Ladies' Aid To Begin Program

As a result of co-operation between college of agriculture extension workers and ministers who attended a school for rural pastors at University Place, several ladies' aid societies in Nebraska will begin definite yearly programs of study in October. With the aid of a committee of ministers the women's section of the extension service worked out a series of 12 suggestive outlines and lessons for rural women. One subject is listed for each month, an outline provided for the leaders, and lessons sent that give helpful information and suggestions for the members.

Emma Reed Davidson, leader for the women's extension service, who has the interest of rural women's groups close at heart, set to work, together with her assistants, to compile outlines and lessons according to the topics selected. The following are the monthly subjects which were chosen:

- October—Home Making a Profession.
- November—Music, Reading and Pictures in the Home.
- December—Hot Lunches for the Rural School.
- January—Labor Saving Devices.
- February—Home Sanitation.
- March—Clothing; Selection of Clothing.
- April—Color in Clothing.
- May—Food and Its Relation to Health.
- June—Feeding of Children.
- July—Suggestions for Picnics.
- August—Equipment for Home Games.
- September—My Kitchen.

An outline and subject matter sheet is compiled for each month. The outline is for the use of the leader and the subject matter sheet to be given to each woman present. This material for the October lesson "Home Making a Profession," has gone out to clubs over the state and those for November are in the course of preparation.

The outlines are divided into two parts—the first part being devoted to some home economic topic and the second entirely to recreation. The October outline, "Home Making a Profession," has the following main headings: Definition, distinction between a "home" and a "house," Nobility of home making, What a home should stand for, The relation of the individual home to the community, Ideals in establishing a home. Qualifications for the ideal home maker. Value of home. Subject Matter Sheets.

The subject matter sheets give brief suggestions and develop the outline. A sample of what they contain is given in the following quotation from the heading "Ideals in establishing a home," in the October outline on "Home Making a Profession."

"There are certain ideals which all home makers should have clearly in mind."

"Simplicity is one of these—not living beyond one's means—simplicity in entertaining, simple furnishings, simple, beautiful food, simple yet beautiful clothing, all these help to simplify life and give the homemaker more time for her family and her own recreation."

"Harmony is another quality to be desired in every home. Thoughtfulness, kindness, humility and ability to forgive other members of the family should be constantly uppermost in the minds of the parents."

"Cleanliness and order should be fixed ideals in every home. Cleanliness in handling and preparing food, in the care of clothing, in the care of rooms and furnishings. Upon orderliness depends much of the pleasure of the family. A time and a place for everything will do away with the disorder and confusion common in so many homes."

"Character building should be the aim of home making. This aim cannot be achieved if more thought is given to the care of the house or of the live stock than to the physical, spiritual and mental development of the children."

Three circulars or outlines have been issued on the care of children. They are entitled, "Feeding of Children," "Care and Feeding of Children," and "Mother and Baby." The one on feeding of children, for instance, takes up in a rather elaborate manner the feeding of children each year up to the seventh year. Menus and recipes are given at considerable length.

The women's section extension service hopes to successfully develop this line of rural work for all women of the state. The university and the college belong to the people, the extension workers are hired to extend its benefits to the people and they stand ready and eager for service.

Miss McHugh Opens Drama Section

"The Well Remembered Voice" by Barrie Will Be Read to Club.

Great plans are being made culture and mental progress during the winter season. Women have worked unceasingly during the war—worked hard at labor and drudgery, but now they feel a new urge for the intellectual. One of the first bands of women to begin this work is the literature department of the Omaha Woman's club. The opening program for the season will be given Wednesday, October 8, at 10 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A.

Miss Kate A. McHugh, honorary president of the Drama League and for four years its active president will read Barrie Will's play "The Well Remembered Voice." This play had a run last year in New York and Chicago and would have been seen in Omaha had it not been for the influenza epidemic. This play will be presented for the first time to an Omaha audience by Miss McHugh. Miss McHugh has long been recognized as the leading spirit in moulding public taste for the best drama. As an educator and teacher of literature she has been a tremendous influence upon the youth of the city. Her classes in the study of the drama for adults and her lectures have been an inspiration to her large circle of friends. In the past year the department meets have had the privilege of hearing many leading women lecturers it has been a matter of great pride and commonly remarked among Miss McHugh's legion of admirers that none of the notable speakers surpassed Miss McHugh as a lecturer.

The leaders of the Literature department for the year are: Mesdames George B. Darr, W. S. Knight, Millard Langfield. Mrs. E.

Miss Kate A. McHugh

M. Syfert is in charge of the opening program. The department meets fortnightly on Wednesday.

His love of art was not confined to the variety one finds in the frame, but extended to that greater field—humanity itself. A sidelight on this man, born, as it were, in the lap of luxury, given us by Langdon Parker Marvin, shows something of his really great creative work among boys.

"His interest in them never failed or flagged. He knew in person literally thousands of boys in New York City and elsewhere. They used to come in droves to his house on Thirty-eighth street, beginning early in the morning, for advice, help and comfort, and Mr. Wendell never failed them. It was impossible for him to walk a block in the city of New York without being frequently greeted by boys of all kinds. At least once a year he used to take a selected group of 30 or 40 boys out to the farms of Texas and other western states, where he would place them in farmers' families, and at the same time he would make a point of visiting his old boys and inquiring as to their welfare. He received yearly thousands of letters from these boys, who are scattered all over the world. His influence and the results of his work among the boys of America are of incalculable value to the nation. America owes to Evert Wendell a debt of gratitude for the saving of many thousands of useful citizens and for a splendid example of service to others."

Fine Arts Society Plans Program For Year

The first lecture under the auspices of the Omaha Society of Fine Arts will take place November 8, in the Hotel Fontenelle ball room. James M. Beek will be the speaker. Mr. Beek is one of the leading members of the American bar. At the outbreak of the war he was among the earliest proponents of America's intervention. In support of his policy he wrote "The Evidence in the Case," and "The War and Humanity." He had long been noted as a leading public speaker. He will speak before the Fine Arts on after-war policies and international problems. Among the other lectures planned by the society there will be at least three art lectures. Blasco Ibanez, the author of the "Four Horsemen," is also being considered. He is Spanish and speaks with an interpreter, who is also said to be a fine speaker.

Fashion Dispatch

St. Louis, Oct. 4.—(Special Dispatch to The Bee).—Among the first offerings at the Funston Bros. & Co., fall auction today was silver fox, which has advanced 75 per cent.

The high price for silver fox was $810, brought by a fine, fresh, half-dark skin. Dark silvery pelts were the most in demand, and brought $385 to $395. A black silvery skin fetched $740, two silvery pelts brought $655, and other prices were $645, $625 and as low as $500 for the finer skins.

A silver fox breeder and dealer says a large portion of the silver fox offering were foxes raised on ranches. He claims prices realized at this and the last few sales disprove the claim that wild fox skins generally are of better quality than domesticated foxes. He claims the highest prices of late few sales were paid for skins of domesticated foxes, and says silver fox prices are now only where they ought to be, inasmuch as breeders were compelled to sell skins at a sacrifice during the war to keep their business solvent, and also because a certain percentage of foxes each become too old and probably die in the summer, when fur is less valuable, unless killed. Silver fox brought $2,800 at the London sale a few years ago, but that was due to quantities in which silvers were raised. This price even for an exceptional skin probably never again will be reached. He said domesticated foxes are of dark colors, and run more even in color than wild foxes.

Class Officials Elected.

The Eighth grade B class of Vinson school has elected the following class officers: President, Ruth Dickson; vice president, Clarence Boyer; secretary, June Rossen; treasurer, Merle Grauer; reporter, Marion Nerness. The class plans to have a paper during this, their last year in the grades. Miss Lillian Fuchs has been made editor.

The Kiss That I Forgot

By Samuel Minturn Peck.

I'm sorry for the many things
Unkind that I have done;
Each day new aches my memory brings
By starlight and by sun.
Ah, could I live again my years
'Twould be the dearest bliss
From eyes I loved the falling tears
To wipe, and tell them this.

But, oh, the things I did not do
That easily I might—
They haunt me, yes, they haunt me, too.
From morning until night;
And, in the dark, wet-eyed, I sigh,
Yet naught can white the blot—
I cannot give, until I die,
The kiss that I forgot.
