Burglars Get $500
Worth of Jewelry
As Family Sleeps

The home of Paul Springer, 1320 North Forty-first street, was entered Tuesday night by burglars who stole $500 worth of jewelry without awakening any member of the family. Entrance was gained by removing a pane of glass of a basement window, and then cutting out a panel of a door leading from the basement to the upstairs. The panel was nearly removed. None of the Springers knew of the robbery until they arose yesterday morning. The loot included a diamond pin and several watches. The office of Dr. L. Gerish, 400 Bee building, was entered Tuesday night by a thief who climbed over the transom and stole a tube of cocaine and a tube of morphine.

NEW DEED BOOKS FOR REGISTRAR'S OFFICE COMING

110 Blank Volumes Cost $5,500—Biggest Work Is Writing Up New Records.

Harry Pearce, county register of deeds, yesterday ordered 110 large index books to take the place of those consumed or irreparably damaged in the court house fire Sunday night. The books cost $50 each, or $5,500 for the 110. The biggest expense, however, will be the cost of transcribing the records from the damaged books and getting from other sources the records which were contained in those entirely destroyed.

Mr. Pearce will get delivery of the first 10 books October 9, and then a force of men, probably working day and night in two shifts, will begin the actual labor of writing up the books.

"We are doing business now," said Mr. Pearce. "There are other sources from which the information regarding abstracts on many pieces of property can be secured, though not as conveniently as from our records. The abstractors have much of this information. The real estate firms that laid out additions to the city have abstracts of property in those additions. But until the indexes have been replaced our work will be crippled seriously." The temporary office of the register of deeds is in the juvenile court room.

My HEART and My HUSBAND
Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

What Happened When Madge Phoned Alice Holcombe. Katie gave one of her infectious chuckles. "Vot you tink happen to dot cake eef Katie no look at heem before dis?" she asked, her face and eyes shining with the consciousness of duty performed. "I go me down, watch that cake as soon as you come talk to dot man. Dot cake she all right, she coming fine, you not worry one beet. I take heem out as soon as she nice brown." "All right, Katie," I said gratefully, for I feared that I might have no more time to bestow upon Junior's birthday cake. "I'll leave the cake in your hands." "I feex, all right," Katie carolled cheerfully, and as I walked to the telephone I envied her voluble spirits.

Alice Holcombe The thought of her had come to me as soon as I had seen the necessity of checking up the attorneys of Kenneth Stockbridge. She was the only person in all Bayview of whom I dared ask a question concerning the principal. I would have gone directly to Mr. Kent's office in New York, but I had read in the newspaper that he had taken a trip out of the city, would not be back for another week and I felt that I never could wait that long to find out if Mr. George Bridgeham was a member of his staff, and if so whether he was the objectionable person who had called on me. There is no telephone in Alice Holcombe's home, but one can reach her through an accommodating neighbor. The chery, some what piping voice of this woman came to me in answer to my call.

An Anxious Wait. "Miss Holcombe? Ally Holcombe? Sure, I'll call her over. But come to think of it, I don't think she's home this morning, Ally aint. Leastways I saw her going out of the house last night with a suitcase, but mebbe she was just takin' some dresses to the cleaners. She does that often, though I tell her it's awful extravagant, that she could just as well do 'em at home. But I'll go over anyway and come back and tell you." "Thank you so much," I responded fervently, realizing with greater force than ever what Alice Holcombe had meant when she said that she dared not stay at my house the night after Miss Stockbridge's death because of the gossip of the neighbors. Evidently in the village of Bayview there was no possibility of the left hand concealing anything from the right.

I held the phone to my ear hoping against hope that the woman, in mistake, and that I would hear Alice's voice presently. But it was the woman's falsetto which greeted me a few minutes later. Message For Alice Holcombe. "I'm awfully sorry," she piped, "but Ally's gone down to Patchogue to her cousin's on her father's side; her father's brother's oldest girl is married and lives down there. She has two children that Ally's just crazy over; you know there's nobody spoils children the way an old maid aunt does; leastways, that's what I tell my husband—his sister lives with us; there's no livin' with the kids when she's around—" "Can you tell me when Miss Holcombe will be back?" I had the question ready to be a hair trigger, shot it into the phone at the first pause for breath upon the part of the woman at the other end of the wire.

"Why! Her mother said she thought she would come in on that train tomorrow afternoon, gets in about 5 o'clock. There's later trains but Ally's awful particular about stayin' up too late when she's got school on hand the next day. She's fine girl that way, but she's an awful fine girl. I always say to my husband—shut that door, and if you don't stop teasing that cat I'll skin you alive."

The terrifying threat startled me for a moment so explosive was it. I almost looked around for the neglected door and the cat I was supposed to be teasing, then seized the opportunity to cut short the woman's voluble apology for "them dratted kids of mine" which she was beginning. "Will it be possible for you to give

Hastening Work on Getting Court House
In Condition Again

Two hundred men are at work clearing up the debris in the court house, putting in temporary windows, repairing the steam heating system and getting the building in condition to be heated when the weather becomes cold. The window frames in many places being entirely burned away, temporary windows are being placed about two feet inside the inner wall so as not to interfere with putting in the permanent frames and windows when they can be obtained.

The county commissioners, in the emergency, have drawn money from the miscellaneous fund to pay for this work, pending action by the legislature to provide funds to do the actual work of rebuilding.

A large body of soldiers from Camp Grant is now quartered in the building. They slept in the corridors and court rooms Tuesday night.

Persons are admitted to the building only by pass and then only at the east door.

a message to Miss Holcombe as soon as she comes in tomorrow?" "Oh, sure," with cordial heartiness. "Glad to do anything to oblige Ally or any friend of hers." "Thank you. Will you please ask her to call Mrs. Graham of Marvin as soon as she gets home? Tell her that it is very important. She knows the telephone number." "Oh, yes, Miss Graham! I'll watch for her the minute she comes in, and tell her right away. This is the school ma'am, Miss' Graham, ain't it? I've heard tell a lot about you."

"Yes, I am one of the Bayview teachers," returned demurely. "Thank you again for your kindness. Good-by," and I had escaped from the telephone, adding to my other worries the vague speculation as to the nature of things Alice Holcombe's garrulous neighbor had "heard tell" about me.
