

NEW INDUSTRIES ARE PLANNING TO BUILD IN OMAHA

Carter Sheet Metal Co. Putting Up Factory—Big Paper Mill Company Coming Here.

Unusual industrial activities for the lateness of the season are reported by the bureau of the Chamber of Commerce.

Plans for a large factory for the Carter Sheet Metal company, present location 108 South Tenth street, have been completed, and construction work will begin at once.

The new location is at Thirteenth and Grace streets. Cost of the new building is estimated at $50,000.

Manager Gillan of the bureau also announced yesterday that the head of a great eastern paper mill would arrive in Omaha some time this week, looking for a location on which to build a large factory building.

It is known that more than a score of eastern industries are planning on placing branches in Omaha in the near future.

The paper mill factory will furnish employment for at least 100 people, Mr. Gillan says, and the building which the company plans to construct will represent an outlay of more than $100,000.

The new concern will produce principally straw board, an important material for packing.

OMAHA WILL GET NEW YORK MAIL WITHIN 16 HOURS

Proposed Aerial Service Beats Trains by Whole Day.

Omaha will receive mail from New York in 23 hours and 10 minutes shorter time, when aerial mail service is extended here, than it is now receiving it by trains, according to schedules given out yesterday by Assistant Commissioner Ellis, of the Chamber of Commerce.

At present 38 hours and 20 minutes are required by the railroads to deliver mail to New York.

The aerial mail will bring mail from the Atlantic seaboard in 15 hours and 30 minutes, if present schedules are carried out.

Twelve hours and 45 minutes are required by the railroads to bring mail from Chicago to Omaha, while aerial mail will deliver mail within five hours and 30 minutes.

The shortening of time required to deliver mail to New York will mean a great increase in bank clearings to local banks, it is said.

Two cases of picked pockets were reported to police yesterday, N. P. Crisman of Whiting, Ia., told police that he got on a Dundee street car with $20 in cash and a certified draft for $50 in his pocket, but that when he left the car downtown, he had been robbed.

Charles B. Huff of Provo, S. D., reported that he had been robbed of $60 which he was carrying in his pocket in a shot sack.

One indictment was returned by the district court grand jury yesterday. The name was not given out, pending the arrest.

a glorious mile or two, during which I for the first time felt that it was like to have a powerful machine obeying the slightest touch of one's fingers.

Naturally the car wobbled all over the road at first, Dicky declaring that our tracks would look like a "soused-to-the-guards-flivver," but before long I managed to keep respectfully to the side of the road.

No sooner had I accomplished this than Dicky insisted that I learn how to start and stop the car.

But I soon saw that I would never be able to learn anything about motor driving from my husband. He has not the faculty of imparting knowledge, and his cocksureness kept him from granting the request I repeatedly made to let me learn by asking him questions.

"What rot!" he finally stormed. "Just because you're a history shark you think you have the only patented system for teaching anything. You're just obstinate, that's all. Now, once for all, take that wheel and start the car."

With every faculty fixed upon the instructions he had given me I managed to get the car started and ran along for some rods smoothly. Then from around a bush-screened corner just ahead of us rolled a magnificent big touring car.

To my frightened eyes it seemed headed straight for me. I gave the wheel a sudden twist, and to my horror shot almost directly toward the car instead of away from it.

And in that moment of terror I saw in the driver's seat of the other car the man whom last I had seen blind and helpless—Mr. Hugh Grantland.

What Happened When Dicky Tried to Teach Madge to Drive.

Put your foot there! No, not on that one, the other one. Now press hard.

I felt sure that I had followed Dicky's instructions implicitly. But the car instead of proceeding along the road in a lady-like manner as it had done under Dicky's guidance, shot forward like a piece of shrapnel, and making almost a complete half-turn, climbed the bank at the side of the road and started into an open field.

I felt Dicky's foot shoving mine from the lever against which I was pushing, saw his hands tugging at the wheel, held my breath at the danger of the car's turning over, which even my inexperienced eyes saw.

Dicky did not speak until he had dashed his hand across his forehead, which I saw was wet with perspiration and broke loose.

"For the love of Mike what did you think you were doing? This car isn't trained for any acrobatic stunts like that. What did you do anyway?"

I gulped back my fright, for I wished to salvage a bit of praise from the wreck of Dicky's opinion of my abilities.

"If I knew what I did I probably wouldn't have done it," I said demurely.

Dicky stared at me a moment I think in uncertainty whether to laugh or frown. But his natural good nature won the day, and he threw back his head with one of the heartiest laughs.

"That's as good a specimen of an Iberian bovine as I ever heard," he said when he recovered his breath.

"But you certainly balled things up for fair. What's the matter—can't you understand what I'm telling you?"

His tone expressed keen disappointment. I took my courage in both hands and touched his arm pleadingly.

"Promise to listen without interruption?" I asked.

He looked at me shrewdly.

"Sure thing," he said.

Memory Aid.

"I hardly know how to say it," I began, "but if you'd just go on the assumption that I haven't a bit of mentality where machinery is concerned I think I'd get along better. And—and—if you'd attend to all of those bewildering foot things at first and just let me learn to guide the car I think I'd get along much better."

"No, you wouldn't," Dicky returned obstinately. "That isn't the way to learn at all. You have to begin at the foundation. I know what's the trouble. You haven't remembered that stuff I was telling you on the way up."

"If I repeat most of it for you you will let me have my way about learning?"

"Sure thing," Dicky said confidently, and I repressed a mischievous smile, for my husband has never happened to be present when I have exercised the trained memory which my friends tell me is remarkable, and which I owe entirely to my mother's odd but efficient system of training.

"That's a bargain now," I repeated insistently. "Now listen, and correct me where I am wrong."

It was a mere parrot-like repetition of Dicky's monologue which I gave back to him, but I tried my best to make it appear something more. Wherever I had the faintest glimmer of what it was all about, I broke off and asked some simple question. Dicky listened, amazement growing in his face, and when I had finished he snatched his cap off and bowed profoundly.

"Well! I've got to slip it to you," he said. "I'd have sworn you didn't remember a thing the way you took that car up the bank. And I'll stick to my word. You can start on the steering, but I warn you I shant let you stick it out long. You've got it all down, too pat for that. It would be a shame not to make you do the other things right away."

He kept his promise, however, for

OUR NEW FOURTH FLOOR

The new Toy Town, which by far surpasses any Toy Department Omaha has ever had, in variety and stocks, has almost reached the stage of completion.

Whipping things in shape so that Old Santa will have a generous selection of toys for the little boys and girls of Omaha is quite some job—but nevertheless our efforts will be rewarded, at least we have bright hopes that the want of every little boy and girl will be fulfilled here and by no means unsatisfactorily.

It's even a delight for the grownups to see the magnificent assortment of wonderful toys. The greatest ingenuity of the times is shown here.
