

WOMAN'S SECTION OF THE BEE

Let us no more contend, nor blame each other, but strive in office of love, how we may lighten each other's burden, in our share of life.—Milton.

Dog Days in Capital Are Not Half Bad This Summer

THE dog days of 1919 in Washington are unprecedented. Probably in no other year have there been dinner parties with ambassadors, secretary of state and other distinguished personages of the administration, as guests of honor.

picnic swim. The party goes out in automobiles to a point near or at a desirable bathing place. Hampers filled with supper prepared usually by an experienced caterer and often with a couple of serving men along.

There is a large contingent of young people remaining in town, a merry little set of girls who have been more than efficient in war work, some of whom are still attached to the State department and the war risk insurance from a patriotic motive, although good salaries were attached, and who are most popular with the younger coterie of men in the diplomatic and minor official circles.
