

WINS BOX FOR 'PASSING SHOW' IN BEE CONTEST

Shows Name Can Be Made 74,354 Times From Words and Letters In Advertisement.

An expenditure of 10 1/2 hours' time and the involving of a system and an adding machine, resulted in Merl W. Reese, 3216 Myrtle street, winning the first prize offered by The Bee in "The Passing Show" advertising contest. As a result of his efforts Mr. Reese was yesterday given an order on the Boyd theater for a stage box, good for eight persons, at the opening of the show Sunday night.

Mr. Reese's answer shows that the words "The Passing Show" can be made 74,354 times out of the words and letters appearing in two pages of advertisements in the Thursday evening edition of The Bee.

Edith Weinberg of the El Beudor apartments won the second prize, two orchestra seats, for the show. Olive King Larson, 702 South Thirty-sixth street, won third prize of two seats.

Clara Olsen, Bancroft apartments, Council Bluffs, Ia., C. A. Rothery, 139 North Thirtieth street, and Lena M. Roberts, 554 Omaha National bank building, won fourth, fifth, and sixth prizes, respectively, two balcony seats each.

Mr. Reese counted the number of times that each letter in the three words appeared in each advertisement. He found that the letter "g" appeared 94 times. With 14 letters appearing in the three words he then made use of the various combinations finding that 5,311 combinations could be made with the one letter and then multiplied that number by the number of letters in the three words arriving at his successful answer.

"The Passing Show of 1919" will appear at the Boyd theater for one week beginning today.

FEAR CHINESE LOVER MISSED ORIENTAL MAID

Omaha Citizens May Intervene In Mercenary, Loveless Marriage.

The finale of the Oriental romance, involving a conflict of Oriental-Occidental ideals, which, for two short intervals, was centered in Omaha, has not yet been learned.

Whether Fu Wing, young Chinese Columbia university student, arrived in San Francisco in time to rescue his love, Wu Sao, from an unhappy marriage, willed by her millionaire father in Pekin, China, is the subject of many spirited conversations in Omaha.

All efforts by railroad officials to learn the outcome of the affair have failed.

Fear She's Out of Reach.

It is feared that the little Chinese girl, who had been attending Wesley college to "become like the Americans" has been spirited from the reach of her lover, by the trusty guard of her father, who was sent to the United States to take her to Pekin. It is pointed out that they may be hiding in the Chinese quarter of San Francisco, waiting for the first boat to China.

The first steamer to sail is the Nippon Maru, of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha lines, which leaves San Francisco for Pekin on October 30. The next boat is the Fushima Maru, of the Japan Mail Steamship line, which leaves Seattle, Wash., on November 2.

During his short stop in Omaha, Fu Wing declared that it would be almost impossible to stop the marriage of Wu Sao to the man of her father's choice, once she had reached China. Her father had never left China, he said, and would not understand the ideals of America, which make love the paramount issue in marriage.

Omahans May Intervene.

So interested have many Omahans become in the case, however, that an attempt will be made to stop the marriage. The matter will probably be discussed at the next meeting of the Omaha Women's club, it is said, at which time means of averting the marriage will be discussed.

In the meantime I. Kahn, president of the Megeath Stationery Co., father-in-law of Mrs. Kesheva Deva Shastri, former Omaha girl, who is in Pekin at the present time with her husband, Dr. Shastri, will make an effort to stop the marriage, in case the girl is really forced to sail for China.

"Dr. Shastri seems to have great influence in Oriental affairs," said Mr. Kahn, "and I believe if I write him he can do something to stop the affair. I suppose Fu Wing, the girl's real lover, will sail for China if he does not find her in San Francisco. His appearance on the scene, combined with the influence of Dr. Shastri might convince the girl's father that love should take its course, I believe."

Wright Joins Holmes

Motor Car Sales Force After spending a week at the Holmes Motor Car factory at Canton, O., H. E. Wright has decided to cast his lot with the Holmes distributors of this city.

Wright has been in the automobile business at Washington, D. C., and has been attracted by the wonderful showing made by distributors of automobiles in the middle west. In speaking of the Holmes, Mr. Wright says that he believes this car represents an advance in motor car construction which is not surpassed by any car on the market today. The Holmes has an air-cooled motor and the number of features in its construction have been copied after airplane designs. A number of features which are not found on any other car are found on the Holmes and among those familiar with the air-cooled motor this car is growing in favor almost beyond the fondest hopes of the manufacturers.
