

OMAHA GAINS BY APPOINTMENT OF NEW RAIL HEAD

H. R. McCullough, Recently Named Northwestern Traffic Manager, Aware of Possibilities Here.

Extensive improvements and enlargements of Chicago & North Western railroad property in Omaha when the road is returned to private operation, are predicted here as a result of the appointment of Hiram R. McCullough as vice president and traffic manager of the entire Northwestern system.

News of Mr. McCullough's appointment reached Omaha today, and Northwestern officials here are rejoicing.

Mr. McCullough has visited Omaha on numerous occasions, and although his headquarters are to be in Chicago, he is keenly alive to the possibilities of Omaha as a great traffic center, according to railroad men here. He is expected to relieve President Finley of all traffic matters, and also be his assistant in handling details of the road's business.

His is the first appointment made by the Northwestern corporation management in the reorganization of its staff in preparation for private operation. Railroad men here say it will require herculean work to bring traffic matters where they were before government management, but it is believed that Vice President McCullough and his staff will prove equal to the task.

"Omaha is fortunate in having such a man at the head of the Northwestern lines," declared W. H. Jones, division freight agent here, "for no man appreciates the opportunities for a progressive policy in Omaha more than Mr. McCullough."

Floats have been invented by an Englishman to enable a bicycle to be driven through the water the same as on land without the addition of a propeller.

LOVE OF CLOTHES AT BOTTOM OF GIRLS' DOWNFALL

Woman Deputy Sheriff Asserts Fine Garb Sends Females to Prison.

Los Angeles, Nov. 2.—Mrs. Nettie Yaw, the only woman deputy sheriff under Sheriff John C. Cline, says that nine times out of ten the love of clothes is at the bottom of woman's straying from the straight and narrow path.

Mrs. Yaw has conducted hundreds of women from the Los Angeles county jail to the state prison and to hospitals. She has seen the conditions that surround their lives; she knows just why they succumbed to temptation and just what that temptation was.

"Girls who have committed offenses which result in imprisonment," says Mrs. Yaw, "have a strong yearning for pretty clothes. Pretty things in general, silks, furs and automobiles which they cannot afford, and which they see are the possession of girls of wealth."

"They cannot withstand their desire. The result is that they forge checks to buy pretty things. This, strangely enough, is the most common offense of women."

"They are caught because the stores are well organized to trap the passers of bad or worthless checks."

"These girls, as I have studied them in conducting them to prison, all have big hearts. Their trouble is that their hearts are too big, full of sympathy, full of yearning for the things that other girls have, full of generosity, so much so that they slip into the great pitfalls of life, but ignorant of the great social laws which require that we must earn honestly everything that we get."

In all lines of goods handled by warehouses in Egypt, Sudan and Syria.

170. Catalogs of tractors and farm implements are desired by rubber plantations in the Dutch East Indies. It is planned to cultivate rubber trees and to clear new ground, for which tractors, cultivators, and plows will be required.

171. Prepared leathers, lubricating oils, and lard. An agency is desired by a man in France for the sale of the above products. Quotations should be given c. i. f. French port. Payment on receipt of goods.

172. Woollens, textiles, boots, rubber goods, drugs, soap and hosiery. An American firm is about to send to Poland and Czechoslovakia one of its representatives to establish permanent agencies in those countries and wishes to obtain for him agencies for the sale of general merchandise such as the above articles. Reference.

173. Industrial chemicals. A firm in Argentina desires to get in touch with exporters of industrial chemicals used in the manufacture of soap, candles, tanning materials and especially palm oil, precipitate of sulphur, salic acid of soda (140 degrees, very white), caustic soda, bicarbonate of soda, chloride of lime, resin H, carbonate of potassium, talcum, caustic potash and tar. Quotations should be given c. i. f. Buenos Aires. Payment, cash against documents in Argentina. Reference.

174. Agricultural machinery, factory supplies and electrical goods. A firm in Brazil desires to secure an agency for the sale of the above lines. Reference.

175. Millinery, cotton pieces, foodstuffs, canned fruits, lard, flour, rice, paper, provisions, etc.

176. Rice, sugar, coffee, silks, cotton goods, laces, velvets, haberdashery, and a variety of writing and cigarette papers, hardware, galvanized sheet iron (urgently needed), enameled and galvanized articles, coloring matter, leather and skins, charcoal, anthracite, drugs, alcohol, agricultural machinery, plows, tractors, harvesting machines, glassware, steam and gas engines, cement, petroleum, mineral waters, machinery for plastering, for mills, for glass plate making, motors for spinning mills and other shops, electric motors for motion picture machines, and accessories, extra parts, rollers for gear making, automobiles, trucks and traction autos, of which there is an urgent demand. Importers in Turkey are in the market for the above products. Reference.

177. Textiles, dry goods, fancy goods, notions and specialties, wearing apparel, vehicles, leather, drugs, chemicals, iron and steel, metals, heavy hardware, machinery, general hardware and specialties, electrical supplies, rubber and steamship supplies, and brooms and brushes. My Heart and My Husband ADELE GARRISON'S New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

What Marge and Lillian Set Out to Do.

As the seconds wore on into minutes and there was no sound from the hall into which Mrs. Durkee and my mother-in-law had disappeared, my anxiety increased. Despite my knowledge of Mother Graham's innate sense of justice I was not so confident as was Dicky that she had followed Mrs. Durkee in order to bring the little woman to her senses. Might she not instead—my anxiety prompted me to ask—be employed in consoling with the other woman's grief?

I signaled my apprehension to Lillian, woman fashion, with a lifting of the eyebrows. She promptly seized my cue.

"Alf," she said with authority of long friendship, turning to him, "why don't you take Leila into the library for a few minutes and tell her the things that we all know you're dying to utter? Then by the time your mother comes back we'll all be ready for the happy ringing down of the curtain upon the fourth act."

Where Are They?

Alfred flashed her a grateful glance.

"Come on, sweetheart," he said tenderly, and without giving Leila time to assent or dissent, he hurried her masterfully out of the room.

As the door closed behind them Lillian rose, an air of decision enveloping her.

"I shall wait," said Mrs. Graham and Grandpaw Spencer ought to be able to take care of one baby for a few minutes," she drawled. "But I think you'd better stay with them, Marion. They might give her pickles or salad or something."

Little Marion giggled happily, as Mrs. Graham laid her hand on her restoration to her mother's favor as at the pleasant. It is an invariable practice of Lillian's to follow any reproach of Marion's with some pleasant quip to the child a few minutes later.

"I'll watch them, mother," she said. "Oh, you beautiful darling, you!" This apostrophe she directed to the baby, and was the last thing we heard as we left the room, Lillian following.

194. Principal importers and dealers in dry goods, clothing, millinery, notions, novelties, etc., in Cienfuegos, Cuba.

A representative of a large commission house, having offices in El Paso, Tex.; Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua, and Mexico City, Mexico, is in St. Louis to represent the sale of their goods in Mexico. The principal lines wanted are jute bags, paper and paper goods, enamel ware, automobile accessories, paints, glassware, shoes and shoe machinery. This firm has a force of 12 salesmen traveling throughout the northern part of Mexico and it contemplates appointing additional salesmen for each new line.

Miscellaneous Items.

The bureau has recently published a report on the lumber market in Italy and reconstruction requirements. Mexican Rebel Occupies Town of Reynosa, Mexico

Brownsville, Tex., Nov. 1.—Gen. Andrew Almazan, Mexican revolutionary commander, with about 70 of his men, occupied the town of Reynosa, Mex., opposite Hidalgo, Mex., according to reports here tonight. He met with no opposition, the Carranza soldiers in the Reynosa garrison having crossed to the Texas side. Reynosa is 60 miles west of Matamoros.

lian having "picked me up with her eyes" as we rose from the table. We found the living room deserted, and a hasty though stealthy survey of the other rooms discovered no trace of either woman.

We came down the back stairs to the kitchen, interrogated Katie in low voices.

"Sure, I see them," Katie said, a note of disgust in her voice. "They go out to the gardens behind rose hedge. That Mees Durkee, she cry and gulp, and that mother-in-law she keep saying, 'I know, I know, I have same ting vunce.'"

What matter that Mees Durkee, feel like that ven she goin' get such fine young lady like Mees Fairfax for daughter? What the vant, eh—Queen of Belgium? That woman she married already yet."

Behind the Hedge.

"You say they're in the garden?" I said sweetly, ignoring Katie's torrent of comment, and without further parley we left the house and took the path to the lake.

"Of course, Katie's been listening at the door again," I said nervously. "What I'm ever going to do with her I don't know. It seems, although nothing would break her of that habit."

"Do?" Lillian turned on me in amazement. "Do nothing but go down on your knees in thankfulness that she stays with you. I'm thinking seriously of carrying Betty's breakfast up to her bed for her if there's no other way of inducing her to stay. You know a housekeeper is absolutely indispensable to me, and I never could break another one in. But Betty's certainly feeling her oats in these days of high wages. And from all indications Katie seems no different than usual."

"No, she doesn't," I admitted. "Eavesdropping is no new thing with her."

"I should say it was a congenial defect," Lillian said dryly. "And if she has no thought of going out and making a million dollars in a minute I'd advise you to go slow on the discipline until this domestic help situation clears up a bit. It can't last long, but the atmosphere is dynamic just now."

"I know," I admitted. Then as the distant sound of voices came to us I clutched Lillian's arm, and like conspirators we moved up to the shelter of the rose hedge, from behind which the voices of my mother-in-law and Mrs. Durkee came in agitated conversation.

It was the second time that I had eavesdropped in the rose garden. The first time was an involuntary offense. But this time Lillian and I were listening deliberately, for we had known Mother Graham's attitude before we took a hand.

The Way Mrs. Durkee Made up to Leila Fairfax.

Oh! I know I'm a perfect fool, but I can't help it—I can't!"

Little Mrs. Durkee's voice rose in a wail strongly tinged with hysteria. In the shelter of the rose hedge secure from observation Lillian gripped my arm significantly. I knew that she was waiting as tensely as I for Mother Graham's reply, wondering whether her attitude would be toward Mrs. Durkee's unreasonable disapproval of her son's betrothal to Leila Fairfax.

"You are all of that," My mother-in-law's voice was grimly disregarding of giving offense as is generally characteristic of her. And it is all nonsense to say that you cannot help it. Sit down on that bench and get yourself together while I tell you something."

Lillian and I exchanged hopeful, amused glances. Evidently Mother Graham was "strictly on the job," as Dicky would say.

Wonderful Words.

"Oh!" Mrs. Durkee's childish voice held vast astonishment and more than a little resentful chagrin. We heard her bounce down on the seat with an angry rustling of silken draperies, very much as a bantam hen would ruffle her feathers at something which displeased her.

"Of course I might have known that you would be against me too," she said petulantly, and I knew just how her extremely pretty lips were pointing. Mrs. Durkee is one of the rarely fortunate women who preserve a certain youthful beauty far into late middle age and—who are fully aware of their good fortune.

"And I must confess that I don't expect it of you either," she went on, "after what you said on the way out here, about knowing all about it."

"Don't be an anointed idiot just because you know how, and can do it!" my mother-in-law rejoined tartly, and I grinned joyously at Lillian, as I recognized the phrase Mother Graham so often used in talking to Dicky and me. "Of course I know all about it, and I am not the least bit sorry why I'm trying to prevent you from making the same mistake I did, although if you must have the truth, I have never humiliated my son in the public way that you did yours this afternoon. But I objected, so strongly to Richard's marrying Margaret that I said things which I am afraid Richard will never forget. He has never seemed quite so near to me since. And now that I have learned that Margaret is exactly the wife for Richard, I would give a good deal to unsay the things I uttered at the time of their marriage."

A Swift Retreat.

"You ought to know, having once had a mother-in-law yourself," went on my mother-in-law, with relentless logic, "that the wife, if she be even ordinarily lovable always has the inside track."

"You can just bet I do," replied little Mrs. Durkee. "I had the most cantankerous old dame you ever set your eyes on, but I managed it so that she never succeeded in interfering between my husband and me, although she tried it often enough, goodness knows. But I had my own way in everything."

"And Leila Fairfax will do the same thing, you mark my word," retorted my mother-in-law. "Alfred will simply eat out of her hand. So if you don't want her—and incidentally your son—to regard you as a 'cantankerous old dame,' I would advise you—"

"Oh!" Mrs. Durkee capitulated swiftly, entirely, at the dismal picture my mother-in-law had so deftly painted. "I hadn't thought of it that way. Do you suppose Alf will forgive me?"

"Beat it, quick!" Lillian whispered in my ear, and noiselessly, swiftly, we skimmed back over the grassy path, entered the house breathlessly, and then hugged each other ecstatically.

"You find Alf and Leila in the library," Lillian said a second later. "Better tip them off and get them back into the dining room, so every thing will be as it was when Mrs. Durkee flew the coop."

I obeyed her and when Mother Graham and Mrs. Durkee—the latter flushed and "crazy" round the lashes—appeared in the doorway, we were all chattering busily.

The men of course sprang to their feet, but Alfred Durkee did not go to meet his mother. Instead he stood rather grimly watching until she, with but a single appealing glance at him, went straight to Leila Fairfax and put her arms around the girl's slender figure.

"My dear," she said with charming loveliness which always endears little Mrs. Durkee's friends to her, the same mistake I did, although if you must have the truth, I have never humiliated my son in the public way that you did yours this afternoon. But I objected, so strongly to Richard's marrying Margaret that I said things which I am afraid Richard will never forget. He has never seemed quite so near to me since. And now that I have learned that Margaret is exactly the wife for Richard, I would give a good deal to unsay the things I uttered at the time of their marriage."

"Exactly the wife for Richard," For a moment while the wonderful words poured over my consciousness, I forgot our errand, everything save the blessed fact that a wound, long hidden, yet none the less painful, had been suddenly healed. I had long known that my mother-in-law under all her grimness had a very sincere affection for me. But that she approved of me, was fully contented with Dicky's choice, was news most grateful to me.

Lelia's answer was smothered in the big bear hug with which Alfred Durkee enveloped them both, and in which I knew all bitterness against his mother had been swallowed up.

Fatness Kills 31,000 Yearly
Fat is fatal to health and personality. It is estimated that over 31,000 persons have died each year in the past decade long before their allotted span of life, through the effects of excessive fatness.

Any overcast man or woman is carrying unhealthy adiposity that is pressing against and injuring vital organs of the body. The heart, that delicate human apparatus, becomes congested. In numerous cases there are dangerous gatherings of packed-in fat around the throat, stomach, liver and other delicate parts.

Through overeating the individual soon well apparently well is liable to nervousness, neurasthenia, physical or mental collapse, and other disorders. Obesity is irritating. Cases of heart failure, apoplexy, aneurysm, etc., are frequently caused by excessive fatness. Fat persons are particularly victims of accidents and are especially liable to heart disease and other such drastic infirmities, so strenuous exercise, no starvation; indeed, you may eat all you need. The human system is a delicate balance. There is a right and a wrong way of eating. The right way is to eat a case of slow suicide for you to kill yourself a good many times over. It is a tragedy that you should be so easily deceived by the burden of unhealthily, unattractively fat.

By reducing now you may expect greater contentment, happiness, increased mental and physical efficiency, better health and a longer life. Be fair to yourself and to those who love you. Renew your vigor, vitality and surpassingly superior personality. Get out of your fat condition and get into a slim condition. This is a system of diet and exercise at the drug store without delay; or for more convenient, send for a copy of the book, "How to Lose Weight," by Dr. Korrin G., N.M.D., Station 9, New York, N.Y.
