DECORATIONS OF PURE FOOD SHOW TO BE SURPRISE

Eighty-Seven Distinct Exhibits Will Make Show Biggest of its Kind in Country.

The services of expert interior decorators have been acquired by J Cameron, secretary of the Omaha Retail Grocers' association, to work their miracles of transformation Saturday and continuing until the following Saturday.

An entirely new and novel scheme of interior decoration will be fol-lowed for the show. The floor plan has been worked out so that the greatest number of display booths may be installed. This floor plan has been so worked out as to make the display booths not only practical, but attractive.

Mr. Cameron is not making pub-lic the general scheme of decoration. He plans to furnish a surprise to visitors to the show. The Auditorium is rather a barn-like structure, but the decorators have assured Mr. Cameron that when they complete their work it will not be recognizable as the same building.

Restrictions have been placed upon exhibitors so that their displays will not interfere with the aim toward attractiveness and a big corps of janitors and other workers will be employed to restore the Auditorium to its normal appearance

It would be a still bigger show with still more displays if the Auditorium was of sufficient size to accommodate them, as any number of manufacturers, wholesalers and jobbers of food products have applied for space, which could not be award-ed them on account of the limited capacity of the building.

Birthday Surprises and the 'Phone Call That Interrupted Them.

Our house was a busy one upon he morning of Junior's birthday It had seemed to me that everything possible had been done the day be fore but Dicky was like a boy in his determination to make the day a eal fete, replete with surprises.

He shrouded in mystery the big box he had sent to Junior, taking it with Jim's assistance, to the bart each night.

There will be 87 distinct exhibits with dire penalties any one who tried to find out beforehand what the biggest of its kind in the countries the gift was. He was equally air and mysterious about other bundles which he had brought with him.

Of course, all this set little Marion wild with anticipation and speculation, while Alfred Durkee, who lounged early in the morning on the the pretense of helping Dicky—but in reality I knew to snatch a few words with Leila-saw to it that the noisy, laughing confusion did not lapse for want of his aid.
