

BUT FEW TROOPS TO BE KEPT ON DUTY IN OMAHA

All Restrictions Which Were Imposed On Account of the Riots Have Been Removed.

Omaha yesterday passed from military control back to its police-governed status which existed before the riot, Sunday, September 28.

Col. J. E. Morris of the 20th United States infantry, who has been commanding officer of the army detachments on riot duty, formally relinquished his Omaha authority, in formal notices to Police Commissioner Ringer and Acting Mayor Ure.

The colonel acted on orders received from Central department headquarters, Chicago. Small forces of troops will be maintained for a while at the court house and also in the fire station at Twenty-first and Lake streets, the latter for a few days.

Military Restrictions Removed. All military restrictions which were imposed on account of the riot have been removed.

Commissioner Ringer stated that he had no misgivings over resuming full responsibility for the protection of life and property in Omaha.

We have added 40 new men to the department and are adding more, said Mr. Ringer. "We are drilling the men and we are otherwise reorganizing the department along such lines as we believe will provide adequate protection to the city."

Mr. Ringer said that the city commissions are working toward the establishment of a new central police station, which has been recommended by the military officials.

Communication to Mayor. Colonel Morris' formal communication to Acting Mayor Ure follows:

"Pursuant to telegraphic instructions from commanding general, central department, I hereby relinquish command of the Omaha police department, and shall leave the city for Fort Crook October 17.

"A force sufficient to guard and protect the riot prisoners is being retained at the Douglas county court house under command of Capt. M. B. Helm, 20th infantry. Captain Helm will be stationed at the court house, telephone number, Tyler 5296.

"A company of United States troops will also be stationed at the fire station, Twenty-first and Lake streets, for a few days longer.

"I desire to thank you for your hearty co-operation, and that of the police department, with the military authorities during their tour of duty in Omaha."

Recommendations Submitted. The following recommendations were submitted in writing by Colonel Morris to Police Commissioner Ringer:

"That counsel be furnished by the city to policemen who find it necessary to defend themselves before the courts for the performance of duty.

"That policemen who are ill be attended by city physicians, or at the expense of the city.

"That policemen's bonds be furnished by the city.

"That a better police station be provided."

Appeals to Pride of Wholesalers in Suit To Stop Dirt Track

City Commissioner Towl filed an affidavit in district court yesterday in the injunction suit of nine wholesale houses on Ninth street, which are seeking to stop the construction of a temporary railroad track on that street for the removal of the dirt from the Dodge street hill.

Mr. Towl states that the low contract price was secured on the promise of the city council that tracks could be constructed by the contractor on city streets, for the removal of the dirt by railway instead of by truck or wagon, and that the work should not be held up, because it is to the advantage of the whole city.

The nine wholesale houses allege that construction of the track on Ninth street from Douglas to Jones streets will interfere with loading and unloading merchandise at their houses.

Three Sons of Mrs. Funk Get the Entire Estate

Mrs. Louise Metz Funk, who died in Council Bluffs October 8, left her entire estate to her three sons, by a will filed in Douglas county court yesterday. Frances Metz Klemm, a sister, living in Bloomington, Ill., and H. H. Baldrige, an Omaha attorney, are named trustees.

The estate amounts to about $30,000 and includes one-third interest in the old Metz home near Twenty-sixth and Harney streets, stock in the Metz brewery property and in other corporations.

Expert in Crocheting at Burgess-Nash Saturday

A special feature of the children's doll clothes sewing classes at the Burgess-Nash store for Saturday morning 10 to 12, will be the appearance of Mrs. Hern, expert in crocheting and knitting from the Fleisher factory. Girls are asked to bring their own needles and yarn, and special provision has been made to take care of a large number on the third floor.

R. K. Lyons Dies

Robert McKee Lyons, 70 years old, 1824 North Twentieth street, died Thursday morning of heart disease after a three month's illness. He was a street car motorman on the North Twenty-fourth street line for nine years, retiring in 1908. He is survived by his wife, one brother and four sisters. Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p. m., in the Crosby undertaking parlors. Burial will be in the Forest Lawn cemetery.

My Heart and My Husband ADELE GARRISON'S New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

When Midge Saw and Heard When She Awoke. Long after Dicky slept I lay awake hugging to my heart the comforting, comprehending assurance of support which my husband had given me when I had told him of the trouble in connection with Milly Stockbridge's death.

It had been a revelation to me of a trait in my husband's character for which I had not given him credit. Much of the terror with which the incidents following the death of my principal's wife had invested me had its roots in the ever-present question: "What would Dicky say if he knew?"

Now he knew, and instead of blaming me his only thought had been of how best to protect me from whatever threatened. When I finally fell asleep my last waking thought was one of grateful happiness mingled with self-reproach at not having understood my husband better.

When I awoke the sun was streaming through the windows, and the room was filled with sounds of delighted baby chuckles. I rose on one elbow to see Dicky capering around the floor in his pajamas playing bear, elephant and other equally amusing roles for the benefit of his small son, who—an adorable, flushed vision—was holding himself up by the bars of his crib and crowing with delight.

Welcoming Arms. "Mornin' Lady!" Dicky sprang to his feet, made me a sweeping bow. "We are now giving our celebrated impersonations, renowned through several continents of the leading wild and domestic animals. If there is any particular specimen which you would like to see or hear our only aim is to please. Your son's taste is somewhat varied, but he seems to like the dog's bow-wow and the lion's roar as well as anything."

The baby spied me at this juncture, and suddenly dismounting all other blandishments, put out his hands entreatingly and showed the tiny teeth of which we were all so foolishly proud in an entrancing, blinding grin. Dicky looked at him reproachfully.

"Can you beat it?" He demanded of the surrounding atmosphere. "Here I spend codies of valuable time and talent in a high class entertainment for this young man's benefit while you simply snore your head off, and then at your slightest look he hands me the icy mitt."

"Dicky!" I protested half-laughing, half-indignant. "I don't snore. You know I don't. And please give me Junior right away or he'll cry."

"Pardon me. You're just a rapid breather. Is it?" Dicky teased, but he swung Junior high in his arms and brought him laughing and crowing to me. I cuddled him closely, and almost fiercely, for I never have gotten over the wonder of having his tender little body in my arms, and spoke over his head to Dicky.

"Have you kissed him yet for his birthday? If you have without waking me—"

Dicky's Vow. "Do you think I don't value the safe position of my head where it rests at present on my shoulders?" Dicky retorted. "But I warn you, you're not going to have him first, either. We'll just perform that little ceremony together."

He dropped to his knees by the bedside and slipped an arm around my shoulders. The baby cuddled between us, looking up spherically as if he knew something special was on hand.

"Now, you on that cheek, I on this," I said, and then, with infinite care and tenderness we each imprinted a kiss upon the roseleaf cheeks of our baby.

"One," we said simultaneously, then with a remembrance of nursery lore I added smilingly: "And now, one to grow on."

The ceremony completed, Dicky looked at me teasingly. "If I remember rightly," he said, "it is also customary to give a child 'one to get married on.'"

He bent his head toward the baby again. I pushed him away aloofly.

HAMILTON WILL DIVIDES ESTATE IN HALF TO WIFE

Brothers Hold Other Half of $500,000 in Trust for Children.

The late Frank T. Hamilton left all his property to his wife and two children. His will was filed in county court yesterday. His brothers, Charles and Frederick, are named trustees for one-half of the estate, which is to be held until his children become 26 years of age.

The will was made February 23, 1915, and witnessed by W. A. Smith, interested. And just let me tell you something to remember. I'm about the happiest man in the world today, and it's all you and the little chap here. Please God I'm going to take good care of you both always."

Luther Drake and Francis A. Brown

The value of the estate was given at $500,000. This is purely nominal and no estimate can be made until the filing and appraisal of his property. It is believed that the estate is much larger.

Half Direct to Wife. The will provides that an equal, undivided one-half of his estate shall go direct to his wife, Luisa C. Hamilton.

The other one-half is bequeathed to his brothers, Frederick and Charles, in trust for the children, the income to be used in their maintenance and education until they reach 26 years of age.

Mostly Stocks and Bonds. If Mr. Hamilton's two children die before reaching the age of 26, this one-half of the estate is to be given to Mrs. Hamilton.

Over 5,000 Teachers Expected in Omaha for Big Convention

More than 5,000 teachers are expected to attend the convention of the Nebraska State Teachers' association, which begins here on November 5 and lasts three days.

Miss Doris Goethe, convention secretary at the Chamber of Commerce, has notified that the Board of Education of Beatrice, Neb., has granted teachers there full pay and will pay their railroad fare if they attend the convention.

The Board of Education at Sutton, Neb., has also granted the teachers full pay during their absence, Miss Goethe says.

the United States Trust Co. shall become the trustee. Mr. Hamilton's estate consists largely of stocks and bonds in the various local corporations with which he was prominently identified and other corporations. Real estate comprises about $100,000 of the estate.
