CLUBBING

TING-A-LING rang the telephone. "Club editor, please. Who is general federation director from Nebraska?"

"Mrs. M. D. Cameron of Omaha." "Then what is Mrs. A. E. Sheldon of Lincoln?"

"Director-elect."

This conversation explains a point about which there has been some confusion. Mrs. M. D. Cameron's term of office as director holds until after the biennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Des Moines next June. This point is of special interest in Omaha because of the general federation council meeting, which will be held here next January by invitation extended by Mrs. Cameron personally in behalf of Omaha.

A luncheon was given for all members of the Woman's club of Neight last Monday. This club has opened its doors to every woman interested in club work. Departments in legislation, art, home economics and literature are to be established.

Child Welfare.

"The child welfare bill passed by the last legislature is a good one," said Miss Harriet Towne, who is in Omaha attending meetings of the Nebraska State Teachers' association. Miss Towne is supervisor of vocational guidance for girls in Lincoln. "The code commission is going about its task in a systematic way to work up the problem just as it pertains to this state. Their first work will be a study of the code commissions of the various states and then, if funds permit, a survey will be made and growing out of that legislation will be framed to help the children of our state." This commission has a membership of 15 and Omaha is well represented on it both in number and quality of the personnel.

Miss Towne believes in school lunches, but thinks children should pay for them so far as they are able. Miss Mary E. Foster of Omaha, director of vocation bureau for boys and girls, similar to that of Miss Towne. The welfare of the child is their chief aim, keeping him in school as long as possible, finding employment when he needs it, helping enforce the compulsory education and child labor laws, investigating industrial conditions, hazards and salaries. Miss Towne says vocational work is a very strong factor in present-day education.

Needlework Guild.

The Omaha branch of the Needlework Guild of America met Wednesday morning and elected officers for the coming year. Mrs. M. B. Newman was chosen president, Mrs. W. W. Carmichael vice president, Mrs. T. H. Tracy secretary and Mrs. George J. Henderson treasurer.

To Put on Toast.

Mince a cupful of ham and small onion, add one cupful stewed tomatoes (thick) or three tomatoes pared and chopped—in season—and pepper and salt to taste; melt a little butter in the saucepan, not allowing it to brown, add the mixture, stir until hot, stir in a well-beaten egg, cook until the egg is done and serve at once on hot buttered toast. The onion may be omitted if not liked.

Mince-meat.

Three bowls beef (chopped), six bowls apples (chopped), two tablespoons salt, one tablespoon nutmeg, one tablespoon cinnamon, one tablespoon cloves, two pounds raisins, one pound currants, the juice and rind of two lemons, two bowls sugar, one bowl molasses, two bowls liquor in which meat was boiled, one cup chopped suet. Cook slowly two hours.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Loves Comes Unbidden and, "To Love or Not We Are No More Free Than the Ripple to Rise and Leave the Sea."

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How to Win Love.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: There is a boy that I think quite a bit of, but he doesn't seem to care for me. How can I make him care for me?

Now, Miss Fairfax, there is another boy that tells me he loves me but I don't care for him. Please tell me what I should do.

What a wonderful person I would be were I able to regulate such cases as yours. The problem is almost as old as Adam. Be honest with the boy you do not care for, and be your own best, true self with the boy you do like. You will then have your own self-respect, and perhaps when you are older the difficulties will smooth themselves out for you.

Deathbed Promise.

Dear Miss Fairfax: Several years ago I made a deathbed promise which at the time appeared to me of little significance. At the time I could not imagine myself doing other than religiously adhering to this pledge, which was made to my mother. The pledge was that I would not marry until my three sisters were provided for. I might add that one of these sisters is self-supporting—an employe of the city. Since the promise was made I have met a girl whom I love deeply. She loves me and is willing to make any sacrifice for my happiness. My problem is obvious, but I cannot answer it myself. Either I must break my vow or I face an unhappy life myself and for my happiness. I love. I have reasoned that this was a promise made under duress, but I get no comfort from such logic. I would advise me to break my promise should be made to a dying woman if by doing it one might make the dying one happier. Yet this does not ease my conscience. Will you or some of your readers help me? I have not taken my troubles to my close friends, for I know they would advise me to break my pledge. My pastor has responded that "a promise is a promise." I want the advice of disinterested persons. My query: Must such a deathbed promise be kept? J. D.

A promise is a promise, of course, but here is the point: One sister is self-supporting. How about the could find out if he really likes me or not? Another thing, do you really think that there are any boys left in the world who would appreciate a nice clean girl for a friend. Why is it that most boys pick on the girl who is not very careful of her reputation? I try to live a clean life and yet I know how to have a good time when the chance is given me. Many times my girl friends and I have sat on the front porch and talked when we knew that the boys we really liked were out with some girls just a little swifter than we. Now, Miss Fairfax, do you really think that we will be paid later on for not having so many beaux now while we are in high school? One trouble, there are about two or three girls to every boy in high school and the boys generally get to do the picking. Hoping that you may give me a little advice, I remain,

LONELY JUNIOR.

Consider this boy a good friend and let it go at that. You are both too young to be serious. It would bring you sorrow later. Indeed, you will be rewarded for your clean living. Just remember that while you are getting your education and foundation for a worth while life the flirts are wasting the most precious moments. The modest girls go about their business and build and build and nobody is commenting unfavorably, but later the flirts will fall back and the "clear stars" will shine.

A Broken Engagement.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a girl 17 years old. I graduated from high school last spring. I am staying at home this winter helping on the farm. I am the youngest of the family and have two brothers at home. I have kept steady company with a young man over 20 years old for nine months. I went to a dance with him on Friday night and he asked me to go to a dance Saturday night, but I couldn't go, so he said, as usual, he would see me Sunday night. He didn't come. I haven't seen him since. Don't you think it is best for me not to get offended at all than to get real peeved? I think I am too young to get peeved at anything like that. Do you think he did that because he wanted to quit going with me? If he doesn't apologize, should I turn him down if he asks me to go next Sunday night. Yours truly, FAITHFUL.

Pay no attention to his absence. Act as though you missed him, but only as a friend. You are too young to take him seriously. Your life partner is evidently elsewhere, so why waste any love on this one? Don't scold him. This would be the best evidence that you cared. Let him know, in a quiet but firm manner, that he cannot break engagements—your evenings can be filled more profitably than waiting for one who has such bad manners as to stay away without even telephoning.

The Tug of Life and Death

Two warring forces—the red blood cells and the white blood cells—are always contending for mastery—in the blood. They are the processes of building up and tearing down. During youth the building-up process of the red blood cells is in the ascendency so that the tendency of the body is all towards growth and development. As middle age approaches the two forces tend to equality while with the coming of old age, the victory of the tearing down process of the white blood cells is manifested by the slow, gradual decay of the vital energies.
