Some for the Glories of This World; and some
Sigh for the Prophet's Paradise to come;
Ah, take the Cash, and let the Credit go,
Nor heed the rumble of a distant drum.
—Ruhaiyat.

Whether at Nalhapur or Babylon,
Whether the Cup with sweet or bitter run,
The Wine of Life keeps oozing drop by drop,
The Leaves of Life keep falling one by one.

Society

EVEN diadems and ermine will not attract us as of yore, for this Ak-Sar-Ben time we will have the lovely spectacle of a flower parade, vying in interest with the ball. Many are the beautiful cars in Omaha and charming are their feminine drivers, and with the added attraction of myriads of blossoms and attractive costumes, the flower parade will be a sight long to be remembered.

Each day more cars are added to the list and the rivalry for the most artistic one will be keen. Miss Dorothy Judson, a most enthusiastic motorist, has entered her machine and her friends are awaiting the appearance of this attractive maid with interest. Mrs. George Roberts will also have a place in the procession of flower-bedecked equipages, and Mrs. E. A. Beardsley will also compete.

Neville-Horan.
Beautiful in its simplicity was the wedding of Miss Rose Horan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Horan, and Frank M. Neville, which took place at Holy Family church Monday morning. Father Cooney performed the ceremony.

Miss Katherine Horan, sister of the bride, was her only attendant. She wore a charming frock of pink tulle and large black hat. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Leroy Francis, a cousin of the bridegroom, was best man.

The bride was lovely in a white georgette gown with a long tulle veil. A shower bouquet of brides' roses completed her costume.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, when the relatives and close friends were the guests. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Neville will make their home in Omaha.

The out-of-town guests included, Miss Nora Neville, Mrs. T. E. Neville and Mr. and Mrs. John Dugan of Wood River, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. O'Hern and daughter, Mary Gertrude, of Denver, and Mrs. Daniel Hoys of Overton, Neb.

Surprise Party.
Mrs. J. F. Goodrich entertained at a surprise party at her home Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Fred B. Martin, who has just returned from San Jose, Cal., where she has made her home for the past two years. The guests included Mesdames B. Hoogs, A. Watt, J. Denison, J. Casey, F. Peck, E. Nelson, S. Pous, F. L. Goodrich, C. Anderson, M. Patale, W. Christensen and M. Wiggs.

Best Bib and Tucker

By ELEANOR GUNN.

There are times in one's life when it is necessary to be all dressed up. There are weddings and teas and receptions in sultry September that call for the finest kind of fine feathers. It's all very well to think one's summer wardrobe is complete with a goodly collection of sports clothes, and a few lingerie frocks, but cool days and festive occasions sometimes fall together and then the lingerie frock, no matter how handsome, does not quite satisfy.

The frock pictured was designed by an exclusive dressmaker in New York for a woman to whom the gods had been very kind. It was made for one of the dressy occasions which arise before the out-of-town season closes.

The overdress, or jacket, which makes a picture so charmingly reminiscent of the directoire, is of black satin; the three buttons, of brilliant cut jet. The lining is of softest, creamy yellow crepe, toned in with the lace ruffles forming the skirt, these being dyed a deep, warm yellow. Viewed from the back, the coat has a decidedly fitted line, although the natural figure and not the corseted one is suggested.

The wide hat is unusually picturesque because of its sweeping ostrich plume, for it is many a moon since heavy feathers have been allowed to curl over brims in that delightful manner. The pale yellow foundation is felt, showing that the hat had a Paris origin, for in America one is more apt to regard even the finest French felt as in the sports rather than the dress class. Black satin colonial pumps with large steel buckles completed a very charming vision.

Footwear.
Black satin footwear has had a tremendous success. It has been brought into the light of day and made to feel at home in city streets. Whether this has been brought about because leather was and is so scarce and hard to find, to say nothing of being hard to pay for, or whether the dressier type of georgette gown which has found such favor, has wrought the change, the fact remains that women are now preferring satin to patent leather for dressy afternoon wear. Satin has also soared above suede, and there are quite a number of bronze satin pumps and ties sold, according to reports from smart shops.

The result of all this is that something besides satin had to be found for evening slippers. That something is brocade. There always have been brocade slippers made of the material of the brocade gown, but nowadays there are brocade slippers to wear also with lace and with plain gowns. By "brocade" the metallic variety is understood.

Those who are in the habit of peeking around the corner at the approaching fashion feel confident that metallic brocade will be the first choice of every woman who can afford it for her "best" frock.

The first choice, that is, of everyone who can pay the fabulous prices asked for it. Unless the material of the gown is made into slippers, the wisest choice is plain satin or either silver or gold, but with any gown except brocade one may accomplish stunning results with the lovely slippers in the shops.

Shocking as it is to the more conservative, women do go ungloried, even with such abbreviated sleeves as shown in this sketch. Curiously enough, gloves are worn at Newport with such informal garb as sweaters and sports skirt, and yet women go ungloried when arrayed in their best. Later, on cooler days, one may hear a criticism of the fact, but as yet few have raised the issue.

Heartbeats

By A. K.

She was a maiden
Of twenty and four
In search of
"The Mister Right."
"He must be a gentleman"
She averred
"Gentle—
A man—
And kind.
He shall not pick
His teeth in public
Or use double negatives
To rile my blood—
Remove his hat
In elevators
And be as polite
To homely women
As to vampires
And sweet young broilers.
He need not be rich
But he must smile
Before breakfast each day.
He need not be rich
If he will share daily—
He may cheat at cards
If the winnings come home.
He may seek burlesque shows
And enjoy them
Who knows—but
The pretty maid servant
He must love alone.
To stay home o' nights
Is a thing I require—
I'll bring him
His books and his pipe.
He may dine on the best
Eat as much as he likes
But his slippers
He must retain.
Fat
Forty
And panting?
No no I couldn't Endure it."
And this our maid
In search of
"The Man."
The man of her
Heart's desire.
We wish her luck—
The best of luck
But misgivings are filling
Our heart.
We bid her God speed
In her search for a mate
But we fear
She may never Find him.

SELAH!

"Mrs. Callaghan," said he, very seriously, "you must be at your husband's side constantly, as you will need to hand him something every little while."

Whereupon Mrs. Callaghan waxed indignant. "Niver, docthor! Far be it from me to hit a man who's le's down!"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

All Interested In Innocent.
Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: Just wanted to say you are all right with your answer to "Innocent."

Tell him for me we are judged by the company we keep. By the No Sunday school boy would take that kind of a woman to a dance or be seen anywhere with her lest some nagging tongue might talk a bit. Tell him I think he is a little feeble-minded and to run along sell his papers and help the unfortunate woman out of the best he can.

My, what a silly man!
In haste,
A MIDDLE-AGED WOMAN.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I come in long enough to say I think you gave "Innocent" just the kind of advice he and a host of other "innocents" need. If he is not man enough to march up the sheriff, or judge, give him a little assistance.

If every "innocent" were made to take his medicine there would be fewer "innocent" men. By the way, all males are not men, and fewer fallen girls.

Oh, why can't our American men wake up to the fact that they are dragging down his world?

Why can't they reach out with heart and hand and help the weaker ones instead of digging a pit for them to fall into, then stepping aside and signing themselves "Innocent"? "Innocent" is no doubt the word, but "innocent" of the deed. Any real honest-to-goodness man would be proud of saving a sister from a fall.

My advice to "Innocent" would be to take your medicine like a man. Don't whine because it's bitter; you are just reaping what you have sown. Make a stepping stone out of your stumbling block and from this on be a man.

Yes, I'm a woman, and not a maiden lady who feels she has not had her share of attention from the masculine members of her acquaintance. I have a father, brothers, a husband and two sons and a number of relatives and acquaintances that call themselves men.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I have read your advice to people in your answer to "Innocent" and will say that I am with you wholeheartedly in the answer you gave to that man, but believe you could have been a little more stern and not have hurt him any. He says the girl is not the kind for him. Why then, didn't he seek the kind of a girl he liked and love, stern and not a maiden lady who feels she has not had her share of attention from the masculine members of her acquaintance?

It may be such a thing that his character is such that no good girl wants his company. Why would he want to be the kind of a questionable character to the dance if he didn't think there was more in it than just company? Some of the men are sick.

I am a woman, 23 years old, and at the age of 24 married a man over 19 years older than myself. He is as good as gold to me. I couldn't want a better husband. He had been certain before he married me that I was of clean unquestionable character, although he admits that during his single life his desire was satisfied by some questionable characters.

All through the ages it has been the same. A man expects his wife to be a pure woman, no matter how corrupt he has been before she marries him. I have a sister who was a victim of a "man," and in place of involving him she accused a stranger, one whom she knew father could never find, while all the time the "man" was in town and knew of her trouble. Do you think that man came to her aid when she most needed him? Indeed not. She suffered the sin herself, and today my mother is raising that little one. She didn't let the misfortune hurt her character and she has married a good man, but there is no chance of them taking the child.

Thanking you for your valuable time and space, I am, respectfully,
"YOUR PAL."

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: After reading the discussion of "Innocent's" letter, we still believe him innocent.

We sure sympathize with him if he has to contend with her as his wife, because a man never has any respect or love for a woman that he is compelled to marry.

Furthermore, he may have thought her a respectable girl.

We don't think any boy would write to you in that manner if he were guilty.

If any girl wants to throw her life away in that manner, certainly she should be made to suffer.

Have you seen a coward because he tries to prove himself innocent to prevent further unhappiness? Our law courts don't convict a man of murder because he had been in the company of the victim.

Can "Innocent" give us further particulars to help prove himself innocent? A few words may change the minds of many of the readers.

We hope you can prove yourself not guilty, "Innocent."

Lonesome Girl.
Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I am a girl, 22 years of age, and am for the first time lonesome. I do not make friends very quickly, but when I do their friendship is a lasting one. Now, all my girl chums are married and settled down, the last one was a chum of four years and a very fine girl, but you know they cannot chase around after marriage. I have also gone with a good many boys; broke up with one one that I had gone with for two, and one-half years. I am a lover of dancing and like to be on the go all the time. Would it look funny to go to dances alone? I know I would see some one there I knew. But what I want is a good old pal, boy or girl. Tell me where to get one. I would be very glad to get one. A nice girl wants a pal and perhaps some other lonesome soul will be touched by her appeal. It is customary for girls to go to dances alone and it is very hard to become acquainted in a strange city. There are many who make congenial friends through the or working girls' clubs, however. This girl gives no address.

A Reader—If you do not care for this boy's society tell him so. You can let the other engagements when he calls—it's very simple when you know how.

Frenchy—At 17 I hardly think the danger of your becoming an old maid is imminent. There will be many more young men and do not jump too hastily. Abide by your parents' wishes; you will be glad in later years.

R. S.—When H. A. answered your declaration of love with the words "she did not want to hear it," that does not necessarily mean that she does not love you. It may be she really does love you and wants you to ask her again. By all means go with the girls who will not let you kiss them because they are more truly women, while the others are just flirts.

Black Eyes—You are all far too young to have even a thought of marriage, and too young to go to dances and return home at 3 o'clock in the morning. Go to parties among girls of your own age and get home at a respectable hour, before midnight.
