

WATER BOARD TO BUILD FLORENCE BASIN ICE HOUSE

Will Have 6,000-Ton Capacity and the Ice Will Be Fit for Domestic Use.

The Metropolitan Water board will erect a 6,000-ton capacity ice house at the Florence water basins for the storage of natural ice to be sold next season by the municipal ice department.

Fred Larson, chief engineer of the water plant, is preparing the plans for the structure, which will be erected in time for this season's crop.

The house will be 100x160 feet floor dimensions, and 40 feet in height. It will cost $20,000 and the insulation will be of the best.

The present storage capacity in connection with the municipal ice plant at Twentieth street and Poppleton avenue is 8,500 tons. The

To Renew Complexion Without Cosmetics

If the excessive use of cosmetics only knew the impression her artificiality really makes upon others, she would quickly seek means of gaining a natural complexion. Let her acquire the mercurized wax habit, discarding make-ups entirely, and she will soon have the kind of complexion that women envy and men admire. It's so easy to get an ounce of mercurized wax at any drug store, use nightly like cold cream and wash it off mornings. And the results are so remarkable. Gradually the lifeless cuticle peels off, in almost invisible flaky particles. In a week or so there's a brand new complexion, clear, velvety, soft, of girlish color and texture.

The treatment is so simple, harmless, and so marvelously effective, the wonder is that every woman whose skin is withered, discolored, rough, freckled or pimpled, has not already adopted it.—Adv.

popularity of the "jitney" ice stations during this season convinced R. B. Howell, general manager of the water plant, that additional storage facilities should be provided.

For Domestic Use.
"The ice we cut from the basins at Florence will be fit for domestic use and will supplement our manufactured ice," Mr. Howell said. Mr. Howell believes that another plant for the manufacture of ice will be built by the Metropolitan Water board next year.

Hogs Take Slump of $1 and Reach Lowest Price Level of Year

Hogs took a sudden slump of $1 yesterday on the Omaha live stock market. Following a decline of about 75 cents Tuesday, the market fell again sharply, reaching the lowest level this year. Average cost Tuesday was $17.21 per 100 pounds. Continued agitation against the high cost of living and cessation of the eastern demand are given as the chief causes for the decline. A decline of 50 cents to $1 was recorded in Chicago yesterday.

My Heart and My Husband ADELE GARRISON'S New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

What Mr. Prentiss Came to Announce.

Ah! Ladies, good morning. This is a terrible thing for the Bayview schools, an awful thing, a horrible thing.

Mr. William Prentiss, senior member of the Bayview school board, appeared to run out of breath and adjectives at the same moment. To bridge the gap he took off his hat which he had not troubled himself to remove at his entrance, and wiped his perceptibly moist forehead, with a large, white handkerchief with a border of purple butterflies.

Mr. Prentiss is an unusually large man, and his face was mottled from the heat of the walk. The combination of his red perspiring face drawn into the lugubrious lines which he thought fitting for the occasion, and his fantastic handkerchief was almost too much for my risibilities. But I realized that Alice Holcombe was under a greater nervous strain than I, knew that she would like to have me take the burden of the conversation upon myself, so I straightened my lips into an answering dolefulness and answered with resigned meekness:

"Yes, indeed, it is, Mr. Prentiss. We came early because we thought we might be needed. Of course the pupils will be much upset today."

"Of course," of course, Mrs. Graham. Yes, yes," Mr. Prentiss has an annoying habit of emphasizing his observations by repeating them. "That is what I have come for. The school board held a special meeting very late last night, and decided to close the schools until after the funeral. You know Mrs. Stockbridge was the daughter of one of the board, and we think it is only fitting under the circumstances that the schools be closed as a mark of respect to her memory."

"That ought to be most gratifying to her family," I murmured smoothly.

"Yes, yes," he returned absently.

then cleared his throat in embarrassed fashion. I decided the most important part of his errand had not yet been told.

"Mr. Stockbridge tells me that you two ladies"—Mr. Prentiss is the type of man who abhors the word "woman"—"have joint authority when he is absent. He asked me to tell you when you reopen school after the funeral to proceed with the work, the final examinations and everything just as if he were here. He said you both were perfectly familiar with the work and his plans, and could carry it on to completion successfully."

Alice Holcombe's voice, clear, incisive, struck into conversation. "What does that mean?" she asked. "Is not Mr. Stockbridge going to finish his work himself?"

Do You Mean—

Mr. Prentiss turned nearly as purple with embarrassment as his fantastically bordered handkerchief. "Well, you see, Miss Holcombe," he said ponderously at last, "you see, there's bound to be a great deal of talk. Oh, a great deal of talk about this affair in the town. Indeed, the way people are already putting their heads together and figuring out the true inwardness of the thing is astounding, simply astounding. I have not seen the village so stirred up in all of the time I have lived in it, and that is 40 years, 40 years. I came here when I was a child of—"

"Pardon me, Mr. Prentiss, Alice Holcombe interrupted his reminiscences ruthlessly, "but what has the talk in the village got to do with Mr. Stockbridge's finishing his work in the school? Has he forgotten how nearly the school year is ended? It is preposterous that he should not be here, no matter how much he is suffering."

Mr. Prentiss cleared his throat again.

"It is not a question of—of Mr. Stockbridge's sentiments," he said slowly, "and of course, it is very unfortunate for the pupils that their work should be upset at this time. But we feel that it would be far worse for them to continue their work under the daily guidance of a man who is under grave—"

Alice Holcombe sprang to her feet, her eyes glittering. "Do you mean to tell me," she blazed, "that you are going to ask him to resign?"

Mr. Prentiss glared at him with offended dignity.

"We have not yet made up our minds," he said coldly, "but it is most likely, most likely that we shall do so."

Woman Believes She Was Victim of Stock Swindling Scheme

Mrs. Lola Records of Harlan, Ia., reported to police yesterday that she fell victim to what she believes is a stock swindling game. She lost her savings of $115.

According to Mrs. Records, she met a "big fat bald-headed stranger" at Lake Manawa. This stranger introduced himself as a salesman of the Tonapah Consolidated Mining company of Los Angeles, Cal., and sold her $115 worth of stock in the company.

He said his name was Billy Madden and that he lived at the Wellington Inn. The next day Mrs. Records was to meet Madden at Seventeenth and Farnam streets. Although she waited for more than an hour, Madden failed to show up, she says.
