petition suit in district court. They were married July 2, 1915, in Omaha.

Judge Troup, in district court, granted a divorce to Clarence H. Wiese from Atha M. Wiese on the grounds of cruelty.

A decree for divorce was granted George J. Litton from Josephine Litton by Judge Day in district court on the grounds of cruelty.

City of Copenhagen

Municipal Extension Loan of 1919

Twenty-five Year 5 1/2% Redeemable Sinking Fund Gold Bonds

Dated July 1st 1919

Due July 1st 1944

Interest payable January 1st and July 1st

Coupon bonds in denominations of $1,000 and $500, registerable as to principal only

Principal and interest payable at the office of Brown Brothers & Co., New York, the Fiscal Agents of the Loan, in gold coin of the United States of America of or equal to the standard of weight and fineness existing on July 1st 1919

Payable without deduction for any Danish Governmental or municipal taxes or other Danish taxes present or future.

The Loan is to be repayable, by means of yearly payments of $750,000 in United States gold coin, to be made in the year 1925, and in each year thereafter during the life of the Loan. Such payments will constitute the sinking fund of the Loan, and are to be applied on July 1st, 1925, and July 1st thereafter to the redemption at par of bonds whose numbers are to be determined by lot.

The City may at its option increase the amount of any sinking fund payment.

Copenhagen, the capital of Denmark, is the chief seaport and leading commercial City of the Kingdom. Situated on one of the largest harbors of Europe at the entrance to the Baltic Sea, it holds a strategic position for world trade. The City has by far the most important free port in Scandinavia, an advantage of much consequence in the commerce of Northern Europe. From 1895 when the Free Port was established, to 1913, the last full year before the war, the annual tonnage entering Copenhagen increased from 260,096 tons to 1,801,299 tons. The population of the City is 550,000. This is nearly one-fifth the population of the entire Kingdom.

Loans of Copenhagen have always been held in high favor among European investors. In normal times these loans were issued at rates of interest of 3 1/2% and 4%. The total debt of Copenhagen including the present issue is approximately $89,879,200. The debt of the City has increased relatively little during the entire war period. We are advised that no other foreign loan will be issued by the City within one year.

We offer these bonds when, as and if issued at

93 1/2 and accrued interest

yielding, according to the redemption dates for which they may be drawn by lot for payment at par, ($750,000 bonds to be drawn each year) as follows:

Draft Evaders Who Took Girl Trapped on Flat Top Mountain

Welch, W. Va., Aug. 7.—A pitched battle is expected momentarily between a posse of 100 men and a band of outlaws headed by Manderville Farley, alleged army deserter, who is charged with abducting and holding prisoner in the mountains the 14-year-old daughter of Kenneth Abshire, a farmer. The posse, headed by sheriffs, was reported to be nearing the camp of the outlaws, who number 20 men, mostly draft evaders, on the summit of Flat Top mountain.

Abshire's daughter, it is alleged, was lured away from her father's home two weeks ago by Farley. Abshire having himself deputized as a special officer and securing a warrant for Farley's arrest, went into the mountains last week.

He met Farley with the girl and opened fire on the mountaineer. Although wounded by two shots from Abshire's gun, the mountaineer managed to escape with the girl when 12 of his companions came to his assistance. In another encounter with the band, Deputy Sheriff Edward Willis of Raleigh county was beaten badly.
