

HEART DISEASE CAUSES DEATH OF F. T. HAMILTON

Prominent Omaha Capitalist Succumbs in Berth on Train While on a Hunting Trip.

president of the Omaha and Council Bluffs Street Railway company, however, he was forced to return and confer with employees, who had made demands for more pay and threatened to strike unless the demands were met.

Through his efforts a strike was averted, but worry over the critical situation may have weakened his condition, it is said.

Member Pioneer Family.

Mr. Hamilton was a member of one of the oldest pioneer families of the city. He has been closely affiliated with the interests of the city since he left college, approximately 37 years ago.

He was born December 18, 1861, in Omaha, reared and educated here, with the exception of four years, when he attended Georgetown university at Washington, D. C. He gained his first training in financial matters from his father, the late Charles W. Hamilton, who was president of the United States National bank. He was a nephew of the late Frank Murphy, formerly president of the street railway company and head of the Merchants National bank.

In spite of his good financial connections Mr. Hamilton began his business career as a bookkeeper in the Merchants National bank where he left the university in 1882. He was gradually promoted as his ability increased, until he reached one of the most important positions in the bank.

Business Head of Family.

Although one of five children, he was always regarded the business head of the family. His home life had always been of a happy nature.

Mr. Hamilton's family dates back among the earliest in the history of Nebraska. His aunt was married to the first territorial governor, T. B. Cuming. His mother and father were married in Omaha; the latter during the 50s founded the banking firm of Caldwell, Hamilton & Co., now the Merchants National bank.

His uncle, Frank Murphy, died 15 years ago, leaving a fortune of several millions to be divided among Mr. Hamilton and his brothers and sisters.

Mr. Hamilton was a devoted member of the Catholic church.

Fifth President of Car Co.

Mr. Hamilton succeeded Gordon W. Wattles as president of the Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Railway company on March 4, 1919. He was the fifth president of the traction company, the first being W. W. Marsh; the second, Frank Murphy, who died suddenly in New York; the third, Guy C. Barton, and the fourth, Gordon Wattles.

Mr. Hamilton was chosen as head of the gas company about 10 years ago, and a short time later vice-president of the Merchants National bank.

Mr. Wattles was a close friend of Mr. Hamilton and expressed great sorrow when told of the latter's death. "I have never worked with a man who had more admirable qualities than he," declared Mr. Wattles. "He was a man of a happy home. I remember when he was married to Countess DeCistue, 12 years ago this fall."

Grieved at His Death.

F. A. Brogan, an attorney, a schoolmate and personal friend of Mr. Hamilton, also expressed grief when he heard of his death.

"He was a man of very strong character and possessed the substantial virtues of a good citizen," said Mr. Brogan. "Although he did not make many close personal friends, those who knew him well valued his friendship highly."

Mr. Brogan attended Georgetown university at the same time as Mr. Hamilton. "Mr. Hamilton was just a regular college man," Mr. Brogan said, "not too studious and still interested in his work. He made many close friends at college."

Dr. W. O. Bridges, Mr. Hamilton's personal physician, said he had not examined Mr. Hamilton for some time. "I saw him on the street a day or so ago, however," said Dr. Bridges, "and he seemed quite well at that time."

His Close Acquaintances.

A. J. Love, Frank Johnson, A. P. Guile, Charles L. Saunders, W. A. Fraser, E. M. Fairfield and L. S. Crofoot were numbered among Mr. Hamilton's close acquaintances. Luther Drake, president of the Merchants National bank, was also a close friend. He is in New York, but is expected to return at once for the funeral services.

Fred P. Hamilton was at Cody, Neb., on a hunting trip when word of his brother's death reached Omaha. Word was sent him immediately.

The body arrived in Omaha from North Platte last night and was taken to the Hoffman funeral home. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

HYMENEAL

The marriage of Miss Zita Brewer and James A. Gilmore was solemnized at the parsonage of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene Saturday afternoon at 3. Rev. Father Sinne read the marriage lines. They left on a wedding trip to include New York and other eastern points.

Anton Johnson and Miss Florence E. Miles, both of Boone, Ia., were married by Rev. Charles W. Savidge Saturday.

Arthur D. Anderson and Miss Hazel M. Coburn, both of Council Bluffs, were married by Rev. Charles W. Savidge at his residence Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hurley accompanied them.

CHILDREN QUIZ 'GENTLEMAN THIEF' WHILE AT WORK

Gets $6,000 Jewelry From Donahue Home in Nineteenth Job.

Two of the most beautiful homes on South Thirty-second avenue were invaded by the "gentleman burglar" at 4 yesterday morning. Diamonds valued at $6,000 comprised the loot of the biggest haul yet made by the polished rogue when he entered the home of T. J. Donahue, live stock commission man, 2340 South Thirty-second avenue, and held a conversation with every member of the family, including five children.

second avenue, next door to the Donahue home, but took nothing. The Trimble home is one of the places in which the "gentleman burglar," who has been effecting successful robberies of Omaha homes recently, did not talk with any one.

Diamonds and Rings.

The loot taken from the Donahue home consisted of diamonds set in rare platinum pins. Mrs. Donahue's engagement and wedding rings were also taken.

After ransacking the Trimble home, the thief entered the Donahue residence by breaking a safety lock on a front window. He cut the telephone wires as in other instances of the "gentleman's" robberies.

Mr. Donahue, who was asleep in a front room upstairs, awoke when the man, wearing an extra large black cloth over his face, and flashing a green light and a gun, entered his room.

"Be quiet. That's all I ask," the burglar calmly urged Mr. Donahue.

He carried on a conversation in regard to the whereabouts of "some cash" in the house. When Mr. Donahue secretly removed a diamond ring, valued at $1,000, from his finger, the burglar again cautioned him to be quiet.

Entering the room of Miss Etta Carberry, a sister of Mrs. Donahue, the burglar was welcomed with the woman's loud outcry. "I'm not a harmin' anyone, lady," the masked gunman assured her.

He encountered Mrs. Donahue, who was awakened by the cry, in the hallway of the upstairs.

"Just get in there," the thief commanded, pointing to Miss Carberry's room.

"I want to be with the children," Mrs. Donahue cried. Mary Alice, 12; Margaret, 10; Virginia, 6; Frances Elizabeth, 4, and Catherine, 2 years old, were in a room together.

"Then get in there and sit on the bed until I'm through," the masked "gentleman" commanded. The thief had no sooner entered the children's room than they all awoke, sat up in bed and stared at him.

"Ain't he funny?" Virginia, 6 years old, remarked.

"Are you a buglar?" Margaret asked.

At this juncture, the burglar leaned over to the children and lifted his mask.

While Mrs. Donahue sat quietly on the bed, the burglar snatched a jewel box from the bureau. The box contained the following: One platinum bar pin set with four emeralds and 31 diamonds, a platinum dinner pin set with diamonds.

A pearl solitaire pin set with platinum and diamonds. Platinum solitaire ring set with 1 1/2 carat diamond. Platinum wedding ring set with 15 diamonds. Diamond brooch; two lavillieres. Mrs. Donahue estimated her loss at $6,000. The jewelry is partially insured, she said.
