

MINISTER'S SON GIVES BOND ON RIOTING CHARGE

Sixteen-Year-Old Chicago Boy Returns With His Father to Enter School.

Harvey Robinson, 16 years old, son of Rev. George Robinson of the faculty of McCormick Theological seminary, Chicago, was released from jail yesterday by District Judge Redick under $2,500 bond to await trial on the charge of unlawful assemblage and rioting for which he has been indicted by the grand jury in connection with the riots of September 28.

Harvey's father was here from Chicago. Harvey, a tall, studious-looking youth, wearing tortoise shell-rimmed glasses, looked like anything but a rioter. In fact, he declares he was not rioting, but "bumming" his way west when he happened to be in Omaha at the time of the riot.

Harvey's father took him to Chicago, where he will be put back in the high school to pursue his studies until a judge and jury are ready for him in Omaha.

J. C. SANDERSON MAKES A GAIN OF 25 POUNDS

Ends Twelve-Year Trouble by Taking Tanlac—"It's Wonderful," He Says.

"I have gained over twenty-five pounds since I commenced taking Tanlac, and troubles that have been causing me to suffer for twelve years have been completely overcome," said James C. Sanderson, who lives at 110 South John Street, Springfield, Ill., while talking to a Tanlac representative the other day.

"Yes, sir, Tanlac fixed me up all right," continued Mr. Sanderson, "and I'll tell the world that it is the best medicine on earth to build a man up when he is all run down like I was. There wasn't a time during all the twelve years that I could sit down and eat a meal without suffering afterwards. Why, I would be so bloated up with gas at times I could hardly breathe, and would have the worst sort of cramping pains in the pit of my stomach. I had actually gotten to the point where a little soup was about the only thing I could eat, and I got so weak at all and just had to lay off from the job altogether. I was very much discouraged over my condition and I knew that unless I soon got hold of a medicine or treatment that would help me, I would not live much longer.

My HEART and My HUSBAND Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Madge's Victory and Dicky's Surprise.

I did not waste any farther time over the telephone with little Mrs. Durkee. With a curt "Yes, it is ready!" I snapped up the telephone. I purposely made my voice sound offended. I wanted her to have that to worry over in the minute or two which must elapse before I could see her.

I fairly ran downstairs, and skimmed over the lawn lying between the two houses with a celerity I had not suspected I possessed. The side door of the house was open except for the screen which I could see was unlocked. I rang three short, sharp ripples, always my signal to Mrs. Durkee, then, as was my custom, opened the door without further ado and made my way up the stairs to her room.

I heard her voice in a plaintive murmur before I reached her door. "No, Alfred, dear, don't ask me," she was saying. "Go on with Leila. Don't let me spoil your enjoyment. I shall be perfectly all right."

"But, mother!" Alfred was expostulating worriedly as I knocked lightly upon the lintel of the half-opened door, and without further ado pushed it open, and crossed to my little friend's side. "I'll see to your mother," I said crisply. "Please go over with Leila at once, Katie is having seven distinct kinds of spasms about her dinner. Get everybody together just outside of the dining room. Dicky kind you know, and wants it to burst upon us all at once. I'll be there almost immediately. Please hurry!"

Madge Takes Charge. I flung the last words impatiently over my shoulder as I bent over my little friend who was lying back in a rocking chair with every appearance of suffering. I think Alfred, who knows his mother's little foibles very well, although he never betrays his knowledge, was only too glad to leave her to me. I cast a furtive glance after him, saw him seize Leila—who, troubled and reluctant, was standing just outside the door—by the arm and hurry her down the hall. I waited only until I was sure she was out of earshot before beginning my campaign against my little neighbor.

"See here, you little fraud!" I said with surface merriment, but with underlying grimace that I knew she would recognize. "If you think I'm going to let you spoil my whole party you are another think coming. Dicky says. Here! I brought this along with me—it is absolutely warranted to relieve a headache, and if it doesn't, why there are plenty of couches at our home. But be there at the beginning of this dinner you'll get to be so swollen this, both your face and eyes—that's what I always do when my head aches—and come along."

The Surprise Disclosed. "This" which I held out to her, was a pellet of a kind prescribed for me long ago by Dr. Pettit when I was suffering from nervous headaches. I knew that if she were really suffering it would relieve her, and if she were shamming, as I more than half suspected, it would not hurt her.

"Will it cure a headache, too, Madge?" she asked, with a pathetic querulousness that appealed to me even while it irritated me. "I'm sure of it," I said flippantly. "Because headaches are usually nothing but indigestion. Come, where's a wash cloth or do you prefer some powder?"

"But I look a fright," she protested weakly, and I knew that my battle was won. "You'll look worse if you don't hurry," I retorted, snatching a powder puff and a mirror from her dressing table. "I'll give you 30 seconds to primp." "You're—just awful, Madge," she replied, daintily applying the powder puff. "But I suppose I ought not to spoil your dinner. But I never thought of it in that way, and it just seemed as if I couldn't."
