

MOTORCYCLE MAN DECLARES RINGER BROKE HIS WORD

Sam Board Asserts Police Commissioner Changed His Mind Over Night In Business Deal.

"It was the worst business deal I ever heard of a man doing," declared Sam Board, manager of the Omaha Bicycle Co., while relating a recent experience he had with Police Commissioner Ringer, in connection with the purchase by the city of seven motorcycles for the police department.

Mr. Board asserted that a week ago he delivered seven new Indian motorcycles to the police station, on a gentlemen's agreement that they would be purchased by the city. He added that the deal went so far that even his competitors were congratulating him on his success. He further alleges that Mr. Ringer changed his mind over night, without even having the courtesy to offer an explanation.

The motorcycle agent is substantiated in most details by Sgt. Tom Baughman, who has charge of the motor equipment at Central police station. Mr. Ringer denied the allegation of Mr. Board.

Says Officers Wanted Indians.

Mr. Board stated that when he went to Mr. Ringer about the matter a week ago the police commissioner stated that he did not know anything about motorcycles, but that he intended to abide by the decision of Sergeant Baughman and the motorcycle policemen. "I then went to Baughman, who told me that 12 of the 15 motorcycle policemen expressed a preference for Indians," said Mr. Board.

"Baughman further told me that Commissioner Ringer had told him to go ahead and take them if he wanted these machines. I told Baughman I wanted a more definite understanding, so Baughman saw Mr. Ringer again and came to my store in the afternoon of last Friday to tell me that Commissioner Ringer had even made out a resolution for Indians and would send the resolution to the council in that form. Baughman added that the commission had expressed a desire to get this machine early so as to have the men in readiness for Halloween.

"I delivered seven machines last Friday. There was no other thought but that the machines had been bought. Baughman even told me that there was only the red tape of putting the resolution through the city council to close the transaction.

"Changed His Mind."

"On Tuesday noon of this week Baughman called me over the telephone to say that Mr. Ringer's secretary had advised that the Indians would be sent back. I immediately went to see Mr. Ringer, who stated that he had changed his mind. He admitted that he had said that he would leave the selection of machines to the riders, but told me that he had changed his mind and that that was all there was to it; that the riders would have to use the machines he bought, and he added that only four or five riders knew anything about motorcycles, anyway.

"I asked him about the expense we had been put to and he replied that that was our lookout. He told me that if we were not ready to take a chance, we should not have sent the machines. I replied that we did not think we were taking any chances; that we were told by his representative that it was as good as a sale. Mr. Ringer admitted having told Baughman about the Indian machines, but insisted that he had a right to change his mind. It was the rawest, rottenest deal I ever saw a white man do in my life."

Made Out Resolution.

Sergeant Baughman admitted that there was considerable foundation for Mr. Board's belief in the sale of the Indians to the city.

"But I did not tell Mr. Board that Mr. Ringer had made out a resolution for these machines," Baughman said. "I advised Board not to go too far in the deal. It is a fact that all except one of the motorcycle policemen recommended Indian motorcycles and I recommend these machines to Mr. Ringer who then decided to buy another kind of motorcycle."

"I never spoke to Mr. Board at all about buying Indian motorcycles. I recall that I met him at the police station and I told him that any machine he placed there would be entirely on his own responsibility," said Mr. Ringer.

Daughter Says She Took Mother's Hoard To Put It in the Bank

Marion Donahey, 55 years old, 222 Cedar street, returned $1,000 to her mother, Mrs. Mary Donahey, 77 years old, Thursday night following an investigation by detectives in which the daughter is said to have confessed having taken the money.

"I was going to put it in the bank for her," the daughter told police.

The aged mother, who is ill and partially blind, reported her loss to the police Thursday afternoon when she found her cash box broken open and lying on the floor of her home. The money was the savings of a lifetime, the woman said.

The daughter was taken to the central police station, but was not booked, as her mother refused to prosecute her.
