Supreme Court Has Decided Convention Is Legal, and Voters Should Wake Up.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 21.-(Spe-cial.)-The lack of interest on the part of the people of the state regarding the election of delegates to the constitutional convention is evident on every hand and, in an effort to awaken the people to a greater interest in the matter, which really means more than the election of a legislature or the selection of state ficers, because the convention will endeavor to build up a new constituion to take the place of the one which has been in use for nearly 45 years, William T. Thompson, former attorney general of the state, has given out the following statement: Only 10 Per Cent Votes.

"There has been a manifest and a general indifference among the voters throughout the state regarding the constitutional convention to be convened the second day of De-cember of this year, and to the im-portance of the nomination and election of delegates which are to compose such convention. This in-difference is shown by the fact that in the 24 districts, embracing 42 counties, where primaries are held to nominate delegates, less than 10 per cent of the votes of these districts were cast. It is further shown from communications which I have received from practically every part of the state.

"This indifference is believed to result not so much from the fact that the people do not appreciate the importance of the convention, which is to frame the future fundamental law of the state, as from the uncertainty which has existed as to whether there would be a conven-tion. The uncertainty of having a convention arose from the fact that certain parties had commenced a suit in the court challenging the validity of the statute providing for such a convention. This suit, which resulted in sustaining the statute by the judgment of the district court, was immediately appealed to the su-preme court, where the uncertainty of the constitutional convention remained until the appellate court rendered its decision. "What's the use of taking any interest in the matter of the delegates to the con-

matter of the delegates to the con-stitutional convention until the su-preme court determines that there will be a convention?" was a com-tion is to be held, it is to be hoped that its importance will appeal to the electors throughout the state, and one emanating from almost every part of the state. Supreme Court Decides. "But in a clear-cut, decisive opin-ion now delivered by the upreme court, all doubt as to there being a convention is removed. The statute providing for the nomination and election of delegates and the holding of a convention has been upheld.

giving "equal rights to all and spe-cial privileges to none," a constitu-tion that, on account of its manifest inherent fairness, will appeal to the people generally, the time, labor and expense of the convention will have been in vain. There will be no hope for any other kind of a constitution heaving ratified by the acoust being ratified by the people.
