

SULTAN LEAVES HIS MORO HAREM TO U. S. MARINE

Sergeant Surprised When Notified That Estate of Ruler Who Adopted Him as Son Includes Women.

By Universal Service.
San Francisco, Oct. 18.—Serg. Robert A. McLean of the marine recruiting station, No. 24 East Twenty-third street, New York, and a former San Franciscan, recently fell heir to a surprise legacy, featuring 40 wives among its assets—or liabilities.

Sergeant McLean is a son of the late Dr. Robert A. McLean, professor emeritus of clinical and operative surgery, University of California. McLean spent two of his many years of service in the southern islands of the Philippine group. Instead of using his spare time languishing for the friends back in the states McLean made new ones of a different race and a decidedly different color. He learned the language and chummed with the reputedly fierce Moros to such an extent that he was formally adopted by the sultan of Llang-Liang, a small island off the coast of Borneo.

McLean is surprised. And now that same dusky ruler has died and bequeathed his various holdings to this American soldier—and there is a harem. McLean is surprised. The days and incidents connected with his long stay in Llang-Liang had grown dim in his mind. But he is not at all perplexed. On September 23 he started on the long journey to take possession of his "kingdom."

The sultan's fondness for McLean grew to such an extent that he merely expressed the wish of making him his legal son. McLean did not take this seriously. The old man was 86.

But one day a summons came. It bade McLean present himself with two friends at the royal abode. McLean tells his experience this way:

Summoned Before Sultan.
"I took Frank Kornucun and Sergeant Walter, of the marine corps, now stationed in California, with me. When we reached the sultan's home we were ushered into the public hall, which was only a good-sized tent pitched on stilts. There I found the sultan, looking very stately and important.

"My friends and I were taken into an adjoining room and dressed in long, flowing robes. We were taken before the sultan, who first bared his own chest and made a little slash in it with a Moro kris and then made me bare my chest while he cut the same size slash. Taking a drop of blood from his chest, he mixed it with a drop of my blood, and from then on I was his adopted son. I left the next day, and I have never seen him since.

Admits Some Are Pretty.
"And speaking of the harem, they were off in quarters by themselves and I never set eyes upon them. Whether they were as old as my grandmother, or mere flappers, I do not know. Some of the native women are quite pretty."

McLean doesn't know whether he will be called upon to enact the role of a wealthy potentate, or merely assist in a series of financial adjustments in the settlement of the sultan's estate. If there really is a nice, fat fortune, he says he knows how to use it in New York.

But the harem? McLean looks archly aside and says he doesn't know.

Germany's Dukes and Princes Beginning to Come Out of Holes

By ALFRED G. ANDERSON.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, Oct. 18.—German royalty is beginning to recover from the blow inflicted by the revolution. One by one, the former dukes and princes creep forth from their hiding places and assert their claim to a place in the sun.

For instance, Karl Eduard, former Duke of Coburg-Gotha, appeared in the Gotha civil court yesterday and filed suit against the state of Gotha for the recovery of his fortune which was confiscated by the local government last July after he had refused to accept 10,000,000 marks as final settlement for his property.

Similar action has been taken in the court of Arolsen by the former Prince of Waldeck-Pyrmont.

The fate of the former kaiser's property and that of his family is still in doubt. The German government has just made an order authorizing former officials of the imperial family to continue the administration of the many landed estates and forests owned by William II and his relatives. The order cautiously provides for possible imperial lawsuits by authorizing the officials concerned to represent their former masters in court.

Weary Willies Go With Passing of Beer Saloons

By International News Service.

Boston, Oct. 18.—"Weary Willies," "Happy Hooligans" and vagrants of a similar type are being slowly eliminated from society. This was the statement of Robert W. Kelso, executive secretary of the state board of charity, in discussing figures which show commitments to the Massachusetts state farm at Bridgewater was only 42 in July, as against 127 for the same month a year ago.

"The passing of the saloon and improved industrial conditions are responsible," said Mr. Kelso.

Human Target to College Through Elks and Red Cross

By International News Service.

Springfield, Oct. 18.—George Turnbull, a local man, known as the "human target," because he carries marks of 32 wounds received while with a Scotch regiment, has been notified to proceed to Valparaiso university, Indiana, where he will be given a course in wireless telegraphy. The Red Cross and the national lodge of Elks are responsible for Turnbull's appointment.
