

WOMAN'S SECTION OF THE BEE

Whiles I am a beaver, I will toil
And say there is no sin but to be rich;
And, being rich, my virtue then shall be
To say there is no vice but beggary.

She is mine own,
And I as rich in having such a jewel
As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl,
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold.
—Shakespeare.

Heart Beats

NEBRASKA is becoming quite the place for celebrities to visit. Our middle western state has attracted so very many prominent people during the past few weeks that we have long ago ceased to be excited over the arrival of any personage. Kings and queens, opera singers and presidents have stopped here and now another visitor is to arrive in the near future according to the Los Angeles Times. The following is a clipping from it: "If every little girl had the treat to look forward to that Bessie Love has, she'd be willing to be good any number of days in succession. Bessie is going to visit no less personages than Gov. S. R. McKelvie of Nebraska, and his wife, who used to be Miss Martha Groves, a well-known magazine writer. "Miss Love met Mrs. McKelvie, who was then Miss Groves, about four years ago, when Bessie was just bursting from the chrysalis small-part actress into stardom. The two became great friends, have corresponded ever since, and a few days ago Miss Love received an invitation to visit the governor of Nebraska and his wife right at the gubernatorial mansion. Prandell-Ziegman. A wedding which was solemnized Sunday afternoon was that of Miss Hannah Ziegman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ziegman, to A. Prandell. The ceremony was performed at the Ziegman home, Rabbi Taxon officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Prandell will spend their honeymoon in the east, and be at home in Omaha after November 1. Cathroe-Robinson. A quiet wedding was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Cathroe, when their daughter, Miss May Cathroe, became the bride of Mr. James Robinson. Rev. Mr. Marsden of St. Andrew's Episcopal church performed the ceremony. The only attendants were Miss Belle Cathroe, sister of the bride, and Mr. Richard Robinson, the groom's brother. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson will be at home at the Dartmore apartments after November 1. For Bridal Party. Miss Mildred Todd entertained at a delightful luncheon party at the Blackstone Monday in honor of Miss Clara Hart, who will be a bride this week. The decorations

Who are you Little spirit? Whispering In my ear Of baby days And old times Most forgotten. You come When no one else is near To hear The promptings Of your heart— You bring to me (To here and now) The grave mistakes Of youth's wild Unchecked tongue— I blush— The flush Stays such a while! Crimson and indelible. Lessons you give Of the long-ago— Then lift me Into the future years— Into the land Of motherhood— Only by women understood— When dear little baby Pins all his faith— His trust and love— To mother— (He feels so safe In mother's arms) "Ah! Take from women All their jewels— Rob them of beautiful gowns And furs— Sacrifice freedom— Take all they have But leave them (Every one) Sweet motherhood." Who are you Little spirit? Whispering These things in my ear— "I am the Spirit Soliloquy— Bringing life's panorama To every true-hearted Modern Eve." —SELAH.

Stars Twinkle Brightly at Night but Sleep In Daylight

Stars go into retirement in daylight. But, oh, how they scintillate at night! Alessandro Bonci of the Chicago Opera company is not only one of the world's greatest tenors, but he is the father of four, which we presume was the reason for his early energy. Anyway, he was up and rehearsing with the conductor at 11 this morning. He was the only one of the stars who had begun to twinkle at this early hour. And Signor Bonci is a lovable father, so say members of the company and all doubt is dispelled when Bonci smiles. Short, stout and handsome, he looks anything but like the picture book Italian, though his accent is real. The subject of his children and home are of more importance than his voice, at least he seems to prefer talking about them. Three boys and one daughter, between the ages of 15 and 22—the pride of his heart. "But none of them shall sing," shrugged Signor Bonci. "They study now and shall choose their own professions—anything but the operatic stage. To become great in the operatic world one must make too many sacrifices; one must always be away when the babies are little and cute; one misses their tender years—years which can never be called back for a convenient season. Singers dare not dissipate, not even to the extent of late hours with a good book. Health is necessary, strength essential. You see I am not young but I still have my voice. That is because I have sacrificed everything pleasant in life which interfered with singing." And so, in the Bonci family, the old custom of "like father like son," is shattered to a thousand bits. There is one feature of the big opera company which cannot be overlooked when Mme. Raisa, Signor Dolci, Rimmini and many others have a chance to say a word. He is the protegee of Raisa, Dolci and Rimmini, but the pet of the company and properly known as Signor Rubini. "His voice is warm and wonderful," exclaimed Raisa. "Not a Caruso, not anybody but the world-famous Rubini, in another two years," shouted Dolci.

The native women of Morocco are very particular about the preservation of their complexions. They wash their faces in rose water in which apricot kernels baked and powdered are introduced. The apricot kernels are supposed to preserve the natural tint of the complexion. The number of women employed by the railroads of the United States has been reduced since January 1, from 100,000 to about 75,000.
