

WHERE WILLIAM PENN WORSHIPPED: A 17TH CENTURY QUAKER MEETING HOUSE

The "Blue Idol," a 17th Century Quaker Meeting House in Coolham, Sussex, England, Where William Penn Worshipped for 10 Years.

It Is Being Renovated by the Voluntary Labors of a Party of Quakers Who Lived in a Summer Camp in the Village.

The Meeting House, Which Is Still Used for Worship, Is in Its Original State, Except for an Excess of Whitewash on the Old Oak Beams.

SPEAKING OF NAMES: A GROUSE SHOOT ON BLUBBERHOUSE MOOR, YORKSHIRE ENGLAND

"My Word!" Here is the Shooting Party of Lord Faber Leaving the Luncheon House on Blubberhouse Moor, Orley, Yorkshire, England.

And at Lord Lovedale's Party Miss Phyllis Egerton Assisted Her Father, the Hon. Capt. Francis Egerton, to Bring in the Birds.

This Is the Party of the Hon. J. G. Murray on the Same Moor with the Long, Long Name.

The Hon. J. G. Murray and Party Laying Out the Bag of Ferocious Birds They Had Shot.

The Hon. Capt. Sir Algernon Osborn at the Butts on the Third Beat, Evidently Watching to See That None of the Birds Attacked the Guests.