INDIAN, PIONEER, SCOUT STATUES AT CENTENNIAL

Unique Features Will Be Scattered Through Park at Fort Calhoun-Barbecue for Indians.

A feature of the Fort Atkinson centennial celebration at Fort Calhoun Saturday will be specially prepared statues scattered through the city park. The statues have been in the process of construction for

They include an Indian on horse-back watching the landing of the soldiers; an Indian, mounted and chasing a buffalo; six scouts, clad in the costume of the early frontier period, and a number of other men who figured in the early history of Nebraska.

A correct picture of the first land-ing of soldiers on Nebraska soil has been painted and will form a back-ground for the pageant, which will Woman's Christian association. ground for the pageant, which will represent the same event. The picture is 12 by 16 feet.

A large number of Omahans are expected to attend the celebration including the board of governors of Ak-Sar-Ben. Keen interest in the event is evinced by historical societies in all parts of the country, and representatives from many will be present, it is said.

A barbecue will be given the Indians who participate in the event. Patriotic societies, including the Daughters of the Revolution, will assist in the festivities.

Lillian cupped her chin in her hands with her elbows on her knees, almost at my first word. The old familiar attitude would have in itself reassured me if her words had not already done so. It spelled Lillian in action, definitely "on the job," as Dicky would say.

I began my story with Kenneth Stockbridge odd behavior when he had first asked me to take the position of assistant in the Bayview high school, and traced the chain of events conscientiously down to the mysterious death of the principal's wife. At two points she inter-rupted me, but without looking up or changing at all from her tense

I knew better than to make any comment upon her monologue. Lillian always soliloquizes when she is intent upon a problem, and nothing so enrages her as to have any one interrupt her train of thought. Therefore I said nothing until Lillian, still without raising her face from he hands, said curtly:

Her second interruption came when I was relating the seemingly colorless incident of the luncheon which Milly Stockbridge had shared with the teachers upon the first day of the principal's absence. In blind obedience to Lillian's command I omitted nothing in the recital, even describing the packets of the tea which I had taken to the school, some which had I given to Brief City News
