My HEART and My HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife.

What Mother Graham Had to Add to Dicky's Plan.

I did not know whether I was pleased or sorry at Dicky's suggestion that he teach me to run the car as a snafu for my ennuï.

But, of course there was only one reply to make to my husband. I made it so promptly that I am sure that he did not suspect the mental intrusion which had preceded it.

"Oh, I'd love it, Dicky!" I exclaimed. "When can we start?" "This minute," he returned, a little to my discomfiture, for I had not expected so prompt a response from my naturally indolent husband.

"But I'm not dressed," I protested, looking down at the fluffiest negligee which I was wearing. "You can be by the time I get the car around," Dicky informed me coolly, getting up from the chair and depositing the book he had been reading upon the ground in his usual careless fashion.

"On the contrary," I returned demurely, "I think I shall put on my prettiest things, so tomorrow morning's newspapers will describe me as 'exquisitely dressed.'"

"I should hope not," I countered gayly. "This isn't Turkey, you know." "If you don't hustle and get dressed," Dicky retorted threateningly, "I'll stage a marital discipline act that will make a Turkish husband hide his head in shame because he hadn't thought of it."

I threw him a kiss and hurried across the lawn to the house, my spirits unaccountably high. The prospect of anything new always allures me, and this proposed outing with Dicky quite thrilled me.

"Where are you going in such a hurry?" she demanded. "I had noticed since morning that it was one of her 'off days,' as Dicky expresses it, and felt in my bones that I was in for a disagreeable moment or two."

"Why! Dicky wants me to go out with him in the car," I returned, warily concealing the fact that he wished to teach me to run it. "When my mother-in-law is in one of her temperamental moods we all make up our communications with her as near the scriptural 'yea, yea and nay, nay' as we can possibly manage."

"It's a wonder he'd think of anything except dawdling around and reading trashy novels," she retorted tartly, this shot being directed at the romance with which Dicky had been regaling me.

"Prudently made no reply to this speech and after a little pause she began again querulously. 'Well! Margaret, I hope you will never live to see the day when you will sit by the fire day by day while the young people of your house take their pleasure, regardless of your wishes.'"

"As the day was a torrid one this pathetic speech with its reference to sitting by the fire did not affect me except with apprehension as to my mother-in-law's next procedure. For its tenor indicated one of her teary, martyred moods, and those are things devoutly to be avoided if possible."

"Nonsense, mother!" I said cheerily. "You know that Richard and I always see to it that you share in our pleasures." "She threw up her head haughtily in a quick transition of mood. 'If that to be the case, then you will, of course, not object to my presence and that of Richard Second in your proposed drive,' she said."

MORE RIOTERS ARE INDICTED BY THE GRAND JURY

Total of 117 Now Reported—Body to Adjourn Saturday, Says the Foreman.

Twelve new indictments were returned by the special grand jury yesterday. Six of them were made public, the others being kept secret in order to make arrests.

Ten men are named on the six indictments made public. Four of these are negroes, charged with breaking and entering the store of Lee Adams, on the night of the riot, and stealing a number of guns and ammunition to a total value of $1,636.

Those accused of this crime are Clem Vaughan, Joe Stewart, Rufus Ayres and Linwood Wright. The loot included 30 shotguns, 80 revolvers, three automatic pistols, six handguns, eight rifles and $250 worth of ammunition.

Assaulted Policeman. Victor Teraski and William Miller are charged with assault and battery on a policeman and rioting. The former is also charged on another indictment with petit larceny in stealing a pair of shoes from the store of Rosenbaum Brothers, 1314 Douglas street. Miller is also accused of assaulting Policeman Ernest C. Robey the night of the riot.

One indictment was returned for a crime committed October 28. Ralph Underwood is charged with assault with criminal intent, his alleged victim being Hannah Pillard, 2516 North Nineteenth street.

The grand jury which has now been in session for four weeks will adjourn at the end of this week, according to Foreman John W. Towle. It adjourned for the day at 3:30 yesterday to allow jurors to vote.

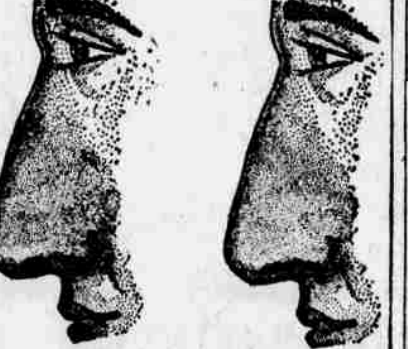

117 Indictments Now. The jury began its sittings October 8, and has been at work six hours a day and six days a week since that time. It has returned 117 indictments, most of them against persons accused of being implicated in the riots at the court house when the building was badly damaged by fire, and a negro, Will Brown, was lynched.

Claude L. Netlaway, real estate man, 8013 North Thirtieth street, was released yesterday by District Judge Redick under $6,500 bond to await trial on two indictments returned against him by the grand jury.

Netlaway was arrested the day after the riot and has been in the county jail for five weeks. He was indicted last Friday. One charge against him is conspiracy to commit the murder of Will Brown, the negro lynched the night of the riot. The other charge is unlawful assemblage and rioting. His bond was fixed at $5,000 on the first charge and $1,500 on the second. Louis Bergelt of Florence is surety for Mr. Netlaway.

Louis Weinberg, indicted on the charge of rioting, was released under $1,500 bond by District Judge Redick yesterday. His surety is Ben Handler. Richard Dahir was also released by Judge Redick under $1,500 bond to await trial on the charge of unlawful assemblage and rioting.

Noses and Throats Freed of Catarrh!

Hundreds of noses and throats all over this country from Maine to California have been freed from Catarrh with all its annoying features. These noses and throats were just bad cases of them. They had bothered their owners for long periods. The noses had been stopped up—crusts formed—mucus gathered and made discharges which had to be constantly blown out on handkerchiefs.

Some of the current mucus dropped into the throats belonging to the above noses and made them raw and sore, with an annoying constant tickling sensation. Little wonder that the same accompanying these noses and throats became watery, and weak—the breaths foul and the sense of smell gradually disappeared.

But what a change has come over these same noses and throats through the Method of treatment originated by Catarrh Specialist Sprule, 122 Trade Building, Boston. They become once again the clear, sweet, useful portions of the body their Creator intended. All the loathsome mucus disappears, because there is no more inflammation and Catarrh germs to cause it. The eyes, the nose, the throat become free and clear. Those stupid dull feelings vanish—and the happy individuals meet their friends frankly grateful they need no longer worry over what serious thing their Catarrh is going to develop into.

LIQUOR STILL IS FOUND IN HOME, POLICE CHARGE

Man is Arrested and Ordered Held for the Federal Authorities—Complete Outfit Seized.

One of the most complete liquor stills unearthed by Omaha police was found in the basement of the home of John Pearson, 2120 Harney street, Monday afternoon, according to police. Pearson was arrested for unlawful possession of liquor and was ordered held for federal authorities. Joe Caniger, 1118 South Sixth street, who was in Pearson's home at the time of the raid by four detectives, was booked for investigation.

"A full-fledged still" was found in the place, is the report made by police of the raid. It was discovered that a barrel, cut in twain, had been converted into a still and was partly filled with malt. The rest of the complete outfit consisted of a bottle corker, several feet of rubber hose, jugs and bottles, police say. Several kegs and bottles contained various kinds of liquors that had been made by the still, the police report states. Quantities of mash were also found in open jugs, it is charged.
