*Kiddies love bread baked with
Omar flour*

And don't you just think for one moment that kiddies don't know good bread. And when more kiddies in more homes are fed more Omar bread—there will be less cry for between meal bites of less nourishing, in some cases, harmful foods or confections.

Omar Flour bread, properly baked—almost is a confection. To say that every slice starts with a grin—is putting it mildly. And to bring shiny smiles to the faces of the little tots—who wouldn't make the one little effort of just looking for the name and picture of Omar on every sack?

Certainly—grocers whose customers' interests come first sell Omar—with this guarantee in each sack:

"If Omar doesn't bake the best bread you ever baked, simply take the empty sack to your grocer and get your money."

The All-Around Fall Wrap

By ELEANOR GUNN.

A coat that is smart looking, but one that will withstand all sorts of rough usage, is what most women demand in the way of an outer wrap. Although satin sounds dressy, it is so much more than dressy that it deserves first mention in utility fabrics.

The woman who does not have to consider expense, and who can have a coat for every occasion, has no real problem. Hers but to go forth and find the best styles the shops afford, and to choose the most becoming from among them. This is a task, but a delightful one. Compared to the task of the woman who must consider price and buy a coat that will answer two or three purposes, it is mere child's play.

The coat sketched has just crossed the ocean. It is made of tricolette, not satin, but it could quite easily be duplicated in satin or taffeta and would be equally good and more seasonable in wool jersey or cheviot. It has a snug, "comfy" air that makes it particularly attractive with autumn just ahead. The set of the high collar precludes the faintest possibility of the wind getting down one's back, and the collar is unique because it is the same material as the coat, instead of being fur or some trimming fabric.

Of the dolman type, it has no real sleeve and might almost as truthfully be referred to as a cape. It has just the suggestion of a fitted back line though, which makes one hesitate in classifying it as a cape.

Nearly all of the new coat models do suggest capes, and many dresses have cape backs so the cape idea is hovering in the air and not at all to be scorned.

If this model were made up in black satin lined with a bright color even with white or pale gray, it would be a sensible-every-day-sort-of-garment for a woman of any age to have in her wardrobe. It is quite dressy enough for a theater wrap and not too elaborate to wear on street cars or in the day time. In beige or light jersey it is transformed and immediately becomes a sort of traveling coat that seems out of place for formal wear. Tricolette is a happy medium between the two. It has lightness and warmth and is quite as dressy as satin or taffeta and a season or two newer.

With skirts as short as they are getting, coats should come to the hem, otherwise if a few inches of skirt shows at the bottom of a coat, one has to be extremely cautious about what color and material that skirt is to be. It is certainly smarter to have the skirt entirely covered.

News arriving each day by those who are returning from the Paris opening, is to the effect that a separate coat is indispensable no matter how much of a lover of suits one may be. The between-seasons coat is the present consideration. Later on there will be no dearth from which to choose in the shops; handsome delectable and velour de laine garments heavy with fur, that are going to be rather expensive and look in every detail. The in-between coat need not cost nearly so much money. It may even be made by a clever seamstress or small tailor if one is sure of the correctness of the style chosen.

Crepe de chine makes an excellent coat lining and is so much newer than other silks. There are any number of gay silk linings, some printed in animal and human motifs that are very unusual and add distinction to an otherwise drab garment.

Happy Hollow

Mrs. W. L. Selby entertained a party of 12 guests at luncheon at Happy Hollow club Thursday, and Miss Nina Garrett entertained a party of eight.

Many parties were given for the children, as this was the last matinee day of the season. Mrs. H. M. Rogers entertained a party of 30 guests.

Mr. George Gilmore will give a large luncheon party Friday at the club, and Mrs. P. M. Garrett will have an afternoon affair.

Many large parties will be given Saturday evening at the dinner dance. E. C. Johnson will have 34 guests, and M. M. Robertson will entertain a party of 10.

Heartbeats

By A. K.

To the bank blotter:
Old you are
And wisely silent
Keeping the secrets
Of sinner and saint—
Tender you were
With the lean
Little savings
Blotting the tears
From deposit slips—
Tenderly—
Caressingly.
Oh, how you must have
Revoluted and cringed!
At the rich man's slips
With long lists of figures
Doubled and trebled
By grinding the poor.
You've sensed
In your quiet absorption
The nervous panic
Of the forger's heart—
You knew first hand
Of a costly hat.
Purchased for Youth
By a gray old rat
Whose checks went wild
When the women smiled
On him.
You could have warned
Against "ink" transactions—
Documentary evidence
And its aftermath—
You could have told fathers
Of wasteful son's capers
Who signed
Their very souls away.
The tears that were shed—
Better words that were said—
Joys and fears
That were put on paper
You hold in your heart's
Most secret vault
Away from the Curious crowd
Never a word
Nor a signal
Nor sign
Do you give of
This ruman wreckage—
It is you who knows
The value of truth
And how it's improved
By not being uttered.
Would that we mortals
Could follow your lead
The lead of
The silent bank blotter.
SELAH!

Foulards offer an interesting choice, and if one is buying materials to have the coat made, it is suggested that foulards be considered since it is the off season for them and they are therefore to be found at tempting prices on the bargain counter. An idea that is very much liked by smart women is to repeat the material used for the blouse or upper part of the dress in the coat lining. It carries out a three-piece idea and much is to be said in its favor.

Have you noticed the lovely pheasant turbans displayed in shop windows? Feather hats are nearly always extremely flattering, and this year they are particularly desirable. The model shown is of blonde in a warm cinnamon color.

Just Try This When Hairy Growths Appear

(Modes of Today) A smooth, hairless skin always follows the use of a paste made by mixing some water with plain powdered delatone. This paste is applied to the hairy surface 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain or discomfort attends the use of the delatone paste, but caution should be exercised to be sure that you get real delatone.—Adv.
