Omaha Brings Opera to Home Folks and Its Friendly Neighbors

Perhaps no season since long before the war has given promise of such gaiety, such splendor as the forecast of the autumn season of 1919. Fashionable folks are returning from mountain resorts—singers are returning from abroad, and right on the heels of summer, we chronicle the good news that the Chicago Opera association is now ready to start its annual fall tour. Music lovers are thrilled with the prospect of two nights of opera in Omaha. "Aida" and "La Boheme" are to be given here in October. "Aida" has been known to opera goers for over half a century, and still stands out as one of the greatest lyric dramas ever penned. Its arias and instrumental numbers are known to all classes of music loving people. As for "La Boheme," nothing since the time of "Aida" has equalled it in the history of Italian music. It is considered by critics and the Italians at large that Puccini has written his masterpiece in this popular opera. Slender in story, but strong in melody "La Boheme" has gained a permanent place in musical history. In presenting these popular operas Mr. Campanini is giving each one a cast that will be unsurpassed. In "Aida" such sterling as Rost Raisa, Sophie Braslau, Alessandro Dolci and Georges Baklanoff in the principal roles, what more could be asked? It is doubtful that even Chicago and New York have been able to boast of more. With Bonci, Gluck, Rimini, Sharlow in "La Boheme" here is a music feast fit for the gods themselves. The company will carry its latest and newest scenery, and the chorus and orchestra will not be cut in any manner. From all over the state music lovers will come to participate in the festivities and enjoy the music of opera. Omaha people are planning their entertainments and inviting their guests; neighbors from Nebraska's smaller cities are making great preparations for the gala occasion.

Benson

A Kellastone House Will Bend Down Your Upkeep Cost Line

When planning your proposed home be sure and give serious consideration to the cost of upkeep—fuel, insurance, repairs and general expense. Your expenditure in this respect will depend largely upon the endurance of your exterior walls. You can rest assured there will be little work for the carpenter, the plumber, and the repair man if you build a home of KELLASTONE IMPERISHABLE STUCCO. Choose KELLASTONE for your home and you then and there bend down your upkeep cost line—minimizing fuel bills, insurance premiums and general expense. Instead of painting your old frame or brick house over-coat it with KELLASTONE. The work is done right over the exterior surface; there's no need to pull off the old siding. The cost is little—the results beautiful and permanent.
