Be Young In Body, Mind and Looks Despite Your Years

How often you have wished that you could indulge in the strenuous exercise of out door sports with the vigor and enthusiasm of youth! But the end of the week finds you all in—you are tired, listless and lack the energy to go out for a vigorous walk or any other exercise that requires much physical exertion. Many a man, even in his middle forties, has a vague feeling that he is "getting old"—and right at a time when he should be at his very best physically.

And he is growing old, not in the sense that the years are pressing heavily upon him—but in the sense that his vital forces are wasting away faster than Nature replaces the worn out tissues.

Thousands—yes millions—of people find themselves in this condition early in life. And there is no excuse for it. You can check that tendency to grow old. You can carry your youth with its joys and enthusiasm into your 70's and 80's. But you must give Nature all the help you can. The best assistance you can find—assistance of a sound, constructive character is in the use of

My Heart and My Husband
ADELE GARRISON'S New Phase of
"Revelations of a Wife"

What Lillian Underwood Compelled Adele to do.

Here never known more peaceful days than those of the summer months following Junior's birthday fête, which ended so auspiciously for the happiness of Alfred Durkee and Lillian Fairfax.

Only the closing of the school disturbed the placid monotony of the days, and that held no unexpected element, was simply a matter of tiresome routine which Alice Holcombe and I managed to dispose of without friction or outspoken criticism from the school board.

With Lillian and her small daughter domiciled at Mrs. Durkee's next door, I resolutely put from my mind all fear of any unpleasantness for me which might ensue from the campaign against Kenneth Stockbridge by his dead wife's relatives, a campaign of which I strongly suspected the sinister appearing man who had called upon me to be a part. Lillian is always like a solid rock of reassurance to me. I felt childishly that nothing could happen while she was my next door neighbor.

Only one thing clouded the utter indolent contentment in which I spent the first three weeks of my vacation, and that was my knowledge of the intense suffering which Alice Holcombe was undergoing because of the continued incarceration in the county jail of Kenneth Stockbridge, charged with having murdered his wife. But as the days wore on I found myself with an inward protest at my own selfishness, adopting a view of the matter which Lillian and Dicky kept forcing on me.

"Look here, lady," Lillian said one day shortly after school closed when I was expressing my sympathy for Alice, "if you don't quit trying to carry the weight of the world on your shoulders we're going to walk slow behind you pretty soon with nice little wreaths in our hands."

A Lazy Program.

"Why! Why!" I stammered. "I'm perfectly all right!" "Yes you are," she scoffed. "You are about as near a nervous breakdown as anybody I ever saw. I wouldn't tell you this only somebody's got to make you take care of yourself, and I fancy I am the goat. Remember, child, you've been under a pretty stiff strain for a long time, since Dicky joined the aviation corps. And the melodrama at Bayview hasn't helped things along any."

"Well, at least I'm not going back there next year," I protested feebly. "For which small exhibition of your common sense Allah be praised," retorted Lillian. "But that doesn't alter the fact that you are pretty nearly at the end of your tether. You're thin, hollow-eyed and pale, the mere ghost of yourself. Oh! we've all been talking you over, Dicky, his mother, your father and your humble servant, and we've decided that you need absolute rest, lying around in the sunshine, reading in a hammock, evening motor rides and things like that until you're built up again."

"Sounds like a nice busy attractive program," I said appreciatively.

Dicky's Suggestion.

"It is," Lillian rejoined, "but you've got to put Alice Holcombe and her troubles out of your mind first. Worrying about it won't do her or Mr. Stockbridge one bit of good, and you'll only get yourself into such a state that if there came a chance to do them any real service you would not be in either the mental or the physical condition to render it."

"I suppose you are right," I returned meekly, "and I will do my best."

"You'll do better than that if I have any say in the matter," Lillian retorted.

I found it very pleasant to be back and be petted and coddled for awhile. Dicky was my devoted cavalier, and I knew from his manner that he was really worried about me. I was more fatigued mentally and physically than I had realized, and it was several weeks before I began to get back my ambition. But at last I grew tired of inaction, no matter how luxuriously padded, and I expressed my restlessness to Dicky one afternoon when he had come home early and was reading to me as I lay in the hammock.

"Dicky," I said suddenly, putting out my hand and pulling the book away from his gaze, "Please stop reading a minute."

"Anything to please," Dicky rejoined promptly, an then with a shrewd glance at me, "What's on your mind old dear?"

"Don't you think I've been on the shelf long enough?" I asked.

"Oh—Ho!" he rejoined. "Beginning to sit up and take notice, aren't you well? Well, now let's see what the doctor would better prescribe. I'm going to take you away after a little, but I can't go just yet. I have it!"

"How would you like to run the car with me as the teacher?"

The Story of a Turrot Captain

Promotion in the Navy comes quickly to those who qualify for higher ratings. In March 1919 A. P. Nisison enlisted in the Navy as an Apprentice Seaman, 3rd class. In April 1919 he was rated Chief Turrot Captain. His pay today is $146.76 per month.

A man's life — among men!

REEL them off—"Rio", Gibraltar, Ceylon, Yokohama—all the great ports of the world—are they only places on the map to you—or are they ports where you've gone sailing in from the high seas with every eye along the shore turned admiringly on your big ship—your ship!

Are the great world ports nothing to you but little red spots in your school geography, or are they real towns whose funny streets you've walked—whose strange sights you've seen—whose magnificence you've admired—towns in which you've greeted the world's sailor men from the Seven Seas?

Make each port you visit mean another big experience. Curious spots, beautiful spots, ugly spots, famous spots, and every one of them more interesting to see than anything you ever read about in all your life. Every ocean has a United States ship sailing for some port worth seeing.

If you've any call in you for a full life—join, and color all your years ahead with memories of things worth seeing—with knowledge worth having—with an inexhaustible fund of sea tales and adventures picked up ashore and afloat that will make you a welcome man in any company.

Compare such a personality with that of men who are content to just stick around all their days and see nothing. Boy!

Work?—sure, and a man's work it is, among men.

Play?—well, rather, with a bunch of men who know how to play. These comrades of yours carry in their ears the sounds of great world cities, of booming guns, of swashing seas—sounds you will share with them and that will never die away.

And when you come home, you'll face life ashore with level eyes—for Uncle Sam trains in self-reliance as well as self-respect. The Navy builds straight men—no mollycoddles.

Enlist for two years. Excellent opportunities for advancement. Four weeks holidays with pay each year. Shore leave to see inland sights at ports visited. Men always learning. Good food and first uniform outfit free. Pay begins the day you enlist. Get full information from your nearest recruiting station. If you do not know where the nearest recruiting station is, ask your postmaster. He knows.
