GRIFF'S CLOWNS.

OOKS as if Griff had stopped trying to clown himself into a world series. In the late Germany Schaefer, Nick Altrock and Carl Sawyer, Clark had the greatest dynasty of clowns outside of Barnum's canvas-coated opera houses.

Poor old Schaef used to attract big crowds to the works by his famous shadow battle, which wound up by Germany smearing himself on the jaw, flattening himself out like a kippered flounder and counting himself out while unconscious. His other big stunt was a tight rope walk in which he made Blondin look like a blank. In addition he performed in the 2 o'clock infield, juggled the ball like a team of Swiss magicians and caught pop flies in his hip pocket.

Dutch had the works to himself until one day at the training camp in Charlottesville. The Nationals used the University of Virginia field, That day there was an initiation of the Tappa Keggs, Sniffle Uppa Drinks, or some other student fraternity. There was a hay scoffing mule used in the initiations painted all the colors of the rainbow and cerise. Altrock swiped this scoop-eared goat, got in the saddle like a left-hander and steered the bird on the field by the tail. He umped the game from the mezzanine deck of the mule and folks down Virginia way are still wearing out their suspenders from laughing at him..

That didn't threaten Dutch's clownship, but it made him take Nick into his company, and the two knocked the league silly for some seasons. Nick's best stunts were juggling the ball and an imitation of Napoleon with the cramps. Mimicking the umps was another stock stunt of the

with the cramps. Mimicking the umps was another stock stunt of the partners that never failed to get a laugh from everybody except the ump.

The Germany-Nick duet was the topliner on the American wheel until Griff signed up a new shortstop named Sawyer. This bird was as quiet as a mouse eating soft cheese, until one day Griff detailed him to coach at third. Tommy Connolly was umpiring. Along about the seventh inning the crowd heard a Annhay warhing and sixed Sawyer heaft. inning the crowd heard a donkey warbling and piped Sawyer hoofing up and down with paper ears and using his cap for a tail. The imitation would have fooled a lifelong democrat, and it knocked Connolly loose from his chest protector. This is the only time that Connolly was known

In addition Sawyer was an acrobat and could toss back and front flips like a flapjack in the hands of an army cook. Sawyer's other big stunt was an imitation of a couple of loose whales sampling hair tonic. He'd dive to the carpet, paddle around, and then suddenly spout a stream of water about 30 feet high. Maybe it wasn't exactly 30 feet, but it was 30 small feet. Just the same as the milk profiteer giving you a small quart. Sawyer held up many a game while the ump called time to enable the fans to sew their vest buttons back on again.

When Griff had these clowns his team was finishing up among 'em. Ban Johnson threatened to fire the cut-ups many a time, as he claimed they lowered the dignity of base ball. A privilege which Ban reserves for himself.
