ICE COLD LEMONADE MADE FROM SUNKIST LEMONS IS FREE AT UNION OUTFITTING CO.

Savings in the August Sale of Furniture Are of the Utmost Importance.

Every Room in the Home Can Be Furnished During the Sale at a Big Saving.

Present manufacturing conditions are such that the big August Sale of Furniture at the Union Outfitting Company could not have been held this year, if special purchases had not been made for the sale as early as last spring.

In fact, anyone in need of good furniture can furnish their home during this big August Sale for considerably less than would be necessary if the furniture had to be purchased at today's market prices.

Of course you have heard of Sunkist Lemons and, so if you are down town shopping any day this week, don't fail to step into the Union Outfitting Company for a glass of Ice Cold Lemonade.

It is made from selected Sunkist Lemons, the juice of which is so tart and zestful that the Lemonade is "different" from what you ordinarily taste. It is free, and NO purchase, whatsoever, is necessary.

At the Union Outfitting Company, located just out of the High Rent District, no purchase is ever considered complete until the customer is satisfied.

ANNUAL MARKET WEEK IN FALL IS OUTLINED HERE

Visiting Merchants to Be Entertained in Omaha September 8 to 11—Four Day Program.

At a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday the program for the ninth annual fall market week, September 8, 9, 10 and 11, was completed.

Monday evening, September 8, the visitors will be the guests of Ak-Sar-Ben at the den show, while the women will be taken for an auto ride.

Tuesday the visiting merchants will attend a picnic in Miller park. They will leave the downtown district at 4:30 and will be taken to a base ball game between the visiting merchants from Nebraska and those from other states.

Wednesday the visitors, both men and women, will be entertained at a vaudeville performance at the Ak-Sar-Ben den.

Thursday evening the visitors will be the guests at a dinner-dance at the Field club. Airplane flights will be a feature of the entertainment.

"Mrs. Graham's Hair Color Restorer is Simply Wonderful"

Mrs. Williams says, "I procured a sample of Mrs. Graham's Hair Color Restorer and was curious enough to try it. It is simply wonderful and I would not do without it."

The results she obtained from this preparation can be obtained by any woman. Gray and faded hair is quickly restored to its natural color and made rich and glossy.

It is a clear liquid that does not stain and is absolutely harmless. Easy to apply and it is impossible to tell that you are using it.

My HEART and My HUSBAND Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Things That Came Back to Me with Alice Holcombe's Story.

Something sub-conscious, intuitive, laid forcible hold upon the affirmative answer to Alice Holcombe's question which was upon my tongue and twisted my lips to an evasion.

"You could hardly call it a telephone call," I said, "it was so brief. He simply said that he would not be at the school until next day and that I might close up and go home."

"I didn't notice anything unusual about his manner," I answered, justifying the falsehood to myself by the excuse that there was no use arousing the fears of the woman before me to any higher pitch than they had already reached.

"Then she wasn't dead when he telephoned you?" Her voice held excited, triumphant assertion.

"She couldn't have been," I affirmed steadily, while all the time there beat like a hammer upon my brain, the memory of the cry I had heard Milly Stockbridge give over the telephone but a few moments before my strange phone conversation with my principal.

"I knew it," she said. "They're trying to say that she had been dead for nearly three-quarters of an hour when the doctor got there, when Kenneth says— Kenneth says—"

Alice Holcombe's Fear. "See here, let's get down to facts on this thing," I said with a brisk matter of factness. I was far from feeling, "You just answer my questions, and don't try to speculate upon what you don't know. Who found her?"

"Her husband." "What time?" "Six-thirty about. The doctor was there within five minutes after Kenneth telephoned him, he says, and he reached the house at 6:40."

"That's Dr. Irons?" "Yes. How did you know?" "I was standing on the platform waiting for the train, when I saw him leave the office in a tearing hurry. It must have been about 6:35 when I saw him go."

"Then he's telling the truth about the time he got there." There was a note of despondency in her voice.

"Why shouldn't he?" I asked, startled.

"He's Milly's uncle," she returned shortly, and then her hands twisted together.

"Oh!" she said, "I'm so afraid Milly's people are going to try to lay the blame upon Kenneth in some way." My blood chilled, not altogether from her words.

"But how can they?" I asked more confidently than I felt. "You say she died by poison. In that case the probabilities are most strongly in favor of accident or suicide, are they not?"

"Of course it was suicide!" she cried defiantly. "She's been threatening it for years; Kenneth always keeps his photographic stuff locked up securely—you know there are poisons in that."

"Yes, I know," I nodded, with the remembrance of Dicky's interesting description of a murder case in which the poison which killed the victim had been surreptitiously obtained from the studio of an amateur photographer of his acquaintance.

"Don't Worry—" "But her voice lowered instinctively, and she leaned forward in her chair, her eyes fixed on mine— "there were red marks upon her wrists, fresh ones, as if she had been in a struggle. I—I saw them!"

I caught my breath instinctively. Once more I heard Milly Stockbridge's raucous voice shouting at me over the telephone, then her stifled exclamation. "Oh!" and "Don't," and then that absolute, dreadful silence.

I heard something else, too, something which I would have given much to be able to forget—the agitated voice of Kenneth Stockbridge as he spoke words which in the light of these later developments held an almost sinister significance.

"Don't worry about anything which may have been said to you," he had said. "I have—attended—to that."

MRS. BLAKELEY IS DISMISSED BY POLICE JUDGE

Statement That She Was Victim of "Frame-Up" Substantiated by Testimony of Witness.

Mrs. Ruth Blakeley, 541 South Twenty-fourth street, was dismissed in police court yesterday on charges of illegal possession and selling intoxicating liquor.

Mrs. Blakeley's statement that she was a victim of a "frame-up" instigated by persons attempting to defeat her suit for additional alimony from her former husband, Charles Blakeley of Lincoln, was substantiated by the testimony of Attorney T. J. McGuire and W. H. Wilson, former chief of the Nebraska state agents.

Says Prompted by ex-Husband. W. A. Wilson, a Lincoln attorney said to be a close friend of Mr. Blakeley, was accused of conspiring to blacken the character of Mrs. Blakeley. Mrs. Blakeley declared Wilson's efforts were prompted by her former husband's money.

Mr. McGuire, who was special liquor prosecutor under the former state administration, declared that Wilson approached him in 1917 with a request to raid Mrs. Blakeley's apartment for whisky. Wilson told Mr. McGuire he knew the woman was guilty of the illegal possession of liquor and insisted on her flat being raided, according to Mr. McGuire's testimony.

The attorney declared he did not order the raid because he suspected a frame-up. He said he knew of the trouble between Mr. Blakeley and his wife and that Wilson and Blakeley were close friends. The witness declared he called in W. H. Wilson, then chief of state agents, who also refused to take any stock in what Wilson had to say.

Orders Case Dismissed. Following Mrs. Blakeley's statement, Judge Foster ordered the case dismissed.

Adam Kruger and W. A. Wilson, who are accused of attempting to injure Mrs. Blakeley's character, and who were at the hearing Wednesday, were not in the court room yesterday.

Mrs. Blakeley was divorced by her husband some time ago and was awarded $8,000 by the court. She now is suing for an additional $7,000. The case will be called for trial within a few days, and Mrs. Blakeley's attorneys promise some startling revelations. The woman also declared she will prosecute the persons who have been hounding her for months.

Blakeley's attorneys, on the other hand, declare that they will instigate sensational features at the trial to startle a number of prominent persons whose names have not yet been connected with the affair.

Wilson makes Statement. Mr. Wilson who was arrested and later released by police in connection with the Blakeley case, vehemently denied yesterday that he had represented himself to the local police as an internal revenue officer.

"I made no statement to that effect," disclaimed Mr. Wilson. "I never claimed to be a government officer of any kind."

Mr. Wilson explained that he had obtained knowledge of the sale of liquor at Mrs. Blakeley's residence from an informant.

All Are Arrested. "As formal counsel for Mr. Blakeley I was naturally interested and imparted my information to Internal Revenue Agent Larry Flynn. He advised me to seek the assistance of the local police, which I did. I conducted officers. Cunningham, Jensen and Janda to Mrs. Blakeley's home on South Twenty-fourth street. Three men were seen emerging from the apartment when we arrived there. All were arrested. At the station Captain Haze, declaring that he could not tell heads from tails, placed us all under arrest.

"One of the men in custody, a resident of this city was not booked by the police," Mr. Wilson declared. "As soon as the matter was explained to the captain he released me," further stated Mr. Wilson.

"The charge that the arrest was an attempted frame-up is absurd," asserted Mr. Wilson.

New Home Treatment for Banishing Hairs

(Beauty Topics) With the aid of a delatone paste, it is an easy matter for any woman to remove every trace of hair or fuzz from face, neck and arms. Enough of the powdered delatone and water is mixed into a thick paste and spread on the hairy surface for about 2 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This completely removes the hair, but to avoid disappointment, get the delatone in an original package. —Adv.

Square Dealing

To do business in the right way is the determination of this store. Our success will be due solely to the trust and confidence we inspire in the public mind.

The man with a modest income will be able to make his dollars go as far in this store as the man of wealth. The man of wealth is not looked upon by us as a "good thing to hit hard."

In short, every instrument on our floor is marked in plain figures at the one lowest spot cash price. To those who do not care to pay all cash and are worthy of credit, the only difference for the privilege of time will be 6% simple interest.

We will not tolerate commission takers because they usually are tricksters who sell their influence to the highest bidder; then, besides our prices are so low we could not afford to pay commissions if we wanted to. If you think you would like the Oakford Plan of selling pianos, talking machines, players, etc., call or write—we shall be happy to serve you. Just now we are offering many fine values in new and used instruments.

I am Omaha's family man Omar

Many a good meal has been spoiled by poor bread. On the other hand—many a poor meal gets by because the bread is good. And since there is nothing but smiles on the faces of those at the family table when Omar bread is served, I can rightfully claim to be Omaha's family man.

You will find me on every sack of flour featured by grocers whose customers' interests come first.

I am not as high priced as some, nor as low as many. But I am the most economical flour to use because my 48 pound sack will bake about 5 more loaves than 40 other brands which were tested in the baking laboratories where I am made, and my mill backs me with this guarantee:

"If Omar doesn't bake the best bread you ever baked, simply take the empty sack to your grocer, and get your money."
