If the stalk is rough, the character of the "fortune" will be rugged and unpolished. If smooth, polished and urbane. Many important deductions may be drawn.

Perhaps there is nothing which so entirely satisfies the average fate seeker as an oracle which may be depended on to answer questions in writing. This oracle which may be made very fanciful, is usually painted on a curtain, after the manner of the man in the moon already mentioned. It might take the form of a huge witch head, a witch sat (Grimalkin), a ghost or goblin. A big false face with extra large mouth (which may be cut wide) pinned on a curtain and having the mouth cut through the sheet would also serve.
